Terrific Heat Siege at a Climax.

Thousands in Chicago Made Desperate Clamor to Rent Bathing Suits.

List of Deaths is Increased; no Relief in Sight, Says the Weather Man.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 29.—Reports to the Coroner and police up to o'clock tonight show that 154 persons perished of heat in Chicago in the last three days—the worst days, so far, of this terrific siege. Of this number 130 have died in the last forty-eight hours. In addition, the Coroner says forty-eight babies have died directly of heat in the last twenty-four hours. Records show but thirty-seven deaths of adults today and this is due to the fact that it was a half-holiday and work of all kinds was reduced to the minimum. All the stores and factories dismissed all but a skeleton of their forces. There was a tremendous rush to the beaches and parks and boats and trains for Michigan and Wisconsin were crowded to the limit. At one of the beaches 25,000 persons, standing in line waiting a chance to rent bathing suits, started a riot that was serious for a time. Forty thousand persons were already in the water and on the beaches at this point and no more could safely be admitted. The late comers, however, swept aside the guards, trampled down the turnstiles, uprooted steel stanchions holding the gates, trampling women and tearing off clothing. Many women were carried away unconscious and more or less seriously injured.

NO RELIEF IN SIGHT.

The most alarming feature of the unprecedented situation was that no relief is in sight. There is a fair chance that a cool wave now progressing westward through North Dakota and touching Western Minnesota tonight, may arrive here Monday evening. Granting that it last that long, weather forecasters say it will be worn down to a mild zephyr with no force. Weather officials say the deadly heat is likely to continue for at least another week. If this prediction is fulfilled the death list in Chicago will reach still greater figures as the public, exhausted by hot, sleepless nights, have no vitality to withstand a long siege. Last night was the hottest on record in this city. There was no semblance of a breeze and the dead air was stifling.

The present heat wave is almost without precedent. It extends from the Alleghenies to the Rocky Mountains and from the Ohio River to COMMENT ON THE SITUATION.

The allied offensive continues. The major successes are credited now in all the dispatches to the Russians. The checkerboard of the war reiterates that the decisive battle of the whole war may be fought in the east. There is growing evidence that the peoples of Europe and the United Kingdom are growing sick and tired of war and Earl Brassey is of opinion that when the totality of the horror once dawns on them peace will come with the swiftness and suddenness of a typhoon.

The Mexican situation is obviously easing up. A telegram from Obregon denies that the Carranzista government contemplates an attack against Cantu at Mexicali. The evidence is accumulating that the Mexican storm may be said to be over.

Ruling of Washington is Likely to Change Plans of Capt. Koenig.

General Understanding that the Merchant U-Boat will Depart Today.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, July 29.—Special protection for the German merchant submarine Deutschland when she starts out of American territorial waters was asked of the American government late today, with the intimation that the boat would leave Baltimore some time tomorrow. After conferences between State, Treasury and Navy department officials it was ruled that no extraordinary precautions could be ordered, because the United States views the Deutschland as an ordinary merchantman.

Officials of the State Department held that while American neutrality must be fully safeguarded, it would be a bad precedent for the government to convoy or accord any other unusual attention to a vessel which can be rated only as a merchantman.

Precautions already have been taken to see that the submarine is not molested within the three-mile limit.

NEW ORLEANS, July 29.—The German submarine Bremen is tonight lying off the mouth of the Mississippi river, according to reports received from Port Eads and Pilottown, the two lowest spots on the Mississippi River. Whether the boat will enter the river tomorrow or not is not certain tonight, since she is too far out to be spoken. Pilots, however, reported her presence off the mouth of the river and brought the first news. The pilots are sure that they are not mistaken. However neither Pilottown nor the government wireless will confirm the arrival of the German boat.

BALTIMORE, July 29.—In spite of the fact that, according to all the prophets of hereabouts, he should have been out to sea long ago facing the perils which the warships of the allies and which the old Atlantic may have in store for him, Capt. Paul Koenig of the Deutschland remains in Baltimore, as good-humored and as imperturbable as ever.

Capt. Koenig, for all he may be worried about the Bremen's nonarrival, shot a fat joke into the assembled reporters this morning. He was stormed by them as he came out of the office at the pier after a conference with Capt. Hinsch, Paul Hilken and others.

"When do we leave?" he grinned. "Well, if any of you men from New York want to go there tomorrow to attend church, we'll go today just to oblige you."

In the roar which followed he made his escape, coming to the central part of the city by motor car.

Henry Hilken, senior member of the Eastern Forwarding Company, admitted today that neither he nor Capt. Koenig nor Capt. Hinsch had any information of the submarine Bremen. "We have heard nothing from her," said Mr. Hilken, "since she left Germany."

Shore leave was refused to the Deutschland's crew this morning and the Timmins changed its position at the Andre-street pier after a conference was held early by Paul Hilken, Capt. Frederick Hinsch, Capt. Zach Cullison and Capt. Koenig. But astute folk are convinced that sunset will see the Deutschland still snuggling behind the screen of barges, and, further, that it will not go out until word comes from the Bremen.

The morning sun had just risen when Capt. Koenig, Capt. Hinsch and Paul G. L. Hilken, junior member of the Eastern Forwarding Company, local agent for the submarine, met in the first of several conferences. There were several additional conferences and, while the belief is that final preparations for the departure of the U-boat were discussed, no one would confirm or deny this.

KOENIG MEETS HINSCH.

About 9:30 o'clock Capt. Koenig suddenly left the superstructure of the Deutschland and met Capt. Hinsch on the pier. Together the two captains hurried up Andre street, where they boarded a trolley car and went to the Hansa Haus. For more than an hour the two were closeted with officials of the Eastern Forwarding Company, but when they left for the return trip to the Deutschland they were as mum again as the proverbial oyster.

The tug Thomas F. Timmins is keeping steam up and apparently is waiting for the word to go. The tug changed its position from alongside the submarine to a point where she can easily poke her nose out into the river. Capt. "Zach" Cullison would not say whether he had orders to prepare for the run to the capes or not.

NEW ALLIANCE IS PREDICTED.

Muensterberg Makes Us the Partner of Britain and Germany.

[DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

BOSTON (Mass.) July 29.—An alliance between Germany, Great Britain and the United States, that is the dream of the prophecy of Hugo Muensterberg, professor of psychology at Harvard, and the strongest protagonist of the pro-German propaganda in America. He sets Christmas of 1916 as the time. Prof. Muensterberg outlines "a peace of understanding," a peace that will crush no power, that will return Belgium to the Belgians, Poland to the Poles, and even part of Lorraine to France, with compensation for Germany in Morocco. Even Britain is to gain by keeping German Southwest Africa, while less desirable African possessions are turned over to Germany. "The future does not appear bewildering," he says. "If we look at it earnestly, the chaos seems to yield to order, and if we ask boldly the final question, we get one and only one simple, clear-cut reply: the ultimate outcome of the world war will be just what we had hoped before the war, a firm alliance of America, Great Britain and Germany."

MEXICANS EXECUTE ZAPATA CHIEFTAIN.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

EL PASO (Tex.) July 29.—Guillermo D. J. Escalante, a leading Zapata chieftain, was executed by Mexican de facto authorities near Xochihilco last week, according to newspapers reaching here from Mexico City today. For months before his capture Escalante played with the government authorities on numerous occasions informing them of his whereabouts by telephone only to disappear before authorities could reach the spot.

GERMANS INTERNE TROUBLE MAKERS.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, July 29.—A message received here today by the wireless press from Berne, Switzerland, says:

"The German military authorities have established a military camp for troublesome Germans. A decree promulgated on Monday consigned to this camp the entire editorial staff of the Leipsic Volkszeitung, a daily newspaper. These journalists are to be interned until the end of the war.

"Another decree interns in the same camp four prominent Socialists who were arrested at Elberfeld, Rhenish Prussia."

STURGIS (S. D.) July 29.—As the result of a three-hour rain late today, Sturgis experienced the worst flood in its history. Many houses were inundated to the first floors. Big Creek, which runs through the city, was soon out of its banks and the main streets resembled rivers.

WAR MAY END SOON.

Reasons Assigned for the Belief.

British Peer Insists it is Time to Call a Halt on the Carnage.

"We and Our Enemies," He Says, "Should Modify All Our Demands."

BY LORD BRASSEY.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND DIRECT WIRE. EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

LONDON, July 29.—After two years of the most terrible war the word has ever known, I sincerely hope we are now drawing toward the end. We are steadily advancing on the west front. The tide has turned in our favor. But what is the cost we are paying? In a short time we should know pretty well just what toll the enemy is collecting for the territory we are regaining. It is a frightful, terrible, ghastly business.

As an old man, who is no longer able to get into the thick of things, I must be content to look on and hope the world will soon be at peace again; that the shedding of blood will soon stop; that we and our enemies will modify our demands and find a settlement by negotiation rather than by throwing the whole of our young manhood into the terrible slaughter pen.

HOUR OF PEACE.

When will peace come? I can only say that I hope it will be soon and I think there is some reason for that hope. It depends largely on the length of time it takes the peoples of the belligerents to become acquainted with the true conditions. They are fast gaining knowledge.

On land we are now throwing our best into the conflict, and how good it is results show. I have no hesitancy in saying that the allies are now in a better position, militarily, financially and economically, than the central powers, but I do hope the war will not go on one minute longer than necessary and that the statesmen will not prolong the sacrifice needlessly.

Permit me to pay my respects to America, a wonderful country, which commands the admiration of all. It faces a great future and when the war is over it will have no little part to play in helping to solve problems affecting the whole world. As it has been the leader of the neutrals there is no reason why it may not become the leader of the world, once this war is over—which God hope it may soon be.

The British navy has lived up to all its finest traditions and has played a dominating part in bringing Germany to the nearly exhausted position in which she now finds herself. Except for a casual submarine adventure, entirely valueless so far as its effect on the result of the war, German shipping has long since been swept from the sea. Our blockade is and has been tight enough to bring the German people to privation, if not to the point of starvation.

MANY PROBLEMS.

After the war we shall have many problems to solve, and not the least of these is the question of the representation of our colonies and dependencies in the actions and decisions of the motherland. Britain does not want any more territory; she has enough to care for now. Our colonies have been wonderfully loyal and true. But if there should be another war I feel our colonies should have a place at the empire's council table.

TRADE RELATIONS.

Our trade relations is another matter which must have the fullest consideration and thought. We must not embark on any rash move; we must not permit the anger engendered by the war to sway us in arriving at important decisions. Even our home affairs will have to be readjusted and I am anxious to see as much as possible done now so that we shall be ready for an early demobilization. Farming, manufacturing and shipping will undergo great changes.

THE HUMBLE TURNIP.

Just consider for a moment the humble turnip. If our country is denuded of men and the work of farming proves too heavy and difficult for our women farming must pay the penalty. If we cannot raise enough turnips we shall not have enough of the proper food for our sheep. If we do not have enough sheep we lose one of the best sources of our meat supply and also of fertilizer for the land. If the land is not properly fertilized farming is turned topsy-turvy.

THIRTY-THREE FIREMEN KILLED IN EXPLOSION.

Ammunition Plant in New Jersey Blows Up; Big Panic in New York.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, July 30.—Thirty-three firemen are reported to have been killed early this morning by a terrific explosion in the plant of the National Storage Company on Black Tom Island near Communipaw, N. J., where they had gone to fight a fire resulting from a terrific explosion just thirty minutes earlier.

In the storage company's plant are said to have been enormous quantities of ammunition consigned to the Entente allies. The entire plant is reported to have been wrecked. The entire island appeared at 3:30 o'clock to be covered with a sheet of flame. Access to it is gained from the mainland by a bridge over which run the tracks of the Central Railroad of New Jersey.

Sixty-nine carloads of ammunition are said to have been stored on the railroad tracks on the island. All of them are believed to have been blown up.

Edmond MacKenzie, president of the National Storage Company, said at his home at Plainfield, N. J., at 3:30 o'clock this morning that he had just received a telegram informing him that a great fire was raging in the plant of his company, following an explosion.

NEW YORK SHAKEN.

Shortly after 2 o'clock this morning half of New York was shaken out of its bed by a terrific explosion that bed by a terrific explosion that seemed to every person who heard it, to have been in this immediate neighborhood. Immediately reports began coming into the newspaper offices of the loss of life and the destruction of property from all parts of the five boroughs and from New Jersey.

At 2:30 the police department sent out a report that an explosion had occurred in the subway at Washington street and Myrtle avenue, Brooklyn, killing ten persons.

At the same time it was said that a ship had exploded off the Battery, completely shattering all windows in the lower end of Manhattan. Men had hardly started out to verify this report before it was said that a big ammunition factory in New Jersey had exploded. Flames in the direction of the bay seemed to give color to this report.

WINDOWS BLOWN OUT.

Shortly before 3 o'clock telephone messages began coming in to the effect that three carloads of shrapnel had gone up. Windows were blown out in Manhattan as far uptown as Forty-second street.

At 2:40 there was a second blast, less severe than the first but of serious proportions. Plate glass windows in Herald Square fell into the street.

New York has never before been so terrorized and mystified as by these early morning explosions.

The force of the explosion was so great that thousands of heavy plate glass windows in office buildings in lower Manhattan and Brooklyn were shattered. Streets for many blocks in the downtown section were literally strewn with broken glass.

Thousands of persons swarmed into the streets in all parts of the city, from buildings, subway exits and railway stations, running about in a panic. Many women became hysterical. Police whistles were blowing frantically but the police themselves did not know what it was all about.

Nearly all the fire apparatus in Brooklyn was called out in the belief that somewhere in that part of the city there was a great fire, but no trace of one was to be found.

Police headquarters in all boroughs received reports of disasters of all kinds both in New York and New Jersey. One report was that an oil ship was blown up near the Statue of Liberty.

Police headquarters in Manhattan expressed the belief that many thousands of dollars' damage had been caused in this city by the explosion. It was conjectured that the combinations of vaults in the financial district might have been so seriously damaged that difficulty would be experienced in opening them.

The New York Telephone Company announced at 2.39 a.m. that all telephone lines from New York leading to near-by towns in Jersey were down, and communication almost impossible.

Flames which lighted the sky for miles around apparently were in the Black Tom district near Communipaw, which is a part of Jersey City.

The thousands who had flocked to the streets after the first explosion were reinforced by thousands more after the second. Men, women and children left their homes in their night clothing. Many declared they had been thrown out of bed by the force of the concussion, which was felt even more seriously in Brooklyn than in New York. Women who were in Brooklyn streets when the first explosion occurred were thrown to the pavement and many became almost crazed with fear.

Guests in the big downtown hotels ran frantically into the corridors when the windows in their rooms were shattered. Patients in all the city hospitals were greatly alarmed and their attendants experienced difficulty quieting them. Prompt action was taken by the police to prevent looting in buildings which had been vacated by frightened tenants.

Elevated trains crossing Brooklyn bridge and other bridges were shaken and many panes of glass in the cars were broken. The same was true of surface cars in all parts of the city.

Panic was most pronounced among the dwellers in crowded East Side tenements and many of those who hastened into the streets were cut by broken glass.

A series of less severe explosions were heard, one after another, in Brooklyn after the first two.

ESPEE TRAIN STONED.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

EL PASO, July 30.—Officers of the First Delaware Infantry which arrived here this morning at 1:30 reported that six shots were fired and stones were thrown through the windows of their train. No one was hurt. The incident occurred at a point on the Southern Pacific eighty miles east of El Paso. After the brief stop here, the train left for Deming, N. M.

NINE PERSONS IN JAIL IN PARADE BOMB PLOT.

San Francisco Police Believe They are Well on the Way Now to Unravel All the Mystery in Connection with the Conspiracy Against Preparedness and Law and Order in General.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, July 29.—There were in jail tonight nine persons, one of them specifically charged with murder, held for alleged complicity in a bomb plot in which nine persons were killed and forty injured just a week ago today during San Francisco's preparedness parade. By tomorrow, according to the police, who expect to make two more arrests, every members of a gang which they accuse of the outrage will ebe rounded up.

Dist.-Atty. Fickert said today that Warren K. Billings and another suspect had offered to admit certain facts if the State would give certain assurances. Fickert refused the offer. "We believe we have sufficient evidence," Fickert said, "to establish our case entirely apart from any such admissions."

The man definitely charged with the murder today is Israel Weinberg, a jitney bus operator, whose writ of habeas corpus will be heard Monday. The police believe he aided in the escape of the bomb plotters when the explosion took place.

ANOTHER ARREST.

Another arrest, that of Julius Kohn, alias Louis Coster, was made in the case today. The police say he was a companion of the other suspects.

Chief of Police D. A. White announced tonight he would ask the county grand jury Monday to indict Tom Mooney and W. K. Billings, two of the suspects, for murder. Billings, the police say, is the man who set the bomb on the corner. Mooney is a labor agitator.

The alibi presented to the bomb squad by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Mooney, that they were on the roof of the building in which Mrs. Mooney, under the name of Mrs. Rena Herman, had conducted a music studio for several years, at the time of the explosion, has "fallen down," according to information gathered at police headquarters tonight.

Detectives failed to find any of the persons known to have been on the roof in question duing the parade who remembered seeing either of the accused pair there, although several were found who knew Mrs. Mooney.

The elevator boy told the police he was sure he had not carried a policeman to the roof on the day of the preparedness parade. Mooney told the police just after his arrest that a policeman came to the roof and informed the people there that a bomb had been exploded on lower Market street.

"Real versus Bogus Republicans."

Candidate from South Thrills the County and State Committeemen.

Keesling and Roberts Stir San Francisco Assemblage of Party Leaders.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN FRANCISCO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 29.—In a State conference here this afternoon, at which more than 1200 State and county committeemen were represented either in person or by proxy, Willis H. Booth of Los Angeles received a unanimous indorsement as the Republican candidate for United States Senator from California. In the conference there was not a dissenting voice and when the resolution indorsing Mr. Booth was presented there was not a negative vote.

More than 500 committeemen were in their seats when the conference assembled. On the desk of the secretary of the State Central Committee were regularly-executed proxies for 712 others. The convention was more representative both in the actual number of delegates present and in the number of legal proxies than that which selected the regular Republican delegates to the Chicago National Convention.

KEYNOTE OF CAMPAIGN.

The keynote of the campaign was sounded when Mr. Booth asserted in accepting the conference indorsement: "This is to be a campaign of 'real versus bogus Republicans.'"

Men and women sprang to their feet as though thrilled by an electric shock, cheering as Republicans have not cheered in San Francisco in six years. The term "bogus Republicans" had been coined to designate Progressives who have registered as Republicans in order to steal a United States Senatorship. It will play a prominent part in the primary campaign.

Chairman Keesling stirred the conference in his preliminary address when he replied to those who had criticised the calling of the conference by quoting that section from the State constitution which provides that all citizens "shall have the right freely to assemble together to consult for the common good."

FINN'S MEN.

Half an hour before the conference assembled a motley crowd of sixty State employees from the water front slouched in through a side door of the Palace and got seats in the assembly-hall. They were in charge of two of Tom Finn's lieutenants and had come to cheer for Johnson and create a possible dissension. But when the assembly-hall filled with enthusiastic Republicans and the tenor of the assemblage became apparent, a lackey from the Progressive headquarters hurried in with a note to one of Finn's men and the water-front gang faded away. That was the extent of the demonstration in favor of Gov. Johnson, which the Progressive papers had asserted at noon would be the feature of the conference. The Governor's name was mentioned by nearly every speaker, for he was openly accused of dishonorable and disreputable political tactics.

LETTER FROM BORDWELL.

A letter from Judge Walter Bordwell declining to be bound by the action of the conference was received and laid upon the table. There were no comments.

William H. Crocker, Republican national committeeman from California, attended the conference and cheered enthusiastically when Mr. Booth was presented; but he took no part in the deliberations. At the conclusion he expressed himself as thoroughly in accord with the action taken.

KEESLING'S WORDS.

In his opening address Chairman Keesling said in part:

"On a memorable day, March 4, 1916, there convened here in this same room representatives of the Republican party to deliberate with reference to the very grave issues then confronting the party; and lest some of our friends forget, I desire to repeat what I then said with reference to the character of the conference as it applies in every respect to the conference assembled here today.

"You are met here as individual Republicans. You were called here not because your are the only Republicans, but because of the fact that, an emergency having arisen necessitating a conference of Republicans, you, having been honored by the Republicans of your various counties and the Republican of the State, should naturally be representative Republicans. Republican sentiment will be developed from the individuals here in as satisfactory

STRIKING CHANGE MADE IN THE MAP OF EUROPE.

Situation in the Last Twelvemonth Contrasted with First Period.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, July 29.—The second year of the world war closes with the "Battle of Europe," a concerted effort of the allies on three fronts to crush the central powers, which has developed into a titanic struggle before which superlatives, already exhausted, are completely beggared.

France and Great Britain in the west, Russia in the east, Italy in the south are hurling wave after wave of armed men on the Teutonic lines, together with an avalanche of shells and bombs such as the world has not known up to the present time. For the first time the Teutons are, temporarily at least, on the defensive on the thousands of miles of the existing battle fronts.

The change in the situation which the year has brought is striking, although the results so far have been more potential and spectacular than radical. A year ago the Germans, continuing their great drive against the Russians, hurled the Slavs back along the entire eastern front, captured Warsaw, the great fortresses of Kovno, Novo Georgievsk and Brest-Litovsk and established lines far inside Russian territory which they maintained virtually unbroken until within the last three months. They seized all Poland, a great slice of Russia to the south of that country and expelled the invaders from Galicia and Bukowina. Field Marshals von Hindenburg and von Mackensen were the heroes of these great successes.

On the western front the changes in position during the year were comparatively small but the twelve months were marked by three events of interest: The battles of Champagne and Verdun and the opening of the great Franco-British offensive on the Somme took place in this period.

BATTLE OF CHAMPAGNE.

The battle of Champagne opened on September 25, after a week's terrific bombardment of the German lines by the French, British and Belgians. In a week of the bloodiest fighting that had been known up to that time the allies announced that they had taken twenty miles of trenches, six towns and 23,000 prisoners. But there they halted. They could not break through the mighty German wall and the grim deadlock which marked the western front for so many months was resumed. The Battle of Champagne marked the removal of Sir John French, the British Commander-in-Chief from the beginning of the war up to that time. In December, 1915, it was announced that he had resigned to take a home command and Sir Douglas Haig was appointed his successor.

In sheer human interest the Battle of Verdun probably surpassed all other individual events of the war. On February 23 the German Crown Prince began his assault of the historic French fortress, known throughout many centuries as the gateway to France. For five months the defenders withstood a storm at the fury of which the world stood aghast. Foot by foot, almost inch by inch, the Germons forged forward, with a reckless disregard of their lives, a tenacity and cool courage which was only equalled by the heroic determination of the French. On June 3 an unofficial estimate of the German losses at Verdun placed the total at the appalling figure of 450,000. The assailants fought their way to within about three and a half miles of the fortress but for several weeks have reported no further progress and the force of their attacks appears to have lessened.

The Franco-British offensive on the Somme opened on July 1, 1916. It was preceded by a bombardment of unparalled duration and intensity, featured by the appearance of new and gigantic British howitzers. Under this awful hurricane of big gun fire the German first line defenses crumbled. When the British and French troops advanced they reported that they found trenches in which there was not a single survivor, only the dead guarded the silent rifles and machine guns. German first lines were carried over an extent of twenty-five miles and the second positions pierced at certain points but up to the present the fighting has been indecisive in so far as the forcing of the Germans to withdraw their main lines is concerned. The fighting has been of the bitterest possible description and the reports of press correspondents at the front teem with accounts of the most amazing heroism and devotion on both sides. Instances have been recorded of the sole survivor of a company, wounded and without hope, who manned a machine gun and fought to the last amid the bodies of his comrades; of isolated detachments who stood off their foes for days until succor reached them or death; of captured surgeons who bound up the wounds of their captors; of heroic rescues of wounded comrades under fire and of countless similar deeds that thrilled the watching world.

ALLIED OFFENSIVE.

The first move in the great allied offensive was not made by the Franco-British, however, but by the Russians. On June 4 the troops of the Emperor Nicholas opened a tremendous assault on the Austro-German lines on a 300-mile front extending from the Pripet marshes to Rumania. The Teuton lines held firm in the north, but to the south Gen. Brussiloff swept with irresistible force through the Austrian defenses, tearing a great gap about 100 miles in extent. Through this the Russians poured, capturing Czernowitz, the capital of Bukowina and overrunning the crownland. The Austrian losses are declared to have been enormous, a month after the offensive began the Russians making an official announcement that over 200,000 prisoners has been taken and at least an equal number killed or wounded.

As the offensive developed the Russians won new successes further north and at the close of the war year are engaged in a mighty struggle for Lemberg, the capital of Galicia. The fighting has also extended to the extreme north, in the Riga-Dvinsk region, but here the Germans have held their own and no decisive result has as yet been gained by either side.

In another theater of the war the year was marked by other and important Russian successes. Following the disasters on the eastern front in the closing months of 1915 the Grand Duke Nicholas was removed as commander-in-chief of the Russian armies and sent to take charge of the operations against the Turks in the Caucasus. After months of preparation he began a great drive across Armenia in January, 1916, which resulted in the capture of Erzerum and the port of Trebizond and expelled the Turks from the greater part of Armenia. After a comparative lull of some months the Grand Duke resumed his advance simultaneous with a serious uprising against the Turks by the Arabs in Arabia. The Arabs took the sacred city of Mecca, Jiddah and Taif, and besieged Medina, the city where Mohammed was buried and one of the holiest spots of the Mohammedan world. In the meantime the Russians took Mamakkhatun and Baiburt, but these operations have not yet reached a definite conclusion.

In the connection with the Turkish campaign the year saw a serious reverse for the Franco-British arms and a less important, but highly dramatic, disaster for the British. The disastrous attempt of the French and British to force the Dardanelles and seize Constantinople was definitely abandoned in November, 1915, and the allied troops were withdrawn from the Gallipoli Peninsula. About 150,000 troops had been used in this venture, supported by a mighty fleet. Six battleships, five British and one French, were sent to the bottom as well as some minor craft and the casualties were unofficially reported to be almost equal to the original number of the expeditionary force. This was the result of six months of some of the most sanguinary fighting of the war.

SECOND BRITISH DISASTER.

The second disaster of the British was the surrender of 10,000 troops under Gen. Townshend to the Turks at Kut-El-Amara on the Tigris. This expedition had made a sensational dash more than 300 miles up the river in an attempt to seize Bagdad. It was within ten miles of the city when it was decisively defeated by the Turks and forced to fall back 100 miles. Here it was surrounded and forced to surrender after a relief force had made several vain efforts at rescue.

Two new nations entered the ranks of the belligerents during the year. On October 13, 1915, Bulgaria threw in her lot with the central powers and on March 9, 1916, Germany declared war on Portugal after the republic had seized all German ships interned in her ports.

The entrance of Bulgaria into the arena was signalized by a combined assault on Serbia by Austria, Germany and Bulgaria which resulted in the complete overwhelming of the hopelessly outnumbered Serbians and the subjugation of their country. The remnants of the Serbian army were driven across the frontier into the wilderness of Albania, whence they were rescued by the British, French and Italians. They were shipped to Corfu, where they were reorganized and re-equipped and later, to the number of about 100,000, joined the Franco-British forces at Saloniki. The survivors of the Gallipoli campaign were also gathered at the Grecian seaport as well as a large British army from Egypt. This combined force is estimated at 600,000 men and is presumably being held for an attempt to wrest Serbia from the Bulgarians.

The principal success won by Austrian arms during the year was a great offensive undertaken against Italy in May. The Austrian forces swept the Italian invaders back over a wide stretch of country in the Southern Tyrol, reconquered about 270 square miles of Austrian territory and carried the battle into Italy. The Italians rallied, however, and at the close of the twelve months had regained a large portion of ground and were vigorously pressing a counter-offensive in accordance with the plans of the Entente for concerted action.

On the sea the year witnessed an event of surpassing interest. The German grand fleet, steaming out from its mine fields and impregnable harbors at Kiel and Wilhelmshaven, engaged the British fleet in the mightiest naval battle of history.

The battle was fought off the coast of Jutland on May 31. Its results are so obscured by the conflicting claims of the combatants that they will probably not be definitely known until the war is over, if then. The Germans assert that the British losses were far heavier than theirs, and on that ground claim the victory. The British, denying greater losses, point to the fact that they still control the seas as the basis of their right to the title of victors. London also claims that since the battle 200 British ships, which had been tied up in Baltic ports since the beginning of the war, have been able to make their way to English ports unmolested by German warships.

GERMAN ACCOUNT.

The German official account of the fight says that the British losses were 117,150 tons, as against 60,720 tons sunk by the British. The British Admiralty makes no attempt to estimate the loss in tonnage, but unofficial British estimates place the German loss at 109,220 tons, against 112,350 for the British. Officially the Germans have admitted the loss of only one capital ship, the Lutzow, 26,600 tons, a vesel surpassing in tonnage and armament many battleships. The British claim to have sunk in addition two dreadnaughts and probably a third. The principal losses admitted by them for their side are the three battle cruisers, the Invincible, the Indefatigable and the Queen Mary.

One other event on the sea aroused intense interest. On June 5 Field Marshal Earl Kitchener, Great Britain's famous Minister of War, was drowned with his staff off the Orkneys when the cruiser Hampshire went down. It was at first thought the cruiser had been the victim of a submarine, but this theory was generally discarded when it was learned that the warship had struck a mine and gone down in the midst of a terrific storm.

The second year of the war was a memorable one as far as the United States was concerned. It marked the apparent final passing of the crisis between this country and Germany over the submarine warfare, which threatened more than once a rupture of relations and even war. The sinking by a submarine without warning of the White Star liner Arabic, with the loss of two American lives, created a profound impression in the United States. Germany sent a note to Washington in September pleading self-defense and offering to refer the question of compensation to The Hague, but this was regarded with disappointment by the Washington government and the situation became very tense. In October Germany disavowed and regretted the sinking of the Arabic.

"Five months later the French steamship Sussex was torpedoed without warning while carrying more than 300 passengers, including a number of Americans, across the English Channel. About fifty persons were killed and this incident brought the submarine situation to an acute stage. Germany at first disclaimed responsibility for the attack on the Sussex, but the evidence accumulated by the United States appeared so overwhelming that President Wilson on April 18 dispatched to Germany a note which was virtually an ultimatum, and on the following day personally appeared before Congress and laid the entire problem before that body. On May 10 Germany admitted the submarine attack on the Sussex and promised that no more liners would be sunk without warning and without ample opportunity for the escape of crews and passengers. These promises were considered satisfactory by the President, and the war cloud lifted. Since that time a large number of ships have been sunk by German and Austrian submarines, but the rules of international law have been generally observed.

Another cause of friction between the United States and the central powers was also removed during the year. Since the outbreak of the war certain propagandists had been busy instigating strikes in munitions factories which had contracts with the allies and in endeavoring in other ways to interfere with this trade. For his activity in this respect the recall of Dr. Constantin Dumba was requested by President Wilson in September. The following December, for similar reasons, the President requested the recall of Capt. Boy-Ed and Capt. Von Papen, naval and military attaches, respectively, to the German Embassy. A number of convictions were obtained in the criminal courts in other cases and the propaganda ceased.

Apart from events in the actual war theaters the most striking event of the year in connection with the conflict was an uprising in Ireland in April. The outbreak was organized by a society known as the Sinn Fein, committed to the principle of an independent Ireland. Bloody fighting took place in Dublin in which hundreds of lives were lost and the heart of the business section destroyed, at a cost of many millions of dollars. The fighting was sporadic elsewhere in the islands and of minor importance. The revolt was finally crushed and the ringleaders executed. It led, however, to an agitation which resulted in the government preparing a temporary home rule bill which it expects to pass through Parliament this fall.

The day before the outbreak of the rebellion Sir Roger Casement, formerly in the British consular service, was arrested on the west coast of Ireland, where he had attempted to land a cargo of arms sent from Germany. He was tried later for high treason and sentenced to death.

No definite figures can be given of the cost of the great war in blood and gold, but the most reliable estimates present figures so vast that they become practically meaningless. In March, 1916, the United States General Army Staff estimated that the total losses in men to all the belligerents since the war began were 13,038,000. The exact figures for any country are unavailable.

As to the money question, figures are more reliable but still vague. They present sums which are so beyond anything previously known to international finance, so impossible of any human comparison, that they become little more than a jumble of figures. In March Dr. Karl Helferrich, Secretary of the Imperial Treasury of Germany, estimated that the war was costing all the combatants $375,000,000 a week, or $11,500,000,000 a year. William Michaelis, another German financial expert, put the yearly cost at the vaster sum of $15,000,000,000, and other financial authorities gave even higher figures.

On July 17 Reginald McKenna, British Chancellor of the Exchequer, stated in the House of Commons that the expenditures for Great Britain alone were $30,000,000 daily. He did not say, however, how much of this incredible sum represented war expense.

Within the last few months there has been some talk of peace in Germany and considerable peace activity by unofficial bodies in various countries, but there has been little indication that the chancelleries of Europe are at present seriously considering a close of hostilities.

Turkish Government Holds up Provisions Sent to Unfortunates.

ATHENS, July 29 (via London July 30.)—It is learned in semi-official Greek circles that the Turkish government is holding up the distribution of American supplies intended for the relief of Armenians. The condition of the Armenian refugees is said to be most pitiable. The total number of civilians massacred up to this time is put at 800,000, according to estimates made here.

TEAM WORK OF ALLIES HALTED GERMAN DASH.

Britain's Quick Response Enabled the French to Win Big Victory.

BY WINSTON CHURCHILL,
Former First Lord of British Admiralty.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

LONDON, July 29.—The limitations of a man's intellect do not govern the scale of his affairs. He does what he can, comprehends what he can and the rest happens. When the Armageddon burst over Europe, probably not a single brain achieved a complete and rightly proportioned view of the cataract of events.

The first weeks and months of the general war escaped to a large extent from human control. The forces liberated were unmeasured and the consequences of their exercise unforeseeable. Swarming armies rolled forward in every direction, according to long-prepared war plans of their respective governments. Everywhere the shock of collision resounded as stupendous. Masses of men armed with the deadliest weapons were precipitated against each other. Within thunder clouds fortresses were dissolved like wisps of vapor and great battles were fought unnoticed.

VIEW OF THE ARMIES.

The armies themselves saw nothing but flaming lines of battle on their fronts. Before the eyes of people there hung an impenetrable curtain of numberless irrelevant trifles, glinting deceptively through the haze, the rumor, behind which there rose the steady roar of measureless destruction. Only the fragmentary impressions of fortunes even of the British army reached the Cabinet. The French and Russian high commands were riveted on their own affairs and were largely overwhelmed by them. Even the German main headquarters, in spite of their central viewpoint, their possession of initiative and their prolonged mental preparation for this very thing, were probably unable to do more than register the daily results without being able to understand all the important whys and wherefores.

The nature of the motive forces dominating the events and their reciprocal and interdependent factions were too vast in their scale, too intricate, too convulsive in their movement for human analysis or measurement at the time. All calculations lagged behind. The nations and their armies were gripped by the whirlwind and hurled hither and thither, struggling blindly into the storm until the first days had passed. Not until the fluctuating lines of the armies in the west were congealed into the intrenchments they hold today could the main features of what had taken place be discovered. Even now who can say what sum of forces operated to compel the recoil of the French armies from the frontiers or roused them to the brilliant recovery on the Marne? Who can reveal the true nature and origin of the spasm that caused the advancing German hosts to falter at the moment when Paris seemed within their grasp?

MAY BE EXPLAINED.

No doubt after the war there will be no lack of the minutest explanations. Military historians will weigh in the balance every incident with precision and by elaborate processes of addition and subtraction and much elegant logic will reach the conclusions at which they aim. Conclusions then will be presented as to the design, and reasons will be supplied for every act; every result will be labeled with the proper cause; the mistakes and achievements will be classified and catalogued, and titanic combinations then will be revealed to an awe-struck posterity. A different impression will remain with those who lived through it.

The British army went to France according to what may be called the Haldane plan. Everything in that Minster's eight years' tenure of the War Office had led up to this and had been sacrificed for this. To place an army of four or six infantry divisions, thoroughly equipped and with the necessary cavalry on the left of the French line within twelve or fourteen days of the order to mobilize and to guard the home island meanwhile with fourteen territorial divisions he had organized, was the scheme upon which, aided by the Field Marshals Nicholson and French, he had concentrated all the efforts and stinted the resources. It was a modest plan, but practical. It was consistently pursued and laboriously and minutely studied. It represented approximately the maximum war effort that a voluntary system would yield and applied in a most effective and daring manner to a decisive spot. It commanded assent of almost all the leading generals.

When the hour struck it worked with perfect precision and punctuality. There was nothing to argue about, nothing to haggle over. The French knew exactly what they were going to get if Great Britain decided to come in and exactly when and where they were to get it. Mobilization schemes, railway traffic, time tables, bases, depots of supply and arrangements, which would fill many volumes, regulated and insured a perfect and concerted execution. All that remained to be done on that day was to make a decision and give the signal.

NOT SO SIMPLE.

But it was not so simple as it looks now. The differences which prevailed about entering the war were aggravated by strong crosscurrents by no means operative only in the Cabinet, to the effect that if we participated it should be by naval action alone. Men of great power and influence who since and during the struggle labored tirelessly and rendered undoubted services were found to be resolutely opposed to landing a single soldier on the continent; and if everything had not been prepared—if the plan had not been cut and dried, if it had not been the only plan, and if all the military opinion had not been industriously marshaled around it—who shall say what fatal hesitancy might not have intervened? The fundamental uncertainty and fluctuation from year to year and month to month which pervaded the question of whether the great war would ever come or not had always been in strong contrast to the very definite and precise opinions of military men about what would happen if it did.

Almost all professional opinion agreed that the struggle would be short and fierce and a few weeks would be decisive. Not until Kitchener appeared on the scene was the grim vista of years opened up. The German generals believed profoundly that they would take Paris in a month, and they staked everything ruthlessly on their conviction. The French and Russian staffs agreed in the view that the fate of France and consequently the issue of the war probably depended on the first main trial of strength in the west.

Everything at the outset therefore was held to turn on time. The Germans trampled Belgium underfoot to gain time. The Russians charged forward before they were ready at appalling sacrifices in a noble resolve not to be too late, and the French counted the hours when the British could arrive and the minutes when their own armies could take their stations. The mobilization system of each of the belligerents was fairly accurately known to the others. The intended line of advance of the German armies was indicated with brutal candor by their strategic railways and sidings. The problems were no longer in the region of speculation, but mathematics. The French judged the value of any help we could give entirely on when it could arrive. If on that fourth of August they had been given the choice of 100,000 British soldiers in a fortnight, or of 500,000 six months later, they would have told us, "We've got to live through these six weeks." Nor is it right to conclude because the war stretched out over years and reached a scale and intensity never contemplated at the beginning or beforehand, that the view taken by the French General Staff was shortsighted.

FATE IN THE BALANCE.

Although events proved that the Germans were fatally wrong in their calculations, they were not wrong by much. The balance quivered in suspense. Between a short land war with a dazzling German triumph and a long land war with German expiation, there may not perhaps have been the weight of a single grain. Only on the sea was there any assurance that Germany's wicked war dream, with its vivid, brilliant colors, seeing Belgium acquiescent and as powerless as Luxemburg, Paris taken, the French armies driven to the south, the channel ports seized, "generous terms" to France, "no territorial acquisitions" in the west; then back to the east, to Poland, to the Balkans, to Turkey, to Asia, with triumphant war and triumphant diplomacy flying hand-to-hand on wings of flame to a dominion which Napoleon, which Charlemagne and which Caesar had not surpassed — by how much was all this separated from what actually happened and still is happening—from the awful awakening, the gray, sobering light of dawn, the long, slow rally of nations and the remorseless gathering of superior resources going through infinite suffering to inexorable justice?

From the thirteenth or fourteenth day onward the main shocks in the western theater might begin. How are the masses going to strike the front? Will the Germans go north of the Belgian Meuse? The gigantic arm of the invading movement reaches around farther and farther. They are going north as well as south of the Belgian Meuse. How many corps to the north? Double what the staffs expected. Will they never end? Still and full in the path of this destroying horde, four British divisions calmly plant themselves. Their cavalry patrols stamp on the soil of Waterloo and Malplacquet. The fortress of Namur, held now by the French and the Belgians, flashes into prominence as the vital pivot. Can the French armies at this great movement strike the enveloping arm of Germany at the shoulder and sever it from the trunk—the Austerlitz maneuvers magnified tenfold?

And then the crash of the meeting hosts and Namur falls and the whole line of the French armies of the left recoils. Four British divisions (are they five now?) valiantly resisting, begin their long retreat. Mons, Le Cateau, Landrecies, names deathless in British military history—but always pushing back as fast and as far each day as men can march under irresistible duress of the general retrogression and behind them the Germans rolling forward, rolling forward in triumph, cannon, cavalry, motor cars, machine guns, limitless ammunition, with every device and appliance of war, and soldiers numerous as locusts. Well it was for the military reputation of the United Kingdom, well was it for the whole line of the French armies whose flank we shielded—that in discipline, training and valor the British troops were not inferior to any that ever left our island. For surely none were more sorely tried, with honor to all.

THE FIRST CHAOS.

The chaos of the first explosions had given place slowly to the French warfare. The wild turbulence of incalculable forces, the sense of the terrible adventure had passed. For nearly two years the armies of Europe dwelt close together in opposing ditches, fed by lavish floods of human life and broadening streams of shot and shell tormenting each other by ever growing and improving agencies of death, and behind them their countries have transformed maps, infinitely varied activities of modern civilization, into three comprehensive institutions of barracks, arsenal and hospital. The progress of war no longer is measured by battles or positions or contending fronts, but mainly by the economic and political reactions which long and evermore tightly drawn, strain the producing forces in various nations. Every man, every woman, every workable child, was gradually fitted into the war machine. A somber mood prevails in Britain, the faculty of wonder has been dulled, emotion and enthusiasm have given place to endurance. The excitement is bankrupt, death is familiar and sorrow is numb. The world is in twilight and from beyond the dim, flickering horizons comes the sound of tirelessly-thudding guns. Hard, frost-like surface of gaiety sparkles in cities and anxiety turns for relief to thoughtlessness or apathy.

The beloved figures of son, father, brother and friend descend from the trains for flying visits, recruiting around them for a little precarious space the happiness of the far-off days before war. A few hours of safety, comfort and a vivid interlude of home and pleasure, then back as a matter of course, is a commonplace experience, to the slow fire which with intensifying fierceness consumes the flesh and sears the hearts of the people.

Now one can understand how men lived through periods that seem so terrible in the history books and went about business and joked, ate their dinners and filled the theaters. Now, too, one can understand how our forefathers, with shoulder bended to the burden, with searching eye fixed upon the enemy, preserved through the perils, difficulties and the blunders of a thousand years in the life and honor of Britannia's isle.

TEUTONS PUSHED BACK ON SIXTY-MILE FRONT.

Russians Win First Decisive Victory in Their Eastern Campaign—Direct Blow at Armies Defending Vladimir-Volynski has been Struck—Successful Attack on Kovel is Now in Sight.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

PETROGRAD, July 29 (via London.)—After being compelled to halt their advance for several weeks before combined Austrian and German resistance, on the northern wing of Gen. Brussiloff's front, the Russians have again scored an important success and are pressing the Teutons back along the entire front from the Kovel-Lutsk railway as far south as Brody.

Although the official War Office statement gives no particulars of this new penetration of the Teutonic lines, it apparently took place south of Kiselin on the Vladimir-Volynski highway and was a direct blow at the Austro-German army defending Vladimir-Volynski.

The unexpected widening of the breach begun at Lutsk in the early days of the summer campaign that has thus been effected is considered more significant than the occupation of Brody, which was a foregone conclusion some days ago. The fate of Brody was sealed when Gen. Sakharoff scored his brilliant victory on the River Slonevka.

FOR ATTACK ON KOVEL.

The new Russian attack south of Lutsk not only threatens Valdimir-Volynski, but opens the possibility of a successful attack upon Kovel from the south since an important railway line connects these points. The proximity of the Russians to Sokal likewise constitutes a definite threat at Lemberg from that direction. The chief significance of the new advance, however, is the fact that it is the first decisive success scored by the Russians against German forces in the present campaign.

Since the first breach of the Lutsk front the Germans taking over the defense of Kovel had been able to hold the Russians on the line of the Stokhod. The combined effect of the two Russian advances—toward Vladimir-Volynski and toward Brody, now has been to drive the Austro-German armies back along a sixty-mile front.

The fall of Brody has not as yet, however, seriously awakened expectation of an immediate pressing on to Lemberg by the Russians.

Military critics call attention to the strong natural and artificial defenses protecting the Galician capital. It is expected that the Austrians will make their first stand in the forests immediately west of Brody along the bend in the Styr.

According to some confidential information Brody was taken without artillery preparation, by an irresistible rush of the infantry. The onslaught was so sudden and unexpected that the Austrians had no time to remove their depots of ammunition and provisions, which they endeavored to destroy, but a large part of which fell into Russian hands.

The latest computation of prisoners taken during the first half of the summer campaign gives a total of 350,000, according to Russian officers, who estimate also that the total Austro-German losses, including killed and wounded, are close to 800,000. On the basis of these figures, Col. Shumsky, military critic of the Bourse Gazette, argues that the Austro-German losses since the beginning of the war have been fully half the total of their available forces.

NEUTRALS PROTEST BRITISH ORDER.

[BY WIRELESS AND A. P.]

BERLIN, July 29.—Denmark, Norway and Sweden have decided to protest against the British order in council of July discontinuing the partial enforcement of the Declaration of London, says the Overseas News Agency, these countries considering the new British rules of sea law to be at variance with the principles of international law.

The Journal de Geneve is quoted as suggesting a union of Switzerland, Holland, Denmark, Spain and the United States. The Nieuwe Rotterdamsche Courant urges the Dutch government "to return to the principles expressed in Washington in November, 1914, with regard to the rights of neutrals."

BRITISH PRESTIGE LOST IN BATTLE OF JUTLAND

World's Greatest Sea Power Successfully Attacked, Declares Capt. Persius.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

BERLIN (via London) July 29.—Capt. Persius, the naval critic of the Berliner Tageblatt, has written the following review of naval operations during the second year of the war, from the German viewpoint, for the Associated Press:

"It seemed likely that the second year of the war would end without a sea fight of the first magnitude, but May 31 brought a gratifying proof that our great battleships were not built in vain and that our fleet, despite seeming inactivity, was quietly and assiduously preparing itself for a blow against the strongest sea power in the world. We still hear the question asked as to who was the real victor in the fight off Skagerrak. A comparison of the clear, concise reports of the German Admiralty staff with Admiral Jellicoe's long-winded reports, which contain only a few facts, leaves no doubt that the German official account gives a thoroughly truthful description of the battle. The English version, with its bareness of facts, labors in vain to conceal its improbability.

FINAL JUDGMENT.

"Whatever the final judgment is of the battle in detail the loss of British prestige at sea and the pronounced success of our fleet remain indisputable if only the British losses in men and ships are counted. The waves of the North Sea swallowed 6104 British seamen and 117,110 gross registered tons of shipping, while the German losses were 2414 men and 60,720 tons. These figures were officially published on both the German and British sides.

"Numberless authorities, both hostile and neutral, have expressed opinions on the battle, but the German people will not permit themselves to be influenced by any foreign judgment. They understand alone how proud they may be of a navy whose quality and honor have stood the test of battle with the strongest sea powers. They know that Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg rightly expressed the general sentiment in his speech in the Reichstag on June 5, when he said: 'This victory, too, shall not make us vainglorious. We know that England is not subdued or conquered by this battle.'

"Beside the battle of the Skagerrak the other events of the second year of the war, navally speaking, pale into insignificance. In the first year the activity of the German submarines aroused general astonishment. In the second year their activity was sharply circumscribed, but nevertheless the successes in war upon commerce were considerable in comparison with those of the first year.

"On the other hand, the destruction of warships by submarines occurred but seldom. The U-27 destroyed an English protected cruiser in the North Sea on August 10, 1915. Another of our boats sank the French armored cruiser Admiral Charnier in the Eastern Mediterranean on February 8, 1916. A number of minor war vessels also were sunk.

WORK OF SUBMARINES.

"English submarines did some damage to German commerce in the Baltic and succeeded in torpedoing several of our warships, like the armored cruiser Prince Adelbert, October 23; Undine, November 7, and Bremen, December 17.

"Special mention is merited by the bold flights of our marine aircraft and their important scout work in the North Sea and Baltic. Attacks were made against fortified places on England's coast and the English were able to destroy only two airships—No. 15, on April 1, and No. 7, on May 4. Within a few hours our airships are able to reconnoiter the entire North Sea, and they did valuable service in the battle off Skagerrak. Marine aeroplanes also did excellent work and especially distinguished themselves on the Baltic, where they were of the utmost value in various ways. On several occasions they were able even to take the offensive with success, damaging warships with bombs and capturing merchantmen.

"In the Black Sea and the Mediterranean German submarines working with those of Austria-Hungary operated successfully in war against commerce and destroyed numerous transports laden with troops and war material. In the Black Sea the Yawuse Sultan Selim, formerly the German cruiser Goeben, and the Midlu, formerly the German cruiser Breslau, bombarded Russian fortified towns on the Crimean coast at various times and damaged Russian commerce.

CRUISE OF THE MOEWE.

"The glorious deeds of several German auxiliary cruisers remain to be mentioned. The Moewe, under the command of Count von Dohna, made a successful raid into the Atlantic in January and February, the Appam, one of the steamers captured by it, carrying the passengers and crew of other captured merchantmen to the United States under the command of Lieut. Berg. The Moewe herself made her [illegible] port safely on March 4, [illegible] booty.

"The auxiliary cruisers [illegible] and Greif destroyed on [illegible] and February 29, respectively, [illegible] much stronger-armed British [illegible] iliaries Ramsay and Alcantara.

"On the threshold of the [illegible] year of the war it remains [illegible] pointed out that the German [illegible] has hitherto fulfilled its [illegible] of keeping the enemy from [illegible] coasts and, beyond this, has [illegible] a series of successes that [illegible] ceeded our most sanguine [illegible] tions. The German people [illegible] ignore the fact that the British power still dominates the [illegible] nevertheless they look with [illegible] dence upon their navy. They [illegible] pect it to show itself able [illegible] ing to victories in the third [illegible] the war as it has done hitherto [illegible] thus contribute its part toward [illegible] general aim of securing an [illegible] able peace."

Whole Campaign Decided on the

BY HAR

THE most important campaign of the war seems to be the renewed advance of the Russians into Galicia.

The Russians are evidently driving with considerable success toward Lemberg, with the ultimate intention of recapturing the much-fought-over fortress at Przemysl.

It has always seemed to me that this war would be decided upon the east front. The present conditions tend to strengthen that conviction.

The conditions are too hard on the west front. It is a simple matter of arithmetic. It takes four or five men and innumerable shells to capture that part of a trench defended by one man. The preponderance of numbers required is too great.

SALUTES THE BRITISH.

I take my hat off to the British for their advance, which is still struggling on. With officers who knew absolutely nothing of war two years ago, with troops scrambled together like a washday luncheon, and with the most difficult conditions ever seen in any war, they have driven back the flower of the German troops. The conditions permitted of practically no strategy. The conditions called for great triumphs of tactics, but the strategy involved seems to have been nothing more than a straight frontal drive. It may be that the Germans will return in a terrific storm and sweep back the British from all the hard-won ground. A little later they will certainly try to. But that does not detract from the splendid heroism of the British troops.

Nevertheless, it does not seem possible that a real victory can be won on that front. The cost is too great. The British must be losing three or four men to one German during this appalling drive.

WHAT GRANT DID.

In our own Civil War Gen. Grant accepted such conditions. His whole plan of campaign was based upon the fact that the Union Army had to win because it had the most men, and that the best way to beat the Confederates was to keep on hammering, win or lose, until the disproportion of numbers finally finished the army of Gen. Lee.

This example is often cited in this war; but it seems to me that the conditions are essentially different. Gen. Lee was on his own ground. Every foot of territory he yielded was a foot of the Confederate homeland and the loss of it made living in the Confederacy just that much more difficult.

The Germans, on the other hand, are occupying alien soil. If this English offensive were kept up at this rate for an entire year it would not find the Germans forced back even to the place from which they started. Meanwhile, the British army would have bled itself to death.

On the east front, however, the central powers have no such bulwark of strength.

On the west front the allies are attacking Germany in its strongest quarter; they are charging against unbroken battalions of Prussian, Bavarian and Saxon troops. On the east front the brunt of the onslaught is borne by Austria.

AUSTRIA'S WEAKNESS.

There are a hundred explanations of the weakness of Austria as a military power. These need not be gone into. For some reason it seems to be a fact that the Russians can lick the Austrians every time they start. But the Germans can just as unfailingly lick the Russians.

If the British and French can wage such a furious attack upon the Germans that the Kaiser cannot send any troops from the west front to the relief of the Austrians, the going will be very hard for the central powers.

I daresay that everyone who reads war news understands perfectly well that the failures of the allies for two years were all due to the main fact that they couldn't get going at once. When the English were ready the Italians were not. When the BERLIN, July 29 (via Sayville.)—The capture of 1000 Russians during the fighting north of Brody is reported in the Austro-Hungarian headquarters statement of July 27, which also records Russian repulses in this district. A success of the Austrians in the Prislop region, where heights were taken from the Russians, is announced.

After repeated futile attacks northwest of Lutsk, says the German official statement issued today, the Russians succeeded in penetrating the German lines in the region of Tristyn and caused the Germans to give up their advanced positions which they had previously held beyond the River Stokhod.

West of Lutsk, the statement adds, the Russian attack has been brought to a standstill by a German counter attack.

The text of the German official statement today says:

"Western front: In the Somme district there was lively artillery fighting. In the Pozieres sector strong English attacks failed. North of the River Somme attempts made by the enemy to attack were suppressed by our fire.

"In the Meuse district there was no infantry activity.

"British fire directed on French Comines caused losses among the civilian population and did material but no military damage.

"A hostile aeroplane was shot down by full hits from our antiaircraft guns. It fell near Roclincourt, north of Arras.

I daresay that everyone who reads news understands perfectly well the failures of the allies for years were all due to the main that they couldn't get going at When the English were ready Italians were not. When the French and the Russians launched forth, something was the matter with the British. Germany achieved her series of successes by taking the allied armies one at a time and attacking them before they were ready. The real reason why the Russian advance into Galicia through the Carpathians failed last year was because Italy came in too late to leap onto the back of Austria before Germany could come crashing down on the flank and rear of the Grand Duke's army.

Just once, early in the war, the allies got started together. The defeat of the Germans at the battle of the Marne resulted. The allies are now going again all at once. If any break happens in any direction, Germany will be able to hurl her troops across to the opposite frontier and will extricate herself from a difficult situation.

The whole thing is now on the knees of the gods. All we can do is to examine into what seems to be the plans of the allies.

BIRDSEYE VIEW.

In a big general way, it is obvious that they intend to pull Rumania into the war; force a drive through from Saloniki, going north; and one south from Galicia. The hope of the allied commanders seems to be thus to cut off Turkey from Austria and Austria off from Germany and devour them at their leisure. Their plan is to close a giant pair of scissors, one blade being the Russian army in Galicia, the other being the army at Saloniki, which is mysteriously quiet.

The aim of Germany during this whole war has been to try to force France to a separate peace with the firm expectation of seeing the whole Entente collapse without her. The allies are now determined to force Austria to a separate peace with a similar hope.

The opinion has been many times expressed in the Checkerboard that Rumania is the key to this war. If she should flop against the central powers, her large army and her fortunate strategic position would make her a dangerous foe for Austria.

Rumania seems to have a fascinating and ingenuous policy. She is for whichever side is able to do the most for her at the minute of speaking. If this Russian offensive into Galicia should turn out to be a great success, she is just as liable to flop as not.

Early in August, there are some elections in Greece upon the result of which much depends. The allies hope that a party will go into power pledged to the active support of the allied cause.

SICK OF THE WAR.

There is no doubt that all the people of Europe are getting very sick of the war. The armies are prepared to go on forever; but one of these days some one or another of the civilian populations is going to yell, "Stop."

These Balkan countries are, at best, an uncertain quantity. They are liable to do anything. The desertion of Greece or Rumania would have no effect upon Germany; but I don't know about her allies.

They can bear expected reversals with equanimity; but not the unexpected. Austria, Bulgaria and Turkey seem in these circumstances to be the most promising points of attack.

But it must be remembered that any little slip on the part of the allies will break the charm. This march into the vitals of the central powers can be kept up only as long as the allies keep hammering all together and from all directions.

And if you think their problem is easy just try to start three processions at exactly the same minute from Westlake Park, Moneta and Mt. Washington and have them march into the Plaza at exactly the same instant. That is approximately what the allies are up against.

From the first day of this war, the overwhelming advantage of the central powers was that they stood together while the allies were half a world's distance apart.

HORSE DINES ON MAN'S EAR.

Couldn't Wait for Feed Bag to be Adjusted—Owner is in Hospital.

[DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN FRANCISCO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 29.—A horse belonging to Michael Murray was so ravenously hungry at dinner time today that while he was adjusting the feed bag over its face it reached over and bit the lobe of his left ear off. While the horse enjoyed the remainder of its dinner Murray was being treated at the Central Emergency Hospital.

Heat.

Hudson Bay. Cochrane, for instance, half-way between Lake Superior and Hudson Bay, reported temperature of 84 deg. this morning, showing there is no escape from the heat in the north woods. Some idea of the extent of the torridity is gained from these temperatures:

Belvidere, Aurora, Elgin and other Northern Illinois cities, 104 deg.; Ottawa, Ill., 107; Streator, Ill., 107; Danville, Ill., 106; Battle Creek, Mich., 109; Bay City, Mich., 107; Grand Rapids, Mich., 104; Detroit, Mich., 100; Bloomington, Ill., 102; Peoria, Ill., 104; Des Moines, Iowa, 99; Gary, Ind., 104; Hammond, Ind., 103.

FARM WORK STOPS.

These are some points where government observations are made and the temperature is usually taken at the top of the Federal buildings, away from the heat of the streets and up in whatever cool air is circulating. In the fields of Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska and other Middle Western States, the heat reached as high as 120 and farm work was impossible.

From every direction comes the pitiful story of greatly increased infant mortality. The babies, many of them under care of inexperienced mothers or parents whose homes are in badly-congested districts, with no electric fans, no ice and no means of warding off the heat, simply die like flies. One week of steady hot weather means the death warrant for hundreds of babies and the death list among them, as well as among adults, will increase rapidly, as they have lost their resisting power.

Special dispatches this evening tell of farmers dropping dead in their fields and of deaths from heat in numerous villages. While these sporadic cases are stretched over a wide area, they present, in the aggregate, a death list that is most unusual. Temperatures in other cities as reported by the United States Weather Bureau are as follows:

WILSON CRUISES IN NAVAL YACHT.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

FORT MONROE (Va.) July 29.—President Wilson arrived here this evening on the naval yacht Mayflower. The yacht anchored in the roads and the President did not come ashore.

Soon after the Mayflower arrived the armored cruiser North Carolina, which has been patrolling outside the capes on neutrality duty, steamed in and dropped anchor within hailing distance. There followed a long exchange of messages between Fortress Monroe, the Mayflower and the North Carolina, wig-wagging continuing until darkness when lights were substituted.

It is said that the President has no definite plans, but probably will remain in this vicinity until tomorrow night and start for Washington in time to reach there Monday morning.

GIANT AIRPLANE FROM HELGOLAND.

WILL CARRY TONS OF MAID, CREW OF EIGHTEEN.

Projectors Expect Crossing from Europe to this Country Can be Made in Thirty Hours—Exact Date of Arrival will Depend on Atmosphere.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 29.—German enterprise, having startled the world by sending to the United States a merchant submarine, now is said by reliable authority to be preparing further to excite admiration by linking the two countries through a Transatlantic air service.

It is definitely known that German aeronautical genius has perfected a huge triple-screw triplane, which is of sufficient power and endurance to cross the Atlantic. Tests of this aircraft has proved its possibilities and it is declared the exact date of the flying blockade-runner's arrival depends only upon propitious atmospheric conditions.

The giant air vehicle will carry several tons of mail, a crew of eighteen or twenty men and gasoline sufficient for a 7000-mile journey. The machine will be sent on its way from the huge base of Helgoland. It is expected the running time to America will be about thirty hours.

HOPE FOR THE BREMEN.

Official announcement of this promised spectacular achievement, it is stated, has been delayed in hope the Bremen, the second merchant submarine, would bring more complete information and perhaps some photographs. The following specifications of the gigantic machine are given:

Weight of triplane fully equipped, 35,000 pounds; length of hull, 75 feet; beam, 22 feet; speed, 120 miles an hour; capacity of fuel tanks 7000 gallons of gasoline; main cabin in hull accommodates eighteen persons.

SUPERIMPOSED PLANES.

The superstructure, according to the description given, consists of three superimposed planes, each having a span of 150 feet. A pontoon is attached to the tip of each lower plane. Two hydroplanes, pneumatic life preservers and fire extinguishers will be conveniently carried for use in case of accident. The power plant consists of six 250-horse-power motors. Each motor can be operated as a separate power plant in case of injury to any single one.

The aerial project is said to be fathered by Albert Ballin, president of the Hamburg-American line. In a way it is the answer of the line to the enterprise of the North German Lloyd line in sending the first submersible merchantman to the Western Hemisphere.

REOPEN HEARING ON RICE TARIFFS.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, July 29.—The State Railroad Commission today, upon petition of the California and Sacramento Transportation companies and others, reopened the whole question of local and joint rates on paddy rice in carloads and ordered a rehearing beginning August 7 at Biggs, Cal. The commission two months ago ordered the Southern Pacific and Santa Fe railroads to lower their rice rates. The transportation companies, who entered the case today, declared that they couldn't compete with the railroads under the reduced rates, which were fixed upon the petition of the Rice Growers' Association of California and the Pacific Rice Growers' Association.

CANAL IS DOOMED IF BOG EXISTS.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, July 29.—Discussing the probable fate of the Panama Canal in an interview in the Weekly Dispatch, Col. Norton Griffith, M.P., and a well-known engineer, says:

"We await further developments with sympathetic interest before accepting reports that the present canal is doomed. If the subsoil underlying Gaillard Cut is a gigantic bog, as some alarmist statements assert, then this particular route seems hopeless.

"No digging in the world will relieve the situation; for always, as now, there will be more earth to remove and it will be a case of digging forever with no positive result. . . . Until we know whether or not the reports are true, it would be premature to pass judgment."

FEELING GROWING FOR BIGGER NAVY.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, July 29.—Conferees on the naval bill spent another day working on minor points of difference and will take up the large features next week.

Senate managers with the backing of President Wilson are prepared to stand firmly for the three-year programme, including construction of four dreadnaughts and four battle cruisers at once, and thus force the House conferees to submit the issue to the House for reconsideration.

Among members of the House the feeling is said to be growing in favor of the Senate programme as approved by the President and the Navy Department.

CHECKERBOARD OF WAR; MAIN MOVES IN EAST.

Whole Campaign of the Allies may be Decided on the Russian Front.

BY HARRY CARR.

HE most important campaign of the war seems to be the renewed advance of the Rus- into Galicia.

The Russians are evidently driv- with considerable success toward berg, with the ultimate inten- of recapturing the much-fought- fortress at Przemysl.

It has always seemed to me that war would be decided upon the front. The present conditions to strengthen that conviction. conditions are too hard on the front. It is a simple matter of tactic. It takes four or five and innumerable shells to cap- that part of a trench defended man. The preponderance of required is too great.

SALUTES THE BRITISH.

I take my hat off to the British their advance, which is still pping on. With officers who absolutely nothing of war two ago, with troops scrambled like a washday luncheon, with the most difficult condi- ever seen in any war, they driven back the flower of the man troops. The conditions per- of practically no strategy. conditions called for great tri- of tactics, but the strategy seems to have been noth- more than a straight frontal It may be that the Germans return in a terrific storm and back the British from all the won ground. A little later will certainly try to. But that not detract from the splendid of the British troops.

Nevertheless, it does not seem that a real victory can be on that front. The cost is too The British must be losing or four men to one German this appalling drive.

WHAT GRANT DID.

our own Civil War Gen. Grant such conditions. His whole of campaign was based upon fact that the Union Army had because it had the most men, that the best way to beat the federates was to keep on ham- win or lose, until the dispro- of numbers finally finished army of Gen. Lee.

example is often cited in this but it seems to me that the are essentially different. Lee was on his own ground. foot of territory he yielded foot of the Confederate home- and the loss of it made living Confederacy just that much difficult.

Germans, on the other hand, occupying alien soil. If this offensive were kept up at for an entire year it would the Germans forced back the place from which they Meanwhile, the British would have bled itself to the east front, however, the powers have no such bul- of strength.

On the west front the allies are attacking Germany in its strongest quarter; they are charging against unbroken battalions of Prussian, Bavarian and Saxon troops. On the east front the brunt of the on- slaught is borne by Austria.

AUSTRIA'S WEAKNESS.

There are a hundred explanations of the weakness of Austria as a military power. These need not be into. For some reason it to be a fact that the Rus- can lick the Austrians every they start. But the Germans just as unfailingly lick the Rus-

If the British and French can such a furious attack upon Germans that the Kaiser cannot any troops from the west front the relief of the Austrians, the will be very hard for the cen- powers.

I daresay that everyone who reads news understands perfectly well the failures of the allies for years were all due to the main that they couldn't get going at When the English were ready Italians were not. When the French and the Russians launched forth, something was the matter with the British. Germany achieved her series of successes by taking the allied armies one at a time and attacking them before they were ready. The real reason why the Russian advance into Galicia through the Carpathians failed last year was because Italy came in too late to leap onto the back of Austria before Germany could come crashing down on the flank and rear of the Grand Duke's army.

Just once, early in the war, the allies got started together. The defeat of the Germans at the battle of the Marne resulted. The allies are now going again all at once. If any break happens in any direction, Germany will be able to hurl her troops across to the opposite frontier and will extricate herself from a difficult situation.

The whole thing is now on the knees of the gods. All we can do is to examine into what seems to be the plans of the allies.

BIRDSEYE VIEW.

In a big general way, it is obvious that they intend to pull Rumania into the war; force a drive through from Saloniki, going north; and one south from Galicia. The hope of the allied commanders seems to be thus to cut off Turkey from Austria and Austria off from Germany and devour them at their leisure. Their plan is to close a giant pair of scissors, one blade being the Russian army in Galicia, the other being the army at Saloniki, which is mysteriously quiet.

The aim of Germany during this whole war has been to try to force France to a separate peace with the firm expectation of seeing the whole Entente collapse without her. The allies are now determined to force Austria to a separate peace with a similar hope.

The opinion has been many times expressed in the Checkerboard that Rumania is the key to this war. If she should flop against the central powers, her large army and her fortunate strategic position would make her a dangerous foe for Austria.

Rumania seems to have a fascinating and ingenuous policy. She is for whichever side is able to do the most for her at the minute of speaking. If this Russian offensive into Galicia should turn out to be a great success, she is just as liable to flop as not.

Early in August, there are some elections in Greece upon the result of which much depends. The allies hope that a party will go into power pledged to the active support of the allied cause.

SICK OF THE WAR.

There is no doubt that all the people of Europe are getting very sick of the war. The armies are prepared to go on forever; but one of these days some one or another of the civilian populations is going to yell, "Stop."

These Balkan countries are, at best, an uncertain quantity. They are liable to do anything. The desertion of Greece or Rumania would have no effect upon Germany; but I don't know about her allies.

They can bear expected reversals with equanimity; but not the unexpected. Austria, Bulgaria and Turkey seem in these circumstances to be the most promising points of attack.

But it must be remembered that any little slip on the part of the allies will break the charm. This march into the vitals of the central powers can be kept up only as long as the allies keep hammering all together and from all directions.

And if you think their problem is easy just try to start three processions at exactly the same minute from Westlake Park, Moneta and Mt. Washington and have them march into the Plaza at exactly the same instant. That is approximately what the allies are up against.

From the first day of this war, the overwhelming advantage of the central powers was that they stood together while the allies were half a world's distance apart.

HORSE DINES ON MAN'S EAR.

Couldn't Wait for Feed Bag to be Adjusted—Owner is in Hospital.

[DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN FRANCISCO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 29.—A horse belonging to Michael Murray was so ravenously hungry at dinner time today that while he was adjusting the feed bag over its face it reached over and bit the lobe of his left ear off. While the horse enjoyed the remainder of its dinner Murray was being treated at the Central Emergency Hospital.

Heat.

Hudson Bay. Cochrane, for instance, half-way between Lake Superior and Hudson Bay, reported temperature of 84 deg. this morning, showing there is no escape from the heat in the north woods. Some idea of the extent of the torridity is gained from these temperatures: Belvidere, Aurora, Elgin and other Northern Illinois cities, 104 deg.; Ottawa, Ill., 107; Streator, Ill., 107; Danville, Ill., 106; Battle Creek, Mich., 109; Bay City, Mich., 107; Grand Rapids, Mich., 104; Detroit, Mich., 100; Bloomington, Ill., 102; Peoria, Ill., 104; Des Moines, Iowa, 99; Gary, Ind., 104; Hammond, Ind., 103.

FARM WORK STOPS.

These are some points where government observations are made and the temperature is usually taken at the top of the Federal buildings, away from the heat of the streets and up in whatever cool air is circulating. In the fields of Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska and other Middle Western States, the heat reached as high as 120 and farm work was impossible.

From every direction comes the pitiful story of greatly increased infant mortality. The babies, many of them under care of inexperienced mothers or parents whose homes are in badly-congested districts, with no electric fans, no ice and no means of warding off the heat, simply die like flies. One week of steady hot weather means the death warrant for hundreds of babies and the death list among them, as well as among adults, will increase rapidly, as they have lost their resisting power.

Special dispatches this evening tell of farmers dropping dead in their fields and of deaths from heat in numerous villages. While these sporadic cases are stretched over a wide area, they present, in the aggregate, a death list that is most unusual. Temperatures in other cities as reported by the United States Weather Bureau are as follows:

WILSON CRUISES IN NAVAL YACHT.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

FORT MONROE (Va.) July 29.—President Wilson arrived here this evening on the naval yacht Mayflower. The yacht anchored in the roads and the President did not come ashore.

Soon after the Mayflower arrived the armored cruiser North Carolina, which has been patrolling outside the capes on neutrality duty, steamed in and dropped anchor within hailing distance. There followed a long exchange of messages between Fortress Monroe, the Mayflower and the North Carolina, wig-wagging continuing until darkness when lights were substituted.

It is said that the President has no definite plans, but probably will remain in this vicinity until tomorrow night and start for Washington in time to reach there Monday morning.

GIANT AIRPLANE FROM HELGOLAND.

WILL CARRY TONS OF MAIL, CREW OF EIGHTEEN.

Projectors Expect Crossing from Europe to this Country Can be Made in Thirty Hours—Exact Date of Arrival will Depend on Atmosphere.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 29.—German enterprise, having startled the world by sending to the United States a merchant submarine, now is said by reliable authority to be preparing further to excite admiration by linking the two countries through a Transatlantic air service.

It is definitely known that German aeronautical genius has perfected a huge triple-screw triplane, which is of sufficient power and endurance to cross the Atlantic. Tests of this aircraft has proved its possibilities and it is declared the exact date of the flying blockade-runner's arrival depends only upon propitious atmospheric conditions.

The giant air vehicle will carry several tons of mail, a crew of eighteen or twenty men and gasoline sufficient for a 7000-mile journey. The machine will be sent on its way from the huge base of Helgoland. It is expected the running time to America will be about thirty hours.

HOPE FOR THE BREMEN.

Official announcement of this promised spectacular achievement, it is stated, has been delayed in hope the Bremen, the second merchant submarine, would bring more complete information and perhaps some photographs. The following specifications of the gigantic machine are given:

Weight of triplane fully equipped, 35,000 pounds; length of hull, 75 feet; beam, 22 feet; speed, 120 miles an hour; capacity of fuel tanks 7000 gallons of gasoline; main cabin in hull accommodates eighteen persons.

SUPERIMPOSED PLANES.

The superstructure, according to the description given, consists of three superimposed planes, each having a span of 150 feet. A pontoon is attached to the tip of each lower plane. Two hydroplanes, pneumatic life preservers and fire extinguishers will be conveniently carried for use in case of accident. The power plant consists of six 250-horse-power motors. Each motor can be operated as a separate power plant in case of injury to any single one.

The aerial project is said to be fathered by Albert Ballin, president of the Hamburg-American line. In a way it is the answer of the line to the enterprise of the North German Lloyd line in sending the first submersible merchantman to the Western Hemisphere.

REOPEN HEARING ON RICE TARIFFS.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, July 29.—The State Railroad Commission today, upon petition of the California and Sacramento Transportation companies and others, reopened the whole question of local and joint rates on paddy rice in carloads and ordered a rehearing beginning August 7 at Biggs, Cal. The commission two months ago ordered the Southern Pacific and Santa Fe railroads to lower their rice rates. The transportation companies, who entered the case today, declared that they couldn't compete with the railroads under the reduced rates, which were fixed upon the petition of the Rice Growers' Association of California and the Pacific Rice Growers' Association.

ARMY OFFICER WEDS SECRETLY.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

STOCKTON, July 29.—Capt. Edward Van Vranken of Battery C, Field Artillery, N.G.C., and Miss Colette Laumeister, a popular girl of this city, were secretly married on June 29 before the departure of the local battery for Nogales, on the Mexican border.

The news became known today when the marriage license was filed in the County Recorder's office.

CANAL IS DOOMED IF BOG EXISTS.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, July 29.—Discussing the probable fate of the Panama Canal in an interview in the Weekly Dispatch, Col. Norton Griffith, M.P., and a well-known engineer, says:

"We await further developments with sympathetic interest before accepting reports that the present canal is doomed. If the subsoil underlying Gaillard Cut is a gigantic bog, as some alarmist statements assert, then this particular route seems hopeless.

"No digging in the world will relieve the situation; for always, as now, there will be more earth to remove and it will be a case of digging forever with no positive result. . . . Until we know whether or not the reports are true, it would be premature to pass judgment."

FEELING GROWING FOR BIGGER NAVY.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, July 29.—Conferees on the naval bill spent another day working on minor points of difference and will take up the large features next week.

Senate managers with the backing of President Wilson are prepared to stand firmly for the three-year programme, including construction of four dreadnaughts and four battle cruisers at once, and thus force the House conferees to submit the issue to the House for reconsideration.

Among members of the House the feeling is said to be growing in favor of the Senate programme as approved by the President and the Navy Department.

DENY CAMPAIGN AGAINST CANTU.

De Facto Troops not to be Used on Peninsula.

Guardsmen Entitled to the Pension of Regulars.

Private Tucker Exonerated in Rodriguez Case.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN DIEGO, July 29.—Denial of reports that troops of the Mexican de facto government were to be used in a campaign against the present government of Lower California has been received by Col. Esteban Cantu, Governor of the territory, from Minister of War Obregon at Mexico City. A dispatch to this effect, in answer to a message to Obregon by Cantu, was received today at Tia Juana, just across the border from this city.

STATUS OF GUARDSMEN.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, July 29.—Mooted questions about the status of State troops called into the Federal service for the Mexican emergency are decided in an exhaustive opinion given Secretary Baker today by Brig.-Gen. Crowder, judge advocate general of the army. Gen. Crowder holds that the State soldiers are not subject to duty outside of the United States unless and until they are formally drafted by order of the President, that they are under control of the Federal government and not of their respective State Governors, and that they are entitled to the same pensions and privileges as regulars.

While Congress by joint resolution has conferred upon the President authority to draft the militia and National Guard in his discretion, the general points out that the President has not exercised that authority. In the meantime, he says, the status of the State troops "is that of militia called into the service of the United States for one of the purposes specified in the Constitution, that is, to protect the United States from invasion."

There are three classes of troops now in Federal service, according to the opinion. They are: first, the "organized militia" of Texas, Arizona and New Mexico, summoned by the President in his first call for State troops under the Dick law of 1903; second, the National Guard automatically placed in Federal service under the new National defense act, the Hay-Chamberlain bill, and, third, the regular troops. Militia which have not qualified under the new law have status identical with those of Texas, Arizona and New Mexico.

RODRIGUEZ SHOOTING.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

DOUGLAS (Ariz.) July 29.—From Mexican sources it was learned today that the sealed verdict sent by Gen. T. F. Davis to Washington, after the conclusion of the investigation of the shooting of Antonio Rodriguez, a Mexican musician, by Private Tucker, Eleventh Infantry, entirely exonerated Tucker. Gen. Davis sent a copy of the verdict and findings of the court to Gen. Calles.

Modification of the existing orders to border guards is planned by Gen. Davis, it is learned on good authority, to prevent shooting across the international line under similar circumstances to the Rodriguez case. In the future, however, no persons will be permitted to cross the border except at the immigration stations, and sentries will be permitted by the orders to shoot any persons within United States territory who fail to halt when commanded to do so.

BERLIN SCORES REPLY OF GREY.

BERLIN, July 29.—At the German Foreign Office today the following official statement regarding Great Britain's reply to President Wilson's appeal for the feeding of the populations of occupied territories was given out:

"Viscount Grey (British Secretary for Foreign Affairs) answered the American President's appeal to all the belligerent nations to establish an understanding with regard to relief work in Poland, and issued a declaration which is no more nor less than an attempt to include the territories occupied by Germany and Austro-Hungary in the system for the starvation of Germany which has been proclaimed by the British government contrary to all international law.

"Viscount Grey tries to make the German government responsible for the consequences which this incredible plan has for the inhabitants of the occupied territories. This is British hypocrisy, which in this case is especially transparent."

VIENNA ADMITS AUSTRIAN RETREAT.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

VIENNA, July 29 (via London.)—Austrian general headquarters admits a withdrawal of the Austrian forces between the Turia River and the Rovno-Kovel railway on the western front. The official statement issued tonight reads:

"Btween the Turia and the Rovno-Kovel railway, after the repulse of several Russian storming attacks the defenders of the position before the Stokhod were withdrawn behind the river."

STAFF OFFICERS BACK TO DUTY.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, July 29.—Nearly half the officers of the Army General Staff were sent back to their troops today under the provisions of the new army law, which reduces the number of staff officers stationed in Washington by ten. Many of them were engaged on work which was vitally important to preparations for a Mexican campaign. Army officers say the provision was written into the law while differences were being adjusted in conference and was not debated in House or Senate.

The officers affected are Col. Francis H. French, ordered to Chicago, as Chief of Staff Central Department; Lieut.-Col. Frank W. Coe, ordered to San Francisco as Chief of Staff Western Department; Lieut.-Col. William F. Martin, Majs. George A. Nugent, Monroe McFarland and Capts. Tenney Ross, Munroe C. Kerth, Oliver Edwards, Bryant H. Wells and Walter C. Babcock, ordered to Fort Sam Houston, Tex., for assignment by Maj.-Gen. Funston as Chief of Staff for provisional divisions of the National Guards stationed in the Southern Department.

The provision is regarded by army officers as hostile to the General Staff and as interfering seriously with important work being done by it.

Preparedness.

ENDURING BASIS FOR DEFENSES.

Inventory of Our Industrial Resources Complete.

Manufacturers Instructed to Act in Emergency.

Campaign of Three Months Marks a New Era.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, July 29.—The colossal task of making an industrial inventory of the United States, State by State, in an attempt to mobilize America's resources for war, is now virtually completed, according to an announcement today by Chairman Howard E. Coffin, of the Committee on Industrial Preparedness of the Naval Consulting Board of the United States, who has the work in charge. Just how plants, the country over, can adapt their equipment to produce the thousands of things from shells to shaving brushes necessary for the government's use in a national emergency has been worked out with the most extreme care through field reports from engineers and chemists who are members of the American Society of Civil Engineers, the American Institute of Mining Engineers, the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, and the American Chemical Society.

Coincident with the announcement comes the statement from Chairman Coffin that Congress has practically completed legislation which will carry out the committee's entire programme for establishing a firm and enduring foundation for the nation's defense. This will provide for the sending of annual educational orders to American manufacturers in order to teach them during peace how to turn out the military and naval supplies needed in an emergency. An industrial reserve will also be created, so that in time of war the skilled mechanic may be kept at work where his services are most valuable instead of being sent to the firing-line.

THREE MONTHS' CAMPAIGN.

Both the inventory and the legislation growing out of it are the result of a remarkable three-months' campaign made by a volunteer, unpaid organization of business men and engineers. It marks a new era in the relations of the engineer, the manufacturer, and the citizen generally in the safeguarding of the national government, as well as a much closer co-ordination between various governmental agencies. In many States undeveloped resources have been classified and given publicity and new industries are promised as the result of information gathered.

Business men the country over received the investigators with the greatest courtesy and co-operation. In only a few cases did they refuse to give the desired information, and then usually under a misunderstanding of the committee's plans, which was quickly cleared up. Over 30,000 concerns, each doing an annual business of over $100,000, were classified, in addition to many smaller plants with equipment peculiarly suited to turn out material for the fighting line. At the time of the Mexican crisis, Chairman Coffin sent out urgent telegrams to the chairmen of all State boards, urging all possible haste, and Secretary of War Baker detailed five regular army officers, two of them members of the General Staff, to the committee headquarters in New York. Instances from State reports follow:

From Alabama, Chairman Sewell, while reporting a considerable apathy towards military affairs, says that transportation, manufacturing and particularly mineral problems, with especial reference to coke deposits for high explosives, have been gone into carefully. He believes this will be of incalculable benefit in classifying great undeveloped resources, particularly in Northern Alabama.

Arizona, the first State to complete its returns, offered splendid co-operation, according to Chairman John C. Greenway, who said the manufacturers looked upon the annual educational orders with great favor.

Colorado will be greatly benefitted by the survey, according to Chairman R. B. Moore, as local industry will be able to develop much greater elasticity and many new resources till now unknown will be developed. Chairman Samuel Ferguson of Connecticut reports that manufacturers there at first looked askance at the plan, owing to previous unsatisfactory business relations with the government, but that this had been broken down by personal contact.

A permanent co-operation, new in government affairs, between the military service, the technical bureaus of the government and the committee, has been the direct result in the District of Columbia, according to Chairman Parsons. The development of a charcoal industry in Florida, where now almost none is produced, is foreshadowed in the report of Chairman McLain of that State.

Illinois presented one of the heaviest tasks of the survey, for in Chicago alone over 500 chemical and metallurgical plants had to be inventoried. Chairman Frederick K. Copeland spoke enthusiastically of co-operation extended by the Chicago Association of Commerce and the Illinois Manufacturers' Association. Indiana, according to Chairman Barnard, can supply enough canned food for any army that the country could ever put into the field. In addition, there are large supplies of meat, hardtack and biscuits, as well as acid and automobile plants convertible to munition manufacture.

Chairman Wilcox of Iowa reports that a surprisingly large number of industrial plants have been inventoried in that great agricultural State, especially railroad shops. Kansas, though strongly pacifist, has appreciated the common sense of the survey and has given Chairman Whitaker very real co-operation. Chairman Horace V. Winchell of Minnesota reports that in Minneapolis alone over 1400 industries were examined. Missouri reports through Chairman Philip N. Moore that its chief contribution will be lead and zinc, together with harness, clothing, flour, bakery and machine-shop products. Official maps have been prepared with the location of the plants and their railroad connections. Montana reports through Chairman Mathewson that nearly every town in the State has one or two garages with machine shops that could be of great value, while the horse markets at Miles City and Dillon could supply cavalry troops.

Over 1000 high explosive shells a day could be turned out by a railway motor manufacturing company in Nebraska, according to Chairman Holdredge. Guns could also be made there, while food, clothing and mineral supplies are available. Chairman Morris R. Sherred of New Jersey found the work there so heavy that he divided the State into county divisions, with general headquarters in the Newark City Hall. The best results were obtained.

Another illustration of how manufacturers with outputs normally totally unrelated to war can swing their resources to the government in an emergency was shown in the case of a silversmith reported by Chairman J. G. White of New York, who is now making thousands of cartridge cases a day for the French "75's" and bullet jackets at the rate of several million a week. This firm could also make field-gun ammunition if desired. Texas manufacturers, in extending the heartiest co-operation to Chairman John B. Hawley, expressed eagerness to receive some of the proposed educational orders.

Utah, in addition to the routine work, supplied Chairman Ebaugh with maps and drawings of great value. Wyoming, with its multitude of undeveloped resources, will be greatly aided by the survey, according to Chairman Nunn, while the great interstate railway repair shops could contribute materially to a mobilization of national resources. Favorable reports were also received from:

Chairman Reese of Delaware, Chairman Miller of Arkansas, Chairman Schoen of Georgia, Chairman Easton of Idaho, Chairman Richard Montfort of Kentucky, Chairman Lockett of Louisiana, Chairman Jordan of Maine, Chairman Bush of Maryland, Chairman C. L. Edgar of Massachusetts, Chairman Alex Dow of Michigan, Chairman Robertson of Mississippi, Chairman Freudenberger of Nevada, Chairman Fry of New Hampshire, Chairman Couch of North Dakota, Chairman Andros of New Mexico, Chairman Ludlow of North Carolina, Chairman Bozell of Oklahoma, Chairman Mason of Oregon, Chairman Henry D. Sharp of Rhode Island, Chairman Riggs of South Carolina, Chairman McMeen of Ohio, Chairman Clark of South Dakota, Chairman Newell Sanders of Tennessee, Chairman Sinclair of Vermont, Chairman Myers of Virginia, Chairman Powell of Washington, and Chairman White of West Virginia.

A SPECIAL WARNING ABOUT HYDROGEN.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, July 29.—The California Industrial Accident Commission sent out a State-wide warning today to industrial plants using oxy-acetylene welding apparatus to make sure that the oxygen contained no hydrogen or other gases, which, when mixed with oxygen form an explosive mixture. Following the death of seven workmen in Redding, Cal., and San Francisco while using the gas in welding the commission undertook an investigation which was directed by John R. Brownell, the commission's superintendent of safety, while Edwin Higgins, chief mine inspector, and Dr. L. H. Duschak of the United States Bureau of Mines experiment station at the University of California, collaborated.

UNITED STATES WINS OIL SUIT.

Kern County Lands Valued at Ten Millions Involved.

Accounting Must be Rendered by Local Producers.

Will Name Special Master to Prepare a Report.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, July 29.—Judge Benjamin F. Bledsoe of the United States District Court awarded to the United States government today title to 160 acres of Kern county oil land, valued at $10,000,000 and known as the McCutchen section, in the government's ouster suit brought under the Taft withdrawal order of 1909 against G. W. McCutchen, the Standard Oil Company, the Union Oil Company, the General Petroleum Company and other claiming interests. The suit was one of many brought by the government to recover in the aggregate California oil lands valued at several hundred millions of dollars.

The court ordered the appointment of a special master in chancery to make an accounting of the obligations of the various defendants incurred in the taking out of the section oil valued at millions and their respective claims to improvements made at a cost of approximately $1,000,000.

The government alleged in its suit that at the time of the withdrawal looking to the discovery of oil was not being diligently pursued and that no oil had been discovered at the time of the withdrawal order. On the defendants' plea that gas had been found, Judge Bledsoe held that the fact that gas had been discovered did not prejudice the government's case.

Judge Bledsoe intimated he would later order that the government be reimbursed by the companies which have purchased oil from off the tract since the action was first started against the defendants in the Land Office in 1912. Among the purchasing companies, which are named as defendants in the suit are the Standard Oil Company, Independent Oil Producers' Agency, Producers' Transportation Company and the Union Oil Company.

PRODUCING FIRMS.

Among the producing firms on the list of defendants are the Pacific Midway Oil Company, Maricopa Star Oil Company, Maricopa Queen Oil Company, Spreckels Oil Company, General Petroleum Oil Company, Midland Oil Fields Company, Midland Northern Company, Obispo Oil Company and the Midland Southern Company. John D. Spreckels, Jr., is also on the list as a producer.

The special master will make his report to the court regarding the value of the oil taken and the improvements, after which Judge Bledsoe will rule regarding the payment for the oil and the possession of the improvements.

The government case was handled by E. J. Justice, Frank Hall and E. Campbell, special assistants to the Attorney-General. The complaint was filed March 7, 1914. The lands are at present in the hands of a receiver.

ATEST MEXICAN PARTY IS BACKED BY CAPITAL.

Legalistas are Bent on Restoring Country to Rank Among Nations.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

MONTEREY (Mex.) July 29.—It is learned here from a very high source of authority that the new Legalista party, which has taken steps to bring about the establishment of a settled and constitutional government for Mexico, is nothing more than the old Cientifico element in a changed political alignment. While it is true that the leaders of the new movement are for the most part wealthy Cientifico there has been drawn into latest effort to "save Mexico" other men of more or less and business prominence were outside the pale of the comparatively small and exclusive who shared the favors and of the administration of the President Porfirio Diaz.

What is regarded here as probably the most important and significant factor in the Legalista party is the Catholic church. The Cientificos in the old days were not allied with the Catholic clergy, but in order to work for the good of a common cause there has now been a unifying of these forces and of the many-sided elements of citizenship that are under the ban of Carranza.

TELLING FEATURE.

Another telling feature of the new movement is that the organized labor leaders and agitators in Mexico have decided to give it their support. That an enormous amount of money has been and is being used by the promoters of the Legalista party to make its cause known, and to gain recruits to its ranks throughout is well known to the Carranza authorities but they seem so unable to put a stop to the revolutionary propaganda.

It is claimed by secret supporters of the new revolutionary or government plant who are now in Monterey that the Legalista party embraces within its organization the brains and wealth of Mexico." It has the support of all the revolutionary factions, with the exception of that of First Chief Venustiano Carranza. The statement is made by leaders of the new movement that at the proper time there will be an amalgamation of the fighting forces of Felix Diaz, Emiliano Zapata and Francisco Villa in active support of the Legalista party. If reports that are in circulation here are to be believed, large quantities of arms and ammunition have already been shipped into the country for the use of the Legalista army which is being rapidly organized.

MEN OF WEALTH.

No secret is made of the fact that it has been the hope all along of such men of wealth and prominence as Jose Yves Limantour, the Manuel Bonillas, Gen. Vasquez Gomez, Gen. Felipe Angeles, the Maderos, Gen. Luis and his sons, Gonzales, Jorge Vera Estanol, Federico Gamboa, Vasquez Tagle, Enrique C. Creel and a host of others, all of whom are now living in enforced exile in the United States or in countries of Europe, that the American government would step in and place the distressed republic on a settled basis. These men have a good understanding of the real spirit that would actuate the United States government should it interfere in the affairs of this country. They know that it would not be done for the purpose of conquest. They know that Mexico would be turned back to its people when the task of bringing order out of chaos had been accomplished. The Cientificos and other refugees held off taking matters into their own hands in the expectation that the United States government would relieve them of that disagreeable job. They were jubilant over the apparently bright prospects of their long worn-out hopes being finally realized shortly following the Columbus raid, but their expectations were dashed to the ground when the pending crisis was avoided through the passing of diplomatic notes between the Washington authorities and Carranza.

The exiled Mexicans and the vast discontented and suffering element of this country will wait upon the United States to right their wrongs no longer. They are getting together with the view of overthrowing the limited and shadowy authority of Carranza and of putting into power a government that will bring peace and security to the country. An almost unlimited amount of real money is at the disposal of the promoters of this vast and widespread movement. Naturally details of the plans are lacking. It is intimated, however, that the first effort will be to impress Carranza and his chief associates with the futility of them attempting to retain their limited authority any longer. If they can be dispossessed and removed from the situation by representative or peaceful means, so much the better. But if they refuse to accede to the demands that are made upon them they will be driven from the country by force of arms, it is stated.

BIG PLAY STAGED.

The big play is being rapidly staged all over Mexico. In the States of Oaxaca, Vera Cruz, Chiapas and Tabasco, thousands of men are under arms waiting for Felix Diaz to give the word for a concerted uprising. Zapata has given his word to his old friend and adviser, Emilio who is said to be prominently identified with the new movement, that he will give it the support of his army when the order for action is given. Villa is already in the field with a newly-recruited host of followers. He will be able to keep the Carranza troops in Northern Mexico busy while the Legalistas are working their plans for overturning things in other parts of the country. It was not the desire that Villa should occupy a place of prominence in the new movement, but it came unexpectedly at a time when there was no other way out of it but to make advances for his continued support. That he will be removed from the situation at the proper time, in order to placate any adverse sentiment that might be aroused against the Legalista party in the United States, is the common belief here.

All over Mexico emissaries of the Legalistas are secretly going among the starving people and telling them that the time for their succor is near at hand. They are promised that they will be well fed and given employment at good wages when the new era dawns.

TAGLE IS POPULAR.

Vasquez Tagle, who is said to be slated for the provisional Presidency of Mexico under the prospective Legalista rule, is popular with all classes of noncombatants in this country. He is generally regarded as a man of ability and high ideals when it comes to dealing with governmental affairs. It is freely predicted here that the deposing of Carranza will have been accomplished within the next few weeks and that it will be possible to hold a constitutional election throughout the country for the selection of a President and other officials by the middle of October. This is an optimistic view of the situation, to say the least.

HORSES TOO TIRED TO CHASE BANDITS.

WHY VILLA ESCAPED NET OF CARRANZA TROOPS.

Outlaw Chief Lost Much Prestige at Cerro Gordo Engagement, When with Fifty of His Men He Deserted Command and Fled to the Hills.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

CHIHUAHUA CITY (Mex.) July 29.—A detailed report received by Gen. Jacinto Trevino today from Gen. Matias Ramos at Escalon, covering operations in the Chihuahua-Durango bandit campaign of the last month, said that the inability of the government mounts to stand the strain of the long distances covered in the chase enabled Villa several times to escape the net of Carranza troops. The report asserted that there is practically no food or forage in the region; that the condition of the inhabitants is pitiable, and that for this reason he had been unable to obtain supplies quickly enough to enable him to keep up with the more lightly-equipped outlaws.

VILLA LOSES PRESTIGE.

Ramos said that Villa lost much prestige at the Cerro Gordo (Chihuahua) engagement, when with fifty men of his personal bodyguard he deserted the remainder of his command and fled toward the hills for safety. A Carranzista detachment sent in pursuit, he said, killed thirty-three Villistas, but because of the broken country was unable to catch up with the bandit chieftain or members of his staff, who were mounted on blooded animals.

The dispatches pointed out with obvious satisfaction the death of Pablo Salinas, former Villista leader, in the Laguna district, who early in May was charged with attacking a Torreon train bearing several American women refugees.

Ramos added that he had received overtures from a number of leading Villistas looking toward their surrender. Ramos said information received by him located Villa in several widely-separated points in Northern Durango. However, he added, there is no doubt that the bandit chieftain is in the canyons of the Penoles district. The special expedition which he dispatched to pursue the band had not yet reported, but dispatches were expected at any moment.

Gen. Ramos asked ratification of his act in giving to the poor of the Penoles district a herd of 1000 cattle which he seized from the bandits, and also in detailing troops to protect the inhabitants until they harvest their corn crop.

A report received from Gen. Cavazos said that his troops had engaged in a skirmish with the band of Martin Lopez south of Minaca, Chihuahua, captured a prisoner, several carbines, cattle, horses and other equipment.

Man Who Aimed Machine Gun at Carrizal Honored by Mexicans.

[DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

EL PASO, July 29.—Bill Ryan, the American who, it is charged, directed a machine gun fod the Mexicans in the battle of Carrizal, has been promoted from Captain to Lieutenant Colonel in the Carranza army for the part he took in attacking the American cavalry at Carrizal. Ryan, according to Americans who saw him today, is now in Juarez, and boasts that he was in El Paso two days ago. Troopers of the Tenth Cavalry who were in the Carrizal trap and escaped say they recognized Ryan, who formerly was a private in the Twentieth Infantry, operating the Mexican machine gun which killed Capt. Boyd and Lieut. Adair and a dozen of the troopers of the Tenth Cavalry.

FEDERAL LABOR CLEARINGHOUSES.

CAMINETTI WANTS THEM IN EVERY STATE.

Immigration Bureau Makes Important Move to Widen the Government's Campaign Against Unemployment — Co-operation of Postmasters is Urged.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, July 29.—Plans for establishing Federal labor clearinghouses in every State were announced tonight by Commissioner-General Caminetti of the immigration bureau, who directs the Department of Labor's employment service. This is the most important of several steps decided upon to strengthen the scope of the government's campaign against unemployment.

The State headquarters will undertake to disseminate information as to local conditions and make possible a steady flow of men who are out of work to the positions for which they are best suited. They will work in co-operation with the existing State and municipal bodies and with employers.

Mr. Caminetti also announced the fact that he has worked out arrangements with the War and Navy departments by which it is hoped that all men in the army and navy, on retiring, may find ready for them the kind of work they want in the place they want it. The men will be asked to fill out slips, a month before retiring, showing what they are capable of doing. In addition, special efforts will be made to provide employment for members of enlisted men's families.

A young men and boys' department similar to the women and girls' department inaugurated last May is to be created by the service. This will have the double purpose of securing employment for boys over 16 and under 21 and of developing their efficiency through elementary and vocational training.

Co-operation with the postmasters of the country, which already has greatly aided the service, not only by spreading information as to general labor conditions, but also in securing work for individual applicants, has been greatly extended, Mr. Caminetti said, is the result of conferences held this wek.

SANITATION ON BORDER IN EXCELLENT SHAPE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, July 29.—Troops along the border and in Mexican territory are in excellent condition so far as health and sanitation are concerned, according to a report made public today by Dr. Richard Pearson Strong of Harvard University. Dr. Strong made an extended tour of all the border camps at the request of Acting Surgeon-General Birmingham, of the War Department. He was accompanied by Robert Bacon, formerly Secretary of State.

"In only a few of the cases was there any room for improvement," says Dr. Strong's report, "and conditions there were being speedily rectified. Food of good quality and sufficient in amount is being served. The health of the troops on the whole is excellent. Sanitation of the camps is most efficiently looked after by experts."

SEATTLE (Wash.) July 29.—A preliminary telegraphic report received today by Adjt.-Gen. Maurice Thompson of the Washington National Guard, from Maj. C. B. Blethen, who was sent to Calexico, Cal., to inspect the Washington guardsmen's camp, reported conditions excellent. In his telegraphic report, Maj. Blethen says: "I find the troops in splendid condition physically and morally. The situation is a thousand per cent. better than I anticipated. The men have comforts and luxuries entirely unexpected.

"The heat is more bearable than the figures sound. I cannot find anything to criticise, except the government's delay of pay rolls. I will have much to say in praise of the officers and men in my formal written report."

MEXICAN PRESS DEFAMES AMERICA.

COLUMNS USED TO BELITTLE UNITED STATES ARMY.

Boast is Freely Made that Carranza Soldiers are Far Superior to Those of this Country and that Fear Governed Our Negotiations with Germany.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

MONTEREY (Mex.) July 22.—Columns of space are being devoted by the Mexican press these days to ridiculing and belittling the United States. The boast is freely made that the soldiers of the Carranza army are far superior to those of the United States. Many wonderful stories which have no foundation in fact are published in the newspapers of the different cities of this country, for the purpose of furthering the campaign of defamation and ridicule of Americans. In a late issue of El Heraldo of Parral, is published the following:

"Germany has answered the demands of the United States for the sinking of the Lusitania and the sinking of the Nebraska. Hoch!

"Hurrah! For the insolent pirates of the uncultured hearts, devoid of all pity. . . . Germany's brutal defiance of the United States passes affront. Never in the history of the world has a so-called strong nation been so insulted with another with so much premeditation and such disdain.

"The gauntlet thrown in the face of the trans-Atlantic country (the United States) will not be picked up by the latter; it will stick in its face like bloody saliva; the sun of all the centuries will not dry it. . . . And this offended country, unable to seek refuge in war, will seek refuge in rhetoric. It will not fight; it will talk.

"Prof. Woodrow Wilson, President of the Yankees of America, seems to me a kind of fox with the experiences of a wolf—soul of a lawyer and a pedagogue who adores sophism as a diety, and loves dialect like a professor in a university. . . . And the White House there blows a wind of perfidious mediocrity which is surprisingly like a timid incapacity.

"I ask the pardon of the dead and the survivors of the Lusitania and the Nebraska if I say their great misfortune, after moving me deeply, has caused me content. Yes, I mixed a great pleasure with this sadness. Why? Because the torpedoes which sunk these ships sunk with them the honor of the United States. . . . The sword of the red beard has wounded the cheek of Uncle Sam, and this makes me jump when I see the barbarians of that place conquered by the barbarians of this (Germany.) . . . Ah! corsairs of the Hudson and the Mississippi, who come with ships to ruin my weak country, now are you humiliated, now are you conquered. I know you will not avenge this affront; you have your soul on too high a plane for that. . . .

"I know that you will not avenge the insult; fear will still the sails and freeze the steam of the machines of your ships. . . . The United States will go to Honduras to salute the tomb of Manual Bonilla, who sold you a country, who had no other fault than that of tolerating your black, infuriated despotism of a traitor; you will go to Salvador to see if it is possible to kill Leonidas on the walls of Sparta; you will come to Mexico, where the murdered of Vera Cruz will bid you welcome in phantom boats. What is assured, you will not go to Europe. . . . I am right to believe that on that day the ineffable Mr. Wilson and the inexhaustible Mr. Bryan will have disappeared from the face of the earth, one with his silent mediocrity and the other with his torrential verbosity . . . and this consoles me."

FREE DISCUSSION OF THE WAR AIMS.

GERMAN NATIONAL COMMITTEE DISCUSSES CAMPAIGN.

Many of the Most Prominent Men in the Empire will Start Tuesday to Educate the People on Conditions to be Asked in Making Peace.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

BERLIN, July 29 (via London.)—There are indications that more freedom in the discussion of the war aims will be granted in the immediate future; the "German National Committee" will begin a great speaking campaign on Tuesday, with a list of speakers including many of the most prominent men in Germany.

At the same time, "the independent committee of obtaining an honorable peace" will open its activities, and "the committee on the guiding principles for the way to a lasting peace" will convene in Munich.

The Lokal Anzeiger says:

"A discussion of the peace aims is not yet permitted. We assume that following the proclamations of the German National Committee, the government now considers that the time has come to let down the bars on the censorship. We take it to be a self-understandable condition that the principle of 'equal rights for all' will be applied here, and that what is permitted one will not be forbidden another."

The Lokal Anzeiger refers to its campaign for freedom in the discussion of peace conditions, and continues:

"We do not know yet what the different committees will bring us, and therefore await their action and programmes before talking about them. But we know precisely that if the freedom of speech is permitted one person, all the others have the same right."

THREE STATES DEMAND RAILWAY MEN ARBITRATE.

Commission of Nevada Joins with New Mexico and Arizona in Resolutions Asking that Differences Which Threaten Tie-up of Transportation Should be Settled in Friendly Manner.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CARSON CITY (Nev.) July 29.—The Railroad Commission of Nevada has joined with the Arizona Corporation Commission and the State Corporation Commission of New Mexico in passing resolutions demanding arbitration between employees and the railways in the threatened strike of men in the train and engine service.

This demand for arbitration is based upon the fact that the general public would be the chief sufferer in the tying up of the railway service of the United States.

Representations of the action taken by the commissions of Arizona, Nevada and New Mexico are to be laid before the commissions of California, Idaho, Washington, Idaho and Utah so that every one of the Western States will be officially on record in favor of preventing loss to the shipping and traveling public, which would be avoided by forced arbitration between the railways and the men.

THE RESOLUTIONS.

The resolutions demanding the settlement by arbitration follow:

"Whereas, employees in train, engine and yard service approximating 18 per cent. of the total employees of the railroads of the United States have made demands on the railroad for changes in working schedules, which demands have been declined, but with an offer on the part of the management of the railroads to arbitrate, which offer has been declined by said employees.

"This small percentage of the total employees of the railroads have declined to arbitrate and are now voting to determine whether or not to authorize the calling of a general strike.

"An interruption of the operation of the railroads throughout the country would result in great hardship to the general public; to the 82 per cent. of railroad employees not involved; to all employees in other lines of industry dependent upon transportation and would result in an unnecessary and intolerable condition.

"We do not attempt to express judgment on the merits of the controversy, but in the interests of the general public and if possible to prevent the inevitable distress attending a general suspension of transportation service, we do hereby,

"Resolve that we view with disfavor any tendency to demoralize and disrupt transportation service, and on behalf of the public who have no voice in the controversy but would be the chief sufferers from a strike we earnestly appeal to the employees to reconsider their refusal and accept the offer of the railroads to arbitrate to the end that a fair and peaceful settlement of the issue may be effected.

"ARIZONA CORPORATION COMMISSION.

"F. A. JONES,
"Chairman.
"A. W. COLE,
"Commissioner."

The State Corporation Commission of New Mexico passed the following:

"Resolved, that for the mutual welfare of all concerned we appeal to the employees to reconsider their refusal to arbitrate and join with the managers in a just and peaceful adjudication of the issues through the medium of arbitration.

"STATE CORPORATION COMMISSION OF NEW MEXICO.

"M. S. Groves,
"Chairman."

The resolution of the Railroad Commission of Nevada declares:

"Whereas, employees in train, engine and yard service on the railroads of the United States have made demands on the managements for changes in their working schedules, which demands have been declined but with an offer by the managements to arbitrate. The employees have refused to arbitrate and are now voting to determine whether or not to authorize the calling of a general strike. The railroads are public servants and their operation is essential to the public welfare. A general strike, with all the hardships, waste, suffering and loss that would follow from demoralization of the service, is at once serious to contemplate and is intolerable. The principles of arbitration are recognized and approved by all civilized nations and peoples and arbitration is regarded as the most effective method for securing fair, peaceful and equitable adjustment to all concerned.

"With no attempt to express judgment on the merits of the controversy, and for the single purpose of safeguarding the general public, the employees and the railroads from the widespread and intense distress inevitably attending a general suspension of transportation service we do hereby,

"Resolve that it is our earnest request and solicitude that the refusal of the employees to accede to the offer of the managements to arbitrate be reconsidered and that in regard for the public welfare they submit to arbitration. Such a course will preserve to the general public uninterrupted transportation service; to the employees and managements, tranquil and mutually beneficial relations, and will accomplish the desired results without the many hardships and sacrifices a general strike would entail.

CLEMENCY TOWARD IRISH IS HOPE OF THE SENATE.

Casement Resolution is Greatly Modified, but President is Asked to Transmit Views of the Upper House to the British Government — Majority of Foreign Relations Committee is Overruled.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, July 29.—By a vote of 46 to 19 the Senate today adopted a resolution directing President Wilson to transmit to the British government an expression of hope that it would exercise clemency in the treatment of Irish political prisoners.

By its action the Senate overturned the report of a majority of its Foreign Relations Committee and followed a course outlined in a minority report made by Chairman Stone and Senators O'Gorman and Pittman.

Despite the counsel of Senators that such a resolution would do the convicted Irish knight's cause more harm than good, and against the refusal of Senator Martine, the author of the original Casement resolution, to accept it as a substitute for his own, the Senate adopted the following resolution submitted by Senator Pittman:

"Resolved, that the Senate expresses the hope that the British government may exercise clemency in the treatment of Irish prisoners and that the President be requested to transmit this hope to the British government."

The vote was preceded by a debate, during which Senator Phelan led the speaking for the resolution and Senator Williams opposed it.

Three Democrats, Fletcher, Pomerene and Williams voted against the resolution. Senators Lodge, Borah, McCumber, Oliver and Brandegee, all Republican members of the Foreign Relations Committee, voted against it. Chairman Stone and Senator Pittman, Democratic member of the committee, voted for it.

American Ambassador Page at London today cabled the State Department that Great Britain insists upon excluding from England and Ireland, Eugene Hughes Kelly of New York, treasurer of the Irish relief fund; his asistant, Joseph Smith, and Mrs. Kelly. They will leave England Monday on the American liner Philadelphia.

Ambassador Page has been informed by the Foreign Office that the decision to exclude the three Americans was irrevocable. No reason for exclusion of the Irish relief workers was given by Ambassador Page, who said that during their detention at Liverpool the British authorities had permitted them to remain at a hotel without being actually imprisoned.

Despite the apparently final decision, State Department officials still hoped today that the exclusion order might be modified.

Additional representations in behalf of the Americans were sent yesterday by the State Department and also by the British Embassy.

FUNSTON ISSUES STRINGENT ORDER AT NOGALES.

Secretary of War Takes Ground that Duties of Troops are Incompatible with Newspaper Work and Many Writers at the Front are Thereby Affected.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NOGALES (Ariz.) July 29.—Under an order received tonight by Col. Schreiber, the commanding officer of the Seventh Regiment, the authority of every newspaper correspondent is rescinded. The order, which is from Gen. Funston, states that the Secretary of War considers that the duties of an officer or enlisted man in active service or on duty with any troops in the service of the United States are incompatable with those of a newspaper correspondent.

The order granting permission for a certain number of reporters to accompany the National Guard organizations was issued on June 24. In the Seventh Regiment twenty-three enlisted men, who have been making side money by newspaper work, are affected by the order. In the Fifth California Regiment, eighteen men will be relieved from newspaper duties, while in the Second California only eleven are affected. Extensive preparations have been made for the inspection which is being held this week by Gen. George Bell, inspector-in-chief of the United States Army. A preliminary inspection was begun today throughout the Seventh by Maj. Farrell of the Fifth California. This inspection will not be finished until Monday morning.

The chief surgeon has made a request to Gen. Funston for a furlough for Lieut. Phillip Stephens of the Seventh Regiment Medical Corps, who was discharged from the field hospital today. The request is expected to be honored tonight and the lieutenant will probably leave for Los Angeles tomorrow.

LIVELY MAN HUNT IN CITY STREETS.

ARTISTS LEAVE STUDIOS TO AVENGE GIRL.

Unknown Follows a Dancing School Pupil into Downtown Office Building Until Her Cries Give Warning of Insult—Volunteers Give Chase.

The days of '49, when strong men took the law into their own hands and meted out justice to the insulter of women, were almost revived late yesterday afternoon when an angry mob of men chased a youth who had attempted to assault 9-year-old Edna Schofield, on the eighth floor of a downtown office building, through Broadway and up Ninth street.

By dodging into an alleyway on Ninth street, the hunted man escaped, and his pursuers were forced to give up the chase, disappointed.

Yesterday afternoon, little Edna Schofield started from her home to attend a class at Madame Matildita's dancing school. She left her car two blocks away, as she was early, and walked. Half-way to her destination she noticed a young man following, and increased her pace, but the youth also walked faster. At the office building she turned hastily in and took the elevator. The stranger also entered.

Seeking to "shake" her follower, the girl got off at the eighth floor and entered the rest room there. Disregarding all convention, the young man also entered. At this point the girl became frightened. She wanted to scream, but found herself powerless. Finally she gasped out, "What do you want?"

The insulting answer she received, and the obscene actions that followed, released the girl's voice and her piercing cries penetrated to the several studios on the floor.

The stranger took fright at the cries and dashed into the hall. Men from the studio were there before him, but because they did not realize what had happened, failed to stop him as he dashed down the stairs, unable to wait for the elevator.

The impromtu posse started after him, gaining volunteers at every floor. At Broadway, the fugitive ran toward Ninth street, and turned west. He disappeared through an alley, where his trail was lost.

Motorcycle Officer Gillette of Central Station investigated, but could find no trace of the missing man. According to the description furnished by the girl, the man was about 25 years old, smooth shaven and weighed about 130 pounds. He was medium height.

BRITISH REGAIN STEAMER APPAM

Germans Must Give up Priz Federal Judge Rules.

What to do with Teuton Cre is Now the Question.

Appeal will be Taken to th U. S. Supreme Court.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NORFOLK (Va.) July 2 —Pos session of the British liner App brought into Hampton Roads February by a German prize cre was awarded today to her Engl owners, the African Steam Nav tion Company, by Judge Wadd the Federal District Court. An ap peal will be taken when the oppor tunity is given next Wednesday the final decision in the libel pro ceedings probably will be given by the Supreme Court.

In the meantime the Appam w stay at Newport News in the custo of the United States Marshal, or turned over to her owners und bond. Her cargo has been sold $634,000 and the money is held by the court.

What is to become of Lieut. the prize commander, and his of twenty-two men must be mined by the State Departme Washington. They have been aboard the Appam, claiming the property of the German ment, but the general belief here is that they will be interned.

REJECTS GERMAN THEORY.

Judge Waddill's decision held the Appam lost her status as a when she entered American torial waters to remain indefin He rejected the German conte that the Prussian-American tre of 1799 permitted German prize be tied up in American waters held that prizes could be brough only by a war vessel acting as co voy and then only for the tempor causes recognized by internation law.

An opinion given by Secreta Lansing to the German Ambass to the same effect was quoted length by the court.

A decision by a German pr court that the Appam was a law prize was held to be without e upon proceedings of the court the United States. The same G man court recently adjudged pri money, some $750,000 in gold, tak from the Appam when she was ca tured off the Coast of Spain the raider Moewe.

FROM THE DECISION.

"The court's conclusion," the d cision reads, "is that the manne bringing the Appam into the wat of the United States, as well as presence in these waters, consti a violation of the neutrality of United States; that she came in out bidding or permission; th is here in violation of the law she is unable to leave for lack crew, which she cannot pro augment without further v of neutrality; that in her pr condition she is without lawful to be and remain in the waters she, as between her captors owners, to all practical purp must be treated as abandoned as stranded upon our shores, that her owners are entitled to res tution of their property, which court should award, irrespective the prize court proceedings of the court of the imperial governme of the German Empire; and it w be so ordered."

The court decided that a prize ves sel cannot legally be brought into neutral waters without a convoy. Th Appam was brought in under h own steam after capture by the German raider Moewe, January 17.

HAGUE TREATY CONSTRUED.

The court disposed of The Hagu treaty briefly, holding that it w not applicable, inasmuch as Gre Britain never accepted it, b pointed out that the attitude of th American delegates to the conven tion was shown by their rejection article 23, which would have gu anteed a prize vessel asylum in tral waters. The Prussian trea however, was given much atten by the court.

"The history of the adoption this treaty with Prussia," the cision reads, "the conditions brought about the same, and contemporaneous opinions of eminent statesmen of that day participated in its procuremen acceptance, by the two countrie been gone into fully in the effor show that it was meant to asylum to prizes in neutral w and that its particular purpose to afford the United States an lum for their prizes in Pr waters.

"Whatever may have been view of those representing this c try at this time, it seems clear the court that no such enlarged far-reaching view of the treaty now claimed for it can for a mo be entertained at this day in light of the present methods of fare and the laws, rules and regul tions affecting the neutrality of tions in existence now for nearly hundred years.

REVIEW OF THE TREATY.

"A careful review of the pr visions of the Prussian treaty read in the light of rulings and terpretations placed upon other temporary treaties," the de continued, "especially Article 17 the treaty of amity and comme with France in 1778, convinces court that the Secretary of S ruling is correct and that under same, prizes cannot be brough the waters of the United States the purpose of laying up by a master, but can only be brough by the capturing vessel herself war vessel acting as convey to prize and then not for an indef period, but for the temporary recognized by international law."

Attorneys were notified that court would hear any motions desired to make next Wednesday noon. Consul von Schilling, who n court with Lieut. Berg, appeal doubtless would be "I never dreamed," he de that any grounds could be f or taking the Appam from u

The vessel may be restored to former owners under bond n appeal, or held at Newport n the custody of a United Marshal as at present.

Dear Experiment.

SEATTLE FINDS PROHIBITION IS A SPECTACULAR FAILURE.

Realty Values Tumble, Rents Drop, Capital is Scared Off, the Taxes are Raised and Tourists are Driven Away, while City's Morals also Suffer.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SEATTLE, July 26—This, the largest city in the United States to indulge in the luxury—the word is used advisedly—of prohibition, now has been rudely awakened to the manifold disadvantages and enormous expense of its new-found virtue.

It has taken less than six-months to convince Seattle that prohibition, at least as it affects a large, growing city, is a moral and economic failure! As for the Washington "dry" law itself, it is an admitted travesty!

As a result Seattle in a business way is today struggling desperately to keep its head above water. It is gasping hard after only half a year of the experiment the farmers of the State of Washington forced it to undertake. Seattle voted "wet."

Business now is bad here. Capital, ever timid, has sensed the changed and unsettled conditions growing out of prohibition, and fled however, badly frightened. The Seattle real estate market has been knocked cold—lifeless. Rents in office and store buildings have dropped to earth with a sickening thud.

Seattle banks have plenty of money. Early last winter these institutions and others loaned money readily on home and business property here. They are not doing it now on the same basis. Prohibition has forced a change. It has made necessary a reappraisal of much of the realty in the city.

VALUATIONS SHRINK.

Residents who approach banks and real estate firms for real estate loans are given money, if at all, on a "prohibition" valuation of their property. For example, the writer owns a home in Seattle. Last fall, before Seattle went "dry," a conservative appraiser said the place was worth $6500.

On this valuation one had no difficulty in obtaining a mortgage loan on the property for $2500. At the time the loan was made the president and secretary of the bank from which it was secured both saw the place. A month ago the writer, after having reduced his loan to $2250, applied to the same bank for an additional $250 on the same property.

Did he get the money? He did not. Why? Prohibition!

"We will have to reappraise your property," the bank officer said.

"But why?" the writer protested. "I know the property personally gave me $2500 on it less than six months ago. Moreover, I have put more than $500 in improvements since the first loan was made."

The banker grew confidential. Almost all residents of Seattle become confidential when discussing the effects of the prohibition law. They talk about its failure either not at all or in whispers, even among themselves. Still others regard the law as a howling success—and, as may be expected, paint its glories in vivid colors.

It is only their voice that reaches us, in California—only theirs and the literature of the Anti-Saloon League!

But to get back to the banker. He said:

"You know prohibition has upset realty values in Seattle. Of course, we are not admitting that, but, nevertheless, it's true—though not for publication. Since January 1 we have had to reappraise about 75 per cent. of all our realty holdings. We've had to mark them down."

After the new "prohibition" appraisal had been made on the writer's home it was found to have depreciated so rapidly in six months, notwithstanding the improvements mentioned, that the bank could not see its way clear to loan the extra money solicited!

And so it goes. This is merely a concrete case in point.

DOWNTOWN EFFECTS.

The effect of prohibition upon Seattle business property has been startling, if not heartbreaking. Saloons almost invariably pay high rents. Advocates of prohibition, before the "dry" measure became effective, loudly proclaimed it would not lower rents.

Property owners and real estate men, to their bitter sorrow, now know otherwise. Where before prohibition many Seattle office and business buildings, some of them in choice locations, were yielding handsome profits, their returns today suffice only to pay the taxes and insurance on them.

Not long ago the writer was talking with a man who has heavy realty holdings in Seattle and found him heartsick. Among other properties he owns a large business block in the southern part of the city. Until January 1, he said, he had rented two of his ground-floor storerooms to saloons.

"When prohibition came in," he declared, "I speedily discovered that if I wanted to rent these rooms at all it would have to be at a much lower figure. As it turned out, I am now getting just exactly half what the saloons paid.

"Before prohibition I leased the entire second floor of this building for $400 a month. I now get only $200. Other landlords will tell you the same story. So far as I am concerned, I am hanging on to my property by my teeth. Its revenues barely pay the taxes and insurance."

"Why don't they sell their property, then," says the exasperated prohibition fan. Yes, indeed! Why don't they? Well, they can't. That's the reason. Prohibition has hit the Seattle realty market such a terrific blow, and in such a tender spot, that the most optimistic dealer there refuses to predict when it will HITS VITAL PLACE.

And a blow at property values in any city is indeed a body blow. It strikes at the heart of things. Unless recovery is rapid, prosperity loses the fight when the blow lands. If the word of bankers, naturally the keenest students of economics in almost any community, that prohibition has undermined Seattle realty values may be accepted as fact, the effect of the law may be imagined.

Many informed Seattle business men and financiers actually go so far as to say (though confidentially) that prohibition, added to the business depression on this Coast, would have caused a serious panic in the Northwestern city, but for the return to normal condition of Washington's great $90,000,000 lumber industry.

Prohibition, of course, also has raised Seattle's taxes. Seattle saloons paid about $300,000 into the city treasury in annual license fees. This loss of revenue had to be provided for in the city's tax budget. Missing also are the huge sums breweries, bottling works and allied industries paid in taxes.

As usual, the people are paying the bills!

TOURISTS MISSED.

Seattle is a beautiful city, ideally located. Its scenic attractions are many and diverse. The summers here are cool. Tourist travel in years past has been heavy, and the city has come to depend upon it as a definite source of revenue for its hotels and business men.

Since the advent of prohibition in Seattle there has been a marked falling off in tourist business, according to hotel and transportation men. Although the secret is closely guarded here it is now known that thousands of tourists, disliking to be routed through "dry" territory, are giving Washington and Oregon the cold shoulder.

It is impossible to estimate what this loss means in dollars and cents. That it is very large, however, is certain. Eastern men almost without number who invested their money here first visited the city as tourists.

Is the same thing not true of Los Angeles?

The fear also is (privately) expressed in Seattle that prohibition is discouraging new capital. Business men here agree that if this apprehension should prove justified—it still is too early to tell, perhaps—Seattle's dreams of growth never will be realized as long as prohibition endures.

Pacific Coast history is pregnant with the truth that the industrial and commercial expansion of cities on this seaboard is impossible without outside capital. And there are those in Seattle who unhesitatingly affirm eastern capitalists will not invest their money in a section where business conditions, as in a prohibition State, are subject to change without notice.

NO MORAL ADVANTAGE.

Is the grief prohibition has brought Seattle worth while? Are the results, from the moral side, sufficient to justify the heavy financial burden its people are compelled to bear? The answer to both questions is a decisive "no," in the judgment of those of her residents who are honest with themselves and fear not to express their true opinions.

But, ah! Think of the moral uplift that prohibition induces, you say, if you are a "dry." Consider that prohibition had rid the good State of Washington of the Demon Rum and its attendant evils. Gone are the saloons! No more will Seattle and its sister cities in this northern comonwealth have these accursed "dens of hell," where the young are taught to drink and their elders squander their wages and let their families starve.

All this, say you, and more if you are a prohibitionist. You add, perhaps, and with feeling, that where once men tossed their money on the bar with an unsteady hand, they are now forced to save this cash and buy shelter, food and clothing for themselves and those dependent upon them for support.

And, then, again, if you believe in State wide prohibition, you point with pride to the decrease of crime in "dry" territory. You say the jails and penitentiaries in such "favored" sections have closed their doors, to be converted into huge banks, or something, because of a lack of lawbreakers to fill them. And so with the lunatic asylums, you admonish. Indeed!

LAW A SWISS CHEESE.

Those who say these and other idle things should visit Seattle and see there the ruins of their air castles!

For Seattle, when all is said and done, has one of the plain or garden variety of prohibition laws that does not prohibit. Even the most rabid prohibitionist in Seattle today confesses that freely already the "dry" law in Washington has been shot so full of holes that, by comparison, it makes the proverbial Swiss cheese, an invention of Kolb and Dill, look as sound as an unworked stone quarry!

The law has been violated successfully so often and in such a multiplicity of ways that the poor old thing is battered beyond recognition. In fact, the Seattle army of bootleggers, fake druggists and others who derive a neat competence from the sale of diluted liquor to the thirsty inhabitants does not recognize it at all.

As a matter of fact, Seattle is not "dry." It merely drinks a cheaper and more harmful brand of intoxicants. Instead of men who procured their strong drink openly and above board, as of yore, prohibition has made sneaks and lawbreakers out of its people who drink. Many who did not drink at all before prohibition came in, months ago, tumbled with an awful crash from the water wagon, and now may be detected in whispered converse with some friendly "drug" clerk.

PROHIBITION BAR-ROOMS.

A prominent Seattleite recently epitomized the situation thus:

"The only difference is that the drug stores are selling the liquor instead of the saloons."

This is not quite literally true. As yet Seattle drug stores have not installed footrails for their liquor customers—which makes them (the prohibition grog shops) uncomfortable and not at all homelike. It also departs from strict accuracy in that drug store booze in Seattle, although dispensed at 75 cents the half-pint, is of a quality decidedly inferior to that once procurable at saloons, hotels, cafes and restaurants.

Soon after the prohibition law became effective, seven men, in different parts of Seattle, ventured into drug stores and sought to assuage their thirst with alcohol. Three of them died from the effects of what they received.

Seattle is willing to concede that the Washington prohibition law has at least two fatal defects. One of these is that it permits drug stores to ship into the State and hold in their possession for sale an unlimited quantity of intoxicants. This had the immediate effect of inducing everyone who wanted to sell whisky, including many former saloonkeepers, promptly to enter the drug store business.

Within two months from the time the State went dry Seattle found itself possessed of exactly thirty-two brand new drug stores. The new demand for drugs was stupendous. In a canvass of the State a few weeks ago the Washington State Board of Pharmacy found that of the total number of new drug stores thirty had sprung up in this city.

The "dry" squad of the Seattle police department has wrecked a number of these places and their proprietors have been fined for selling liquor in violation of the law. But like weeds, drug stores, at times, can spring into being over night, and so the raiders, once they have the municipal garden clean, have to begin all over again on the new crop.

POLICE ARE BUSY.

In this connection, the writer suggests that the chap who is looking for perpetual motion should pay close attention to the praiseworthy performance of Sergt. V. P. Putnam, in charge of the police "dry" squad here. He may not be quite it, but it is a cinch he is always running.

It may be conceived how this drug store clause in the prohibition law makes all efforts to enforce it, no matter how sincere, a farce. Once the fake druggist in Seattle has the liquor in his possession it is easy to get rid of it.

The law provides that he can sell only for emergency uses and that he must keep a record of all such sales. In the space of sixty days one Seattle druggist, a police investigation showed, bought $10,000 worth of liquor and $450 worth of drugs for his establishment.

About six weeks ago officials of the Washington State Board of Pharmacy undertook a comprehensive investigation of all the drug stores in Seattle. They went about their work quietly and scrupulously avoided all newspaper men. When the probe was completed, the board caused warrants of arrest to be issued for thirty druggists.

A majority of them were taken in custody for alleged violation of the prohibition law—the illegal sale of liquor. The others answered to a charge of failing to file with the State Board of Pharmacy certificates of ownership and location, as required by the pharmacy statute.

This investigation, among other things, disclosed how "wet" Seattle really is. Also the astounding number of "emergencies" that confront the resident here, as seen by the local druggists. The board's scrutiny of the records of one small pharmacy in an outlying district revealed the fact this store had taken care of more than 200 "emergencies" of one kind and another in thirty days.

BIZARRE EMERGENCIES.

These included sixty-seven automobile accidents in the neighborhood in which those injured had to be supplied with liquor; thirty-two elevator mishaps, in spite of the fact there are no buildings with elevators within a radius of several miles of the store, and forty-four cases of illness. Then there also were many who obtained an odd drink or two by means of a convenient doctor's "prescription," which the law also allows.

The prohibition statute says, however, that a physician shall not issue a prescription for intoxicating liquor until after he has satisfied himself the patient requires the same for medicinal purposes. So it was that the State investigators, in their visits to Seattle drug stores, discovered an almost unbelievable number of persons requiring strong drink for their health.

In another drug store the board members were able to throw a new light upon human capacity for intoxicants. In checking over the supply the proprietor of this illicit establishment had on hand with its records of sales it was learned ten barrels of whisky were unaccounted for. Asked about this discrepancy the druggist replied in a plaintive, injured tone:

"My son and I drink a little now and then."

Ten barrels in thirty days is not so worse for two men!

The climax to this bit of comedy was staged in court when the thirty druggists aforementioned were placed on trial before the State pharmacy board to show cause why their licenses should not be revoked. Every druggist had his lawyer.

When the board assembled there were lawyers to the front of them, lawyers to the back of them and on either side of them. And they sure did volley and thunder. They began by notifying the board it was without jurisdiction. The law under which the board was acting, said the legal luminaries, had been superseded by the prohibition statute.

The board hemmed and hawed, and finally considered the matter behind closed doors. There it determined it had jurisdiction and also that it would proceed with the matter in hand. So the lawyers took another tack. They made up a nice round-robin and presented it. This stated in blunt and rather impolite and insinuating terms that the president of the pharmacy board, who is a prominent Seattle druggist, had caused to be shipped to his own pharmacy more liquor than all of the defendants combined!

Seattle found considerable humor in this situation. The board president later denied the truth of this soft impeachment, and offered to show the attorneys and other curious persons into his cellar, but it was no go. The joke had been sprung. The board dismissed the cases against several of the druggists. The cases of the remainder charged are still pending.

It may be thought that such flagrant violations of the liquor law are due in large measure to a lack of vigilance on the part of the authorities. Such is not the case. Official Seattle takes the position, as do the newspapers, that the prohibition law should be strictly enforced.

In six months, however, it has become painfully apparent that the law simply cannot be enforced. The police, the Sheriff's office and the State officers do their best to catch transgressors and have them punished, but the illegal selling goes on just the same.

Another thing: Seattle is finding great difficulty in convicting those who break the prohibition law. The courts and the prosecuting attorneys are willing and industrious, but lawyers have found so many loopholes in the law that many cases are lost.

HOW IT IS DONE.

Here is an illustration of how one clever professional Seattle bootlegger, aided by his attorney, evaded prosecution under the prohibition law and also extradition to another State to answer to still another charge.

This man was informed that a deputy sheriff was on his way from Oklahoma to Seattle for him. He called on his lawyer. He learned that a Federal charge holds priority over a State charge. One night he chose a conspicuous corner in Seattle, and when sure that an officer was looking, passed a bottle of narcotics to another man, a confederate.

He was promptly arrested by a Federal agent under the Harrison Drug Act, and when arraigned before a United States commissioner, was bound over for action by the Federal grand jury. The disappointed deputy sheriff from Oklahoma returned home without his prisoner. The defendant was released on bail. A chemist analysis of the narcotics showed them to consist of camphor and moth balls. The grand jury could do nothing except turn the bootlegger free, and he immediately merged with the landscape across the British Columbia border!

The other acknowledged defeat in the law is that portion of it which permits liquor in limited quantities to be shipped into the State from the outside. Druggists may obtain as much as they want, but not so with individuals. They must go to the County Auditor's office in the county in which they reside and there obtain a permit for their booze.

The law allows an individual to purchase and receive under permit two quarts of liquor or fourteen quarts of beer every fifteen days. The choice must be made. One may not have both. These permits are issued in Seattle at the rate of about 600 a day.

ENCOURAGES FORGERY.

This provision of the statute has been found to encourage wholesale forgery of permits by those wishing to obtain more than a legal amount of liquor. A great many cases of this kind, involving large quantities of booze, have come to light here in the past few months. The guilty parties never have been caught.

It is manifest that with such a provision as this in the prohibtion law, Washington, no matter how much the imagination may be taxed, never actually will become "dry."

Friends of prohibition assert that while the present law is defective it can be repaired. Maybe so. But tinkering with the law will not bring back Seattle's prosperity, in the opinion of students of the situation, nor will it prevent those who want to sell whisky from selling it or those who want to drink it from drinking it!

As to the assertion of advocates of prohibiton that the heads of families use the money formerly spent for liquor in the payment of their bills, it may be stated that none of the collection agencies in Seattle has yet failed for want of business. Nor have the stores abandoned their credit bureaus.

The city and county jails throughout the State of Washington are still doing a thriving business. Nobody yet has suggested closing them. Also people are still going insane in Washington. And some of them are doing it because prohibition has robbed them altogether of a chance to support themselves and families!

WARNING TO USERS OF HAIR REMOVERS

Don't Experiment with So-Called Superfluous Hair Removers.

If you use a simple toilet preparation and it proves worthless you only lose money. When you remove hair with pastes, rub-on preparations and liquid imitations of DeMiracle which merely remove hair from the surface of the skin, it is a very serious matter, because it will either result in permanent disfigurement or cost you many dollars and take months or possibly years to gain control of hair growths which have been stimulated by the use of such preparations.

The proper way to remove hair is to devitalize it. Only DeMiracle, the original liquid hair remover, can accomplish this result. It does this by absorption, therefore it attacks hair under the skin as well as on the skin.

DeMiracle works equally well for removing hair from face, neck, arms and under arms, or from limbs to prevent it from showing through stockings. Avoid disappointment, buy DeMiracle by name and you will get the only depilatory that has ever been indorsed by reputable physicians, surgeons, dermatologists, medical journals and prominent magazines.

In 50c, $1.00 and $2.00 bottles. The larger sizes are the most economical for dermatologists and large users to buy. At all toilet counters or direct from us. The truth about the treatment of superfluous hair mailed in plain sealed envelope on request. DeMiracle Chemical Co., Dept. G., Park avenue and 129th street, New York.

HUGHES HAS COMPLETED SPEECH OF ACCEPTANCE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

BRIDGEHAMPTON (N. Y.) July 29.—Charles E. Hughes, Republican Presidential nominee, tonight completed his speech of acceptance. It is approximately 8000 words long and will require about an hour and a quarter for delivery. Mr. Hughes will not attempt to memorize it, but will read it at the notification ceremony in New York next Monday night. The only other speaker at the meeting will be Senator Warren G. Harding, chairman of the Notification Committee, and his remarks, telling Mr. Hughes formally of his nomination, will be brief.

William W. Willcox, Republican national chairman, was an overnight guest at the nominee's summer home and they went over together the tentative plans for the nominee's trip to the Pacific Coast. In doing so, they curtailed appreciably the two weeks' vacation Mr. Hughes expected to spend in the Rocky Mountains. Mr. Willcox said that he thought the itinerary would be made public Monday.

FAMOUS BIBLE SENT TO SAN DIEGO.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CINCINNATI, July 29.—The will of George Stuart Bradbury, veteran Chamber of Commerce member and a large investor in railroad securities of this city, today directed the removal from Cincinnati to San Diego, Cal., of one of the most famous family relics of the past. The relic is a Bible known far and wide as the Spining and Bradbury Bible. The highly valued book is given in the direct care of the descendants, Charles E. Stuart of San Diego, a cousin, with instructions that at the death of Stuart, the famous book is to be left to his principal heir, and so on and on for hundreds of years to come. The San Diegan is also to receive $1000 and to participate farther in the residue of Bradbury's large estate when other legacies are paid.

Bradbury's other San Diego relative, Mrs. Mattie Stuart, is also to receive $1000, and other relatives various amounts, the public library here, one of America's most important pioneer public institutions, receives a legacy. A dozen other important charities of various sectarian and nonsectarian character are remembered. No exact estimate has been made of the Bradbury fortune, though it is known to be quite large.

DAM MADE AN ISSUE.

Imperial Irrigation District Wants Pile Structure; the Reclamation Service Favors Sand and Brush; Injunction May be Asked.

M. W. Conkling of El Centro, attorney for the Imperial Irrigation District, was in the city yesterday on business connected with the threatened action of the government to enjoin the construction of what is known as a pile dam, at Hanlon's Heading, in the vicinity of Yuma.

It is understood the district officials have commenced the construction of the dam, under a permit issued by the War Department, but whether it complies with a modified order in that regard is not certainly known.

L. M. Lawson of Yuma, project manager of the government reclamation work, with headquarters at Yuma, wired the officials here not to begin the action involving an injunction until he has had time to examine the modified plans and ascertain if they comply with the requirements of the Reclamation Service, that is interested in having a sand and brush dam that can be quickly moved in case of a rise in the Colorado River, instead of a pile dam that would require time to get out of the way of the rushing waters.

FEEL BILIOUS? CALOMEL SICKENS! CLEAN LIVER AND BOWELS MY WAY

Don't lose a day's work! If Constipated, Sluggish, Headachy, take a spoonful of "Dodson's Liver Tone."

Listen to me! Take no more sickening, salivating calomel when bilious or constipted. Don't lose a day's work!

Calomel is mercury or quicksilver which causes necrosis of the bones. Calomel, when it comes into contact with sour bile crashes into it, breaking it up. This is when you feel that awful nausea and cramping. If you are sluggish and "all knocked out," if your liver is torpid and bowels constipated or you have headache, dizziness, coated tongue, if breath is bad or stomach sour just take a spoonful of harmless Dodson's Liver Tone.

Here's my guarantee—Go to any drug store and get a 50 cent bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone. Take a spoonful tonight and if it doesn't straighten you right up and make you feel fine and vigorous by morning I want you to go back to the store and get your money. Dodson's Liver Tone is destroying the sale of calomel because it is real liver medicine; entirely vegetable, therefore it can not salivate or make you sick.

I guarantee that one spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone will put your sluggish liver to work and clean your bowels of that sour bile and constipated waste which is clogging your system and making you feel miserable. I guarantee that a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone will keep your entire family feeling fine for months. Give it to your children. It is harmless; doesn't gripe and they like its pleasant taste.

TO DISCUSS CHAUTAUQUA.

Ministers will Mention Project in the Churches Today.

Today will be "Chautauqua Sunday" in many churches throughout the city and county. References will be made by the ministers to the movement to establish a permanent Chautauqua center on Mt. Washington. Bishop William M. Bell, chancellor of the Chautauqua of the Pacific, last week invited the clergymen to discuss the proposed institution today.

Dr. William Horace Day, pastor of the First Congregational Church; Dr. Maurice Penfield Fikes, supply pastor of the Temple Baptist Church, and Dr. J. Whitcomb Brougher, pastor of the Temple Baptist Church, are among the prominent ministers who will mention the Chautauqua project to their congregations.

The illness of Mayor Sebastian, it was learned yesterday, will prevent his active co-operation in the movement. He sent a letter to the Chautauqua offices indorsing the work and promising to help the enterprise.

Sixty-fourth Congress.

CARS PLENTY, RATIONS ALSO.

Baker Replies to Inquiries Made in the House.

No Need for Troops to Beg Food of Civilians.

Texas Critic of the Army Praises Mobilization.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, July 29.—In response to House resolutions of inquiry Secretary Baker today made a report on the transportation of National Guardsmen to the border. The resolutions asked for information on charges that the guardsmen had been transported in day coaches; that their trains had been unreasonably side-tracked and that they were insufficiently fed and cared for.

Secretary Baker says the guards in some instances were transported in day coaches, but that no cars without lights were used and that troop trains were not side-tracked unreasonably. Regular army rations more than sufficient for the journey were furnished all troops, he asserts, either on leaving mobilization camps or en route and that all cars used were inspected to remedy defects or deficiencies that would imperil the health or safety of the troops.

USE OF DAY COACHES.

The report says day coaches were used only in cases where, owing to the urgency of the situation and the large number of troops being moved at one time, it was not practical to delay. When day coaches were used, it explains, three men were assigned to each four seats. In some cases, railroads without extra charge allowed two men to occupy four seats. Wherever it could be done arrangements were made to transfer troops from day coaches to tourist sleepers.

Regarding rations, the Secretary reports that where cooking equipments were not placed on trains, the men were furnished with money to buy hot coffee, the same as troops of the regular army are allowed under similar conditions. No reason existed for troops seeking food from civilians, Secretary Baker declares, and drinking water was plentiful.

RATIONS IN PLENTY.

There was no reason for troops seeking food of citizens en route, he added. "It is not possible, unless rations have been thrown away, that troops, which have been reported short of rations, could have been short. Every precaution was taken to see that they started with an ample supply. These troops are largely recruits untrained and undisciplined and under officers of comparatively little experience."

Acting Quartermaster General Sharpe reported that to have moved all the troops in Pullman or tourist cars would have required 3000 cars. The Pullman company made available for the troops 80 per cent. of all tourist cars it owns.

Representative Slayden, who, all through the Mexican troubles, has been one of the administration's critics for not using the guard on the border, spoke in the House today in commendation of the condition of the guardsmen and conditions on the border generally.

He declared troops had been moved without hitch and with all dispatch necessary.

GERMAN REPUBLIC WILL END WAR?

Walter Wellman in a Sensational New Book Tells How Utopia will be Established when Germany Apologizes to the World.

In a sensational and visionary book, "The German Republic," fresh from the press of E. P. Dutton & Co., Walter Wellman predicts that the German people will negotiate an armistice for three months, and with a bloodless revolution establish a republic. Then they will acknowledge to the world that the "Junkers" precipitated the world war; they will depose but not humiliate the Kaiser, and making an honorable peace with the allies, by an act of their new Congress, will propose to the world:

"We stand ready, immediately, to sign treaties of perpetual peace and arbitration of all international disputes without exception or reserve with all other nations.

"We stand ready, immediately, in concurrence with other nations, to disband our armies, dismantle our navy, raze our fortifications, convert our munition works, melt our guns, stop all military service.

"We stand ready to join other nations in creating a supreme court of the world to decide all appeals from tribunals of arbitration, their decision to be final.

"We stand ready to join other nations in establishing under the absolute and perpetual control of the supreme court of the world an international constabulary force on land and sea with power to enforce the decisions of the court in case of need, punish or discipline recalcitrants or offenders against international law and morality, police the world for regulation or correction of ill-developed or primitive peoples or tribes.

"In pursuance of this our proposal to abolish forever human war and the waste of human energy in preparation for war, and to set up in their place the rule of universal moral law with efficient means of preserving international peace, order and security—

"We hereby invite all the nations of the earth to send fully empowered delegates to an international disarmament and universal peace conference to be held at The Hague, December 25th, this year."

WALTER WELLMAN, AUTHOR.

Walter Wellman is a journalist and explorer of distinction. He is the man who located the landing place of Columbus on San Salvador in 1892 and erected a monument, but is perhaps better known for his hazardous and persistent attempt a decade ago to reach the North Pole with airships, and has other, and successful feats to his credit.

He has written "The German Republic" as a record of fact. Without a vestige of warning he jumps from the present into the future, and from the vantage point of some unstipulated anterior year, presents "verbatim" excerpts from "writings" that are yet to appear and resolutions of a Congress that is yet to be established. The sheer boldness of his conception arrests attention, though never for a moment are many people likely to take his prophecies seriously.

GERMANY WILL APOLOGIZE.

That reader must indeed be indurated to a sense of humor who refrains from smiling when reading that the German Congress (formed during the armistice) will apologize to the world for the sinking of the Lusitania, will publicly express regret for the Zeppelin raids, and also for the bitterness of the "late" Empire toward America; for the use of poison gas; and further express regret that German ingenuity, which has been and could have been so beneficial to the betterment of mankind, was perverted into the construction of engines of warfare.

The Kaiser will be deposed and given a title, with nominal power, of Prince of Helgoland; and when he departs with his family and staff for his rocky and barren principality, cheering and affectionate crowds will speed him.

KAISER WAS HOODWINKED.

The German people believe—if Mr. Wellman is to be credited—that the Kaiser, as well as themselves, has been hoodwinked and deceived by the ruling caste, the "Junkers," who aroused the nation to arms with the false plea that the physical integrity of Germany was being menaced by her neighbors.

It would be erroneous in the extreme to convey the impression that Mr. Wellman, in writing this book, was in the least animated by pro-ally sympathies. His opening chapters pay the highest possible credit to the Germans as a nation and a race.

PRAISE FOR GERMANS.

He says they are unconquerable; but also they are just, and that slowly through the entire nation a realization will be reached that the scheme of the present government is wrong, and the millions acting as one man will quietly establish the republic (only he used the past tense, saying they "did" establish it) and announce to the world:

"We see now that Germany is responsible at the judgment seat of civilization and history because Germany alone of all the nations maintained in one mighty combination:

"Irresponsible autocracy;

"Government by caste with war its toy and weapon, superiority of physical force its philosophy and preachment;

"Formidable military prowess—'the army the nation, the nation the army;'

"Vast industrial potentiality;

"A people great in numbers, proficiency, energy;

"Marvelous patriotic unity among them;

"This unity finding expression not in intelligent public opinion controlling the caste, but in servilely permitting the caste to make public opinion to order, make war at will.

"Other nations contained some of these menaces, Germany alone had them all.

"All were required in combination to constitute menace of the first world magnitude, Germany alone had the complete combination.

"We see now how civilization was inexorably forced to take its stand that this mighty menace could be permitted to exist."

MORAL FORCE, THE MIRACLE.

Mr. Wellman declares that the mainspring, which is to bring forth the marvelous republic that will establish perpetual peace on earth, will be moral force. He writes:

"Nothing in earth or in the heavens, not imperial power nor military authority, nor tribal feeling and ingrained habit of thought and discipline, however strong; nor passion, pride, hatred, selfishness, mass-obsession or the law of attraction and correlation among the mental units, could forever paralyze the German intellect, kill the German conscience, permanently reverse the magnetic needle of the German soul and keep it pointing to the negative pole of error against its fundamental gravitation to the positive pole of truth."

UTOPIA SIGHTED.

The allies, Russia, France and England, will meet the new attitude of Germany with magnanimity. Hatred will pass and the feud will be forgotten. No indemnities will be required; Serbia will be restored, Poland will be made self-governing; all the original boundaries will be set back; Greece, Rumania and Bulgaria will at once bloodlessly depose their rulers and become republics; home rule will be given Ireland, and the government of the Turks will be reorganized and their pestilential influence forever eliminated from Europe.

To the Supreme Power.

ALL WILL BOW IN PRAYER FOR PEACE IN EUROPE.

MRS. W. J. CHICHESTER'S idea for five minutes' meditation and prayer in behalf of peace, starting at 11 o'clock Tuesday, has commended itself to thousands of people. Backed by the Mayor's proclamation in its favor, a general observance of the five minutes of silent prayer is expected.

In order that every person in the city may know when the moment has arrived to cease from all else but inward prayers for the cessation of the great war, The Times siren will be started at five minutes to the hour and its far-reaching voice will be heard until 11 o'clock strikes.

With the hush of the siren will come the hush from every kind of industry and act, save prayer for peace, all over Los Angeles. The stilling of the mighty voice of the siren will be the signal for every person to silently offer up an appeal that Europe's reign of blood shall cease and that peace be restored on earth and good will among men.

Mrs. Chichester yesterday was informed by the Automobile Club of Southern California that it will, through the press, ask every member to observe the Mayor's proclamation and to stop his automobile just where it may happen to be at 11 o'clock.

Many moving picture houses also informed Mrs. Chichester that they will announce on their screen shortly before the hour the coming of the five-minute interval when all thoughts will be directed toward peace.

BLOW UP PLANT OF THE "MENACE"

Anti-Catholic Publication is Damaged by Explosion.

Bloodhounds Placed on Trail of Supposed Author.

No Clews Obtained Except Those Found by Dogs.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

AURORA (Mo.) July 29.—Three explosions beneath the floor of the Menace publishing plant early this morning slightly damaged the plant and set fire to a mass of papers of the Menace, an anti-Catholic publication, just off the press.

The first explosion, quickly followed by another, occurred beneath a press which had just completed the Missouri edition of the Menace. In four minutes there was another explosion. The explosions set fire to the papers fresh from the presses, but the Aurora fire department, half a block away, arrived on the scene immediately and extinguished the flames with chemical apparatus.

It has not been determined whether the explosions were caused by bombs. It was possible for persons to have crawled beneath the building by way of channels which had been cut for the laying of heating pipes and electrical wiring.

WATCHMAN VIGILANT.

John Ray, night watchman, was called to the second floor of the building a few seconds before the explosion by a noise which appeared to come from the upper part of the building. He was on the second floor when the first explosion occurred and quickly left the building to call the fire department. By the time the third explosion came, two minutes later, several citizens were on the scene, awakened by the shock of the explosions.

On account of fear of more explosions the building was closed by city authorities for a short time. Electricians are preparing to make an investigation of the situation with a view to ascertaining the nature of the explosions.

The Missouri edition of the Menace contained a denunciation of "Con" Roach, candidate for Governor on the Democratic ticket.

Irvin Brown, managing editor of the Menace, expressed the opinion that the persons who were the cause of the explosions had entered a window in the rear of the publishing company's building.

REWARD IS OFFERED.

A reward of $1000 was offered by Mr. Brown for the arrest of the person responsible for the explosion. Mr. Brown said the Menace had received many threatening letters, but there had been no direct threat to destroy the plant.

Sheriff Charles Terry of Lawrence county reached Aurora shortly before noon and at once began an investigation of the explosions in an effort to ascertain the make of the bombs. Before his arrival bloodhounds were taken to the plant and a trail was found which the dogs followed for several blocks, then was lost.

"Undoubtedly the men responsible for the explosion got in a motor at the point where the trail was lost and drove away," Mr. Brown explained. "We have so far no other clews than those turned up by the dogs."

MADE ARMY SURGEON.

Former County Hospital Attache is now a Lieutenant.

Dr. Louie Felger, for two years connected with the County Hospital as a surgeon, was yesterday notified from Washington of his appointment as a surgeon of the United States Army, with the rank of first lieutenant. Dr. Felger has been ordered to report at once to the base hospital at Fort Bliss and will leave this morning.

Dr. Felger took the examination for army surgeon a little over a year ago and at that time was notified that he had passed in a meritorious manner. He was told to hold himself in readiness for service, and for that reason refused several desirable offers in California hospitals.

Dr. Felger, during his residence at the County Hospital, formed many close friendships among his brother physicians and surgeons and was yesterday the center of a crowd of friendly well wishers who had heard of his appointment.

MISS BEACH TRIP; BUSY GETTING WED

MYSTERY OF "DISAPPEARANCE" HAPPILY SOLVED.

Well-known President of German Ladies' Benevolent Society Marries Retired Mining Man Who Accumulated Fortune in the Alaskan Fields.

The "mysterious" disappearance from her home last Friday of Mrs. Bertha Schaefer, widow of the late John G. Schaefer, and president of the German Ladies' Benevolent Society of Los Angeles, was solved yesterday by a telegram from San Diego announcing her marriage to Frederick C. Renaud.

Mrs. Schaefer and Mr. Renaud were to be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. David Myers of the Burlington apartments on a picnic trip to Hermosa Beach Friday, where they had planned to meet Mrs. Alice Gollmer. When Mr. and Mrs. Myers called at the Schaefer home on Westlake avenue Mrs. Schaefer and Mr. Renaud already had gone. A telephone message to the beach later in the day failed to locate them and considerable mystery as to their whereabouts began to develop.

Fearing an accident, an investigation was begun and the boulevards between Los Angeles and Hermosa Beach were searched for an overturned automobile. No trace of the couple could be found, however, and Mr. and Mrs. Myers returned to Los Angeles to eat their cold chicken at home.

While numerous friends were busy trying to locate them, Mrs. Schaefer and Mr. Renaud were on their way to San Diego in Mr. Renaud's touring car. Arriving at San Diego, they procured a license and were married in the Catholic church.

From San Diego they went to Coronado, where it is their intention to stay ten days, going then to Seattle and Vancouver for a visit with Mr. Renaud's mother. They will then return to Los Angeles and will be at home at No. 1234 Westlake avenue after September 1.

Mrs. Renaud is prominent in German circles in Los Angeles, having been president of the German Ladies' Benevolent Society for two years past. She has resided in Los Angeles for twenty-eight years and has always been identified with the charitable work of the benevolent society.

Mrs. Schaefer's former husband, the late John G. Schaefer, died in 1911, having accumulated a large fortune in Los Angeles realty. Since his death Mrs. Schaefer has managed the estate.

Mr. Renaud is a retired mining man. He accumulated a fortune in the Alaskan gold fields and invested his money in Imperial Valley lands. During the last few years he has made his headquarters at Calexico.

Hay tres clases de tropas actualmente en el servicio federal. Primero, la milicia organizada de Texas, Arizona y Nuevo Mexico, las cuales fueron llamadas por el Presidente, en su primer llamamiento, bajo la ley Dick de 1903; el resto de las guardias nacionales, automaticamente pasaron al servicio de la federacion bajo la nueva ley Hay-Chamberlain de defensa nacional, y tercero, las tropas del ejercito regular.

VOTERS HERE NOW THIRD OF MILLION.

FEW CHANGE REGISTRATION AT GOVERNOR'S REQUEST.

Only 15,000 Nonpartisans Reregister as Republicans to Assist Johnson's Ambition for Senatorial Nomination — Women's Booth Club in Active Work.

When the office of Thomas McAleer, Registrar of Voters, closed last midnight, it was estimated that 325,000 voters had registered in this county and city. All will be entitled to vote at the August primaries for candidates for nonpartisan offices, but only those who have stated their party affiliation can vote for party candidates.

It will not be known to a certainty what the total registration is until the middle of the week. Deputies in distant parts of the county will not have their reports in the Registrar's office until Tuesday.

According to estimates, not more than 15,000 voters formerly listed under the not-stated class have reregistered, notwithstanding the pleadings of Gov. Johnson, who appealed to them to reregister as Republicans to make it possible for them to vote for his nomination as Republican candidate for United States Senator.

There are still 80,000 voters in the county who cannot vote for partisan candidates. The Republican registration is approximately 140,000.

Women Are Active.

Members of the Women's Booth for Senator Club are planning a vigorous campaign for the next few weeks. Tomorrow afternoon they will hold their weekly reception at the Clark Hotel.

Mrs. H. L. Westbrook, Mrs. Charles M. Turck, Mrs. A. J. Bayer and Mrs. Charles A. Wiley will have charge of the membership tables, and Miss Doris Collins, Miss Martha Rickerson and Miss Anna Woodbury will have charge of the literature tables.

Meetings scheduled under the auspices of the club for the coming week include: Tuesday at Tropico, Mrs. C. M. Turck, No. 521 North Glendale avenue, at 3 p.m., where a Tropico Booth for Senator Club will be organized; Wednesday, Mrs. I. J. Muma, Elden avenue, 3:30 p.m.; Mrs. Frances Goldstine, No. 421 North Soto street, at 2:30 p.m.; Loomis apartments, No. 625 Loomis street, 8 p.m. Thursday, Mrs. A. M. Watson, 3 p.m., to organize a Burbank Club. Friday, Mrs. S. W. Butler, No. 1532 St. Andrews place, 3:30 p.m.

Great impetus has been given to the work by the enthusiasm shown in the Booth campaign. Women generally throughout the State feel the justice due the south in electing a Senator from this part of the State when so capable a candidate as Willis H. Booth is in the field.

Kleinman's Platform.

Charles A. Kleinman, candidate for the Republican nomination for State Senator in the Thirty-seventh District,(announced his platform last night at a meeting at Fourteenth and Wilson streets. He said: "I stand for better laws, fewer laws and lower taxes. My effort will be directed toward legislation that will bring outside capital to our city. We need factories. They give employment to our citizens, create a healthy growth and substantial prosperity."

ITALIANS REPULSE SURPRISE ATTACK.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

ROME, July 29 (via London.)—Austro-Hungarian attempts to surprise the Italian positions 7000 feet above sea level on Monte Cimone on the night of July 27 were promptly repulsed, it is announced in the Italian official statement issued today.

The statement says further:

"In the Trevignola Valley, notwithstanding the bad weather, we made further progress on Monte Colbriccon, toward Ceraman Valley, and repulsed two counter-attacks.

"On the Carso one of our squadrons bombarded the enemy's camps and parks in the Oppachiasella region. Hostile aircraft which counter-attacked were driven off. One of them was brought down in flames.

"The enemy again is reported to be making extensive use of explosive rifle bullets."

VIENNA REPORT.

[BY WIRELESS AND A. P.]

BERLIN, July 29 (via Sayville.)—The Austro-Hungarian Admiralty in a statement today reports a raid by Austrian aircraft on various Italian towns as follows:

"An Austro-Hungarian naval aeroplane squadron on July 27 bombarded very successfully railway stations, military objects and factories at Oceano, Mola, Bari, Gievinazzo and Molinetta with heavy, light and incendiary bombs. Especially at Bari destructive hits were obtained and serious fires were caused in railroad buildings, factories and the government place. The squadron returned unharmed."

BOY PIONEERS TO BE ORGANIZED.

NEW YORK, July 29.—For American boys residing in rural communities where no Boy Scouts of American troops have been formed, a new class of scouts, to be known as the Boy Pioneers, is to be organized, it was announced at the national headquarters here today. Heretofore, it was stated, thousands of boys in sparsely-settled districts have been unable to enroll as scouts because of insufficient numbers to make up troops.

FULL TEXT OF RESOLUTIONS INDORSING BOOTH'S CANDIDACY.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN FRANCISCO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 29.—Following is the full text of the resolutions adopted this afternoon at the conference of Republican State and county committeemen indorsing the candidacy of Willis H. Booth of Los Angeles for the Republican nomination for United States Senator:

"Whereas, members of the State Central Committee and of the various county committees, constituting the legal governing bodies of the Republican party, in convention assembled, present for the serious consideration of the voters the following statement of facts relating to political conditions in the State:

"Whereas, while past factional strife and contention within the party has been dissipated in a national sense, we find that locally a studied and determined purpose is manifest to keep alive an organization which in the past brought defeat to the Republican party in both State and nation and visited untold disaster and humiliation upon our people. This faction now seeks to force upon the Republican party a candidate for United States Senator who is not a member of that party, but is registered with, and avowedly belongs to, another political organization. He not only declares his membership in that organization, but publicly states it to be his purpose to keep alive this antagonistic faction as a distinct and permanent factor in the political equation;

"Whereas, the condition thus created might be viewed with equanimity by Republicans were it not for a newly-developed danger, finding expression in the announced Senatorial candidacy of a third party, in the person of Walter Bordwell. The announcement of Mr. Bordwell was given publicity about three months after that of Mr. Willis H. Booth—at a time when it was generally understood and believed that Mr. Booth would be the only Republican in the field, and after the great bulk of Republicans had either formally pledged themselves to the support of Mr. Booth or tacitly accepted his candidacy;

"Whereas, manifestly, Mr. Bordwell's entrance into the contest at this inopportune time can have but one result—that of endangering the success of any Republican candidate and threatening the elimination of the party's most prominent and intolerant enemy in the State—Hiram Johnson—we hold that no fair-minded person can honestly criticise our attitude in openly and strongly opposing the candidacy of Mr. Johnson, in view of the pertinent fact that he is not a member of the Republican party, from which he now seeks political honor;

"Whereas, the legally-authorized officials of the Republican party of the State recognize the great responsibility resting upon them, and have no hesitancy in promptly accepting it and as promptly meeting the disagreeable condition entailed. We cannot tolerate the thought that the exceedingly bright prospects of national Republican success should be marred by a threatened defeat in the State. California urgently needs Republican Senators and Congressmen at the national capital, and to do our part in meeting this need is the duty of the hour;

"Whereas, to elect Mr. Johnson would involve a manifestly unfair assignment of both United States Senators to the northern portion of the State. Even worse than that — it would send to Washington, as a representative of the Republican party, a man who cannot qualify as such under any stretch of the imagination or by any recognized moral precept;

"Be it resolved, with no apologies for the action, and having in mind solely the welfare of the State and nation, we earnestly urge every true Republican to give his or her support, in both primaries and general election, to a man who, tried by every moral and mental test and measured by every praiseworthy political standard, is eminently fitted to represent this great commonwealth in the Senate of the United States—Willis H. Booth."

a manner as is possible under the immediate circumstances.

"I entreat you to be calm and deliberate, to look to the future, and, as you did at that time, to do that which will command the respect and the confidence of the great mass of Republican voters. Individual ambitions, individual desires must be subordinate to that which will be for the general good.

"You who are assembled here today are confronted with as serious an attack on party as you were when you were fighting the nonpartisan primary law. The possibility that the candidate of another party which claims his loyalty may receive the indorsement of the Republican party is as subversive of the principles of party government as the proposed nonpartisan primary law. It cannot be conceived that one who is not a Republican will consistently represent the Republican party because he cannot serve two masters. One who seeks the nomination of the parties radically differing in principle, is not a supporter of principles. He is a job-chaser. How can a Republican represent the Democratic party? I commend the courage of candidates for Congress like Curry and Kahn, who are unafraid to stand on the Republican nomination alone. If principle is the thing which concerns you, the course to be pursued is well defined.

"The ease with which a candidate of one party can be injected into the campaign for nomination of another party is a matter of very grave concern. It should not be permitted. We must prevent it in this contest for United States Senator."

ROBERTS AT THE BAT.

Frank Roberts of Long Beach urged the Republican committeemen to be prepared to carry back to their respective constituencies the spirit of the conference which was so unanimous for the nomination and election of a proved Republican from California. His verbal castigations of the Tammany Hall methods of the State Progressive machine were warmly cheered.

In concluding he introduced the resolutions indorsing the candidacy of Willis H. Booth.

These resolution were adopted without a dissenting vote. Cries of "Booth, Booth," filled the hall. Escorted by a special committee Mr. Booth ascended the platform and in a brief but fervent address pledged himself to make the fight for militant Republicanism against the encroachments of members of other parties.

WHAT BOOTH SAID.

Mr. Booth said:

"Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of this conference, militant Republicans every one of you, this hour has made history in the State of California. It has served to voice, not only to this State, but to this Nation, that political integrity wherever it may be found is worth fighting for by honest people.

"You have clearly and positively eliminated all elements of personality in the campaign which we have before us and you have brought it down to the real principles which we know to be at stake, the principles for which this canvass must be made up and down this State, carrying a massage to the north and south, that it cannot be possible in this great commonwealth, and in a State like the State of California, that an individual can prostitute a party and destroy it for public good. Coming from you as representative of the people who have elected you representative as you are of that people and party, you have a right to speak and you have. It is a magnificent fight we are going to make. It is going to call for all our strength, for blood and brawn, but thank God the right is always right, and right will always prevail against every attack.

"We are going united into this fight, you and I, and all those hundreds of thousands of Republicans who have rallied with us here. We have struggled for this, so have Mr Crocker and Mr. Keesling, and those magnificent men who are giving to the State their best efforts, we are going to the struggle shoulder and shoulder with them to the end that the party element, which is the basic principle of Republican government, shall not perish from this State.

"My dear friends, it is just as clear as it can be. It is a principle worth fighting for, the way to Republican citizenship, and that is what we must fight for and we will. We must give to this State, all of us, the best we have. We recognize its needs. We appreciate its demands. We recognize the great standard bearer whom you in your loyalty have sought to give this nation. To accomplish this purpose we must have the support of real Republicans and not bogus Republicans.

"That support we are going to give him, that loyalty that beats in our breasts, every one of us. When we have carried that out we will have done our duty by our State, but greater than that, more powerful than that, we will have done our duty by our nation and to the rank and file of the citizenship of this great republic. To that end and for that purpose, appreciating with all my heart the compliment you have given me, and associating to that the full obligations it measures, I promise to you, as you have promised to me and as all have promised to this State the best we have in time and strength and ability to serve the ends of this party in the next campaign.

"In closing I speak to a question of personal privilege. I have no thought of injecting into this magnificent action one single note of an untoward character but I do wish as a question of personal privilege to ask of you, my friends and my associates of the hour before us, just one consideration. What I have to say weighs heavily upon my heart. The responsibilities of the last few weeks, great as they have been, have weighed heavily upon the hearts and consciences of us all. I have had an opponent. We have had an opponent in our own party and from my own city in this campaign, an opponent who is a magnificent man and a friend of a lifetime to me. Differing as I do with him in the policy which has actuated him at this time, separated as our objects and motives no doubt have been, I still cannot, in the proper recognition of a lifetime of close association, allow myself in these trying hours to impugn the motive or intent of my friend, and I ask you in going before the people of this State just to exercise towards the situation the same calm, quiet and Christian-like charity which all of us would like to have exercised towards us under similar circumstances.

"My friends, there is the issue, there's the fight, there's the red blood and there is the stake, let us go to it."

COUNTIES REPRESENTED.

Fifty-three of the fifty-eight counties in the State were represented in the conference. Its effect on the Senatorial situation is already marked. The enthusiasm welled out from the assembly hall and filled the lobbies and corridors of the big Palace Hotel. A few satellites of the administration who had gathered there disappeared.

The reception of the Los Angeles delegation was characteristic. The trains were met at the depot and the delegates were escorted in decorated autos through the streets to the Palace Hotel. The question of a divided south was answered when it was apparent that the delegation was practically the same as that which formed the backbone of the regular Republican conference in March.

The ghastly failure of Gov. Johnson to rally his former stanch friends in Southern California to his support in his campaign for the United States Senate is most significant. Notwithstanding two successive defeats in the past year he hoped to line up former followers in the Senatorial contest, and the fact that they have deserted him is the most bitter pill he has ever had to swallow. [LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

ADENA, July 30.—While both sons were away—one an army officer stationed at Douglas, Arizona, the other in training at Monterey to be a citizen soldier, Maj.-Gen. Kobbe, U.S.A., retired, of No. South Grand avenue, with a record as a soldier, was secretly married to Miss Margaret Carnes, a nurse who attended the first Mrs. Kobbe when she died three years ago. Gen. Kobbe is 76 years old but looks much younger. The bride is 38.

Early in the springtime the smart set both here and in Boston, had a pleasant thrill when the charming and vivacious Dorothy Melcher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Woodbury Melcher of Brookline, announced her engagement to Eric Kobbe, who is now at Monterey. Mrs. Melcher and her mother are here, having motored to where the Pasadena youth are a week.

On July 4, a message came announcing the engagement of Gen. Kobbe's other son, First Lieutenant Kobbe of the First Cavalry, stationed at Douglas, and Miss Witherbee, of West Haven. Then the gossips grew busy linking Gen. Kobbe's name with a romance.

When questioned about his father's engagement, Eric Kobbe flatly denied there was any truth in the report. Later, however, when Gen. Kobbe, who neither denied nor affirmed it, refused to give the name of the lucky bride-to-be, declaring it would be unchivalrous to do so, curiosity grew until the mystery was solved.

Yesterday he admitted his marriage to Miss Carnes but refused to say when it took place, and, when some one remarked how smart he had been in keeping it a secret, he said that he hadn't been half as smart as he had intended to be.

"I had planned to keep it secret for some time," he said. He refused to be photographed and was most anxious to keep details of his marriage, even yet, as quiet as possible, saying that there are grave reasons for so doing.

The ceremony was performed at the Church of the Holy Family in Pasadena, on Wednesday, July 26, Rev. W. H. Cotter officiating. The witnesses are said to have been members of the bride's family. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carnes of No. 1221 Dewey street, Los Angeles.

Gen. Kobbe and family came to Pasadena soon after the San Francisco fire. Mrs. Kobbe died in 1913. He was born in New York, May 10, 1840, receiving his education in American and German institutions, winding up at the leading schools of Germany in mining, engineering and scientific work. He entered the service of the United States army during the Civil War as a private and was appointed a lieutenant in 1866.

In the war with Spain he won his rank of colonel, brigadier-general and major-general. For a time he held the military governorship of the province of Albany, Luzon, and was temporary governor of the islands of Samar and Leyte. He retired in 1904 as a major-general.

REAL ESTATE ACTIVITY.

Residents of "millionaires' row"—which is another name for exclusive South Orange Grove avenue—are all agog over the arrival here yesterday of Bertram G. Goodhue, a New York architect who has crossed the continent to inspect the site and prepare plans for a $200,000 residence for John N. Willys, president of the Willys-Overland Automobile Company.

Mr. Willys bought this property, which is on Columbia street, just at the end of Orange Grove avenue, more than a year ago and he expects to start building before this year. Just what the architectural plans are to be Mr. Goodhue has not decided, but it is known that it is to be something extraordinary and will be one of the show places of the city. Mr. Goodhue is a recognized authority on Spanish and colonial architecture. He was one of the architects for the San Diego exposition.

One of the largest real estate deals of the year was consummated here yesterday, when Dr. E. R. Campbell of New York, vice-president and director of the Chevrolet Motor Company and fully as well known as Mr. Willys in the automobile world, bought a large site for a residence on Oak Knoll. It consists of eight acres of ground at Virginia road and Oak Knoll drive, a short distance west of the Henry E. Huntington estate.

Dr. Campbell has already put landscape architects at work and, before building a palatial mansion, will have constructed on the property beautiful gardens which will vie with that of Mr. Huntington's and the Busch sunken gardens in tropical luxuriance.

GASPS AND DIES.

While talking of the intense heat in the East and the delightful summers here, as he rode in an automobile by the side of his next-door neighbor, Harry J. Hardwick of No. 96 Elevado drive, suddenly gasped and died. He was 67 years old and one of the pioneers of this city. Death was caused by a defect of the heart, according to physicians. E. I. Ogle of No. 96 Elevado drive, with whom Hardwick was riding, rushed to the Emergency Hospital with him, thinking he had fainted, but the body was lifeless.

Besides his widow Mr. Ogle leaves a daughter, Mrs. A. Ready; a brother, F. V. Hardwick of Lamanda Park; a sister in New York and a brother. The funeral will be held Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the chapel of Reynolds & Van Nuys. Rev. Albert Hall will officiate and the Knights of Pythias will conduct services at the grave.

STRUCK BY BOMB.

F. K. Chapin, who is the attendant in the Pasadena city hall system, returned yesterday from San Francisco, where he went for his vacation and showed some of his friends a mended place in one of his trouser legs, where the cloth had been torn by a fragment of the bomb, which wrought havoc on the day of the preparedness parade there.

"The only reason that I was not struck by a number of the flying missles," he said, "was that there were so many other people crowded about me. I was lifted clear off my feet by the force of the explosion and fell on my hands and knees. For several seconds I thought another earthquake had come."

As he stepped from the train in Los Angeles yesterday, C. H. Duvall, a negro minister, was arrested by Humane Officer C. H. Kelley, who had a warrant for him, issued Saturday by Justice Strang.

Duvall was arrested on a charge of embezzlement, the complaining witness being Mrs. Julia Taylor of No. 351 South Vernon avenue. She accused Duvall of soliciting and receiving funds for the construction of a girls' dormitory for an alleged agricultural school at Lanfair, Nev. He is alleged to have taken a large sume of money collected by the treasurer, Mrs. Taylor's sister, declining to let it pass through the auditor's hands.

On investigation of the agricultural college by Mr. Kelley, he found nothing but an old shack occupied by two boys and four adults. Their only means of livlihood was a menu of boiled eggs three times a day and jackrabbits when the boys were able to kill any.

Duvall was arraigned before Judge Strang and his bond fixed at $1000, which he was unable to pay. He has engaged Attorney Wickliff of Los Angeles, and says he will fight the case to the bitter end. He declares his arrest is a frame-up.

That his ashes be strewn over the grave of his beloved wife, Esther Vroman, who body lies buried in the Memallen Meeting Cemetery, near Flora Dale postoffice, in Pennsylvania, is the most remarkable features of an unusual will made by Adam Clark Vroman, who died here several days ago.

A picnic supper will be held on Tuesday at La Pintoresca Park at 2 o'clock for all former students of Albian Seminary and for all former residents of that city. H. O. Hubbard and Miss Mary Lewis are members of the picnic committee.

Guests at Mt. Wilson enjoyed a round of gaities beginning Friday night with a unique dance and reception and ending yesterday with a brilliant concert under the big trees there. Among those contributing to the enjoyment were Madame Palliser of the London Hall of Music, E. C. Henderson of Hollywood, George McKinney of Pasadena, William McKinney of Chicago, Mrs. Susan G. Stokes of San Diego, Mr. and Mrs. Williamson, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Holmes and Miss Angie Holmes of San Diego, Miss Edith Norton, Miss Beatrice Whittier, a ballet dancer, and Mrs. H. D. Hicks.

Effect of High Altitude.

[Outing:] A scramble, a gasp for breath; for at 12,000 feet the thinness of the air is noticeable; one doesn't seem to be able to get enough of it. A glance at the widening horizon; another scramble. The blood pounded in my temples, and my ears began to ring. I paused and leaned on my staff, ostensibly to view the landscape. Then I saw that my companions were having their difficulties. One was exhausted, and dropped out of line. Soon another gave up the struggle, and another. It was funny; like being in a battle and wondering who would go next.

Long Beach.

MAYOR LAID UP BY OPERATIONS.

Long Beach Executive Out of Harness for Month.

Chamber of Commerce Hopes to Settle Jitneys.

Fisherman Wrecked when Lights Fail to Shine.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONG BEACH, July 29.—Overtaxing his physical strength by refusing to give up his work when rest and recuperation were prescribed by his physician, Mayor W. T. Lisenby, who suffered a complete breakdown and has been confined to his bed since early in the week, found it necessary to undergo a serious operation at the Long Beach Sanitarium today. Late tonight he had come out from under the influence of the anaesthetic and was reported to be resting.

Mayor Lisenby was found to be suffering from a combination of troubles, any one of which, alone, might have resulted fatally. The operation today was principally for appendicitis and gallstones. Showing that the gallstones had been in the process of formation for several years, a whole handful of those unnatural obstructions were removed by the operating physicians.

Unless the Mayor has been too greatly weakened by his lack of nourishment for the past several days and the shock of the operation, doctors in attendance at the bedside of the city's Chief Executive say he should fully recover in a month's time. Former Mayor Windham was operated upon but a short time ago for the same combination of troubles.

PORTENDS ACTION.

Realizing that a crisis has been reached in the transportation situation in this city and that the time is not far distant when Long Beach will have to choose between the jitney-bus or the intercity street-car system, Chairman S. H. Underwood, of the Law and Legislation Committee of the Chamber of Commerce announced that his committee will take stringent measures in an effort to secure legislation from the City Commissioners to remedy the situation.

The Chamber of Commerce realizes that the passenger-bus business in this city provides employment for a large number of men, but at the same time they agree with the Pacific Electric corporation that unfair competition exists when the jitney operators are allowed to run on the same thoroughfares as the street cars, for which privilege the railway corporation donates liberally to the city strong box. The railway men also contend that unfair competition exists when the passengermobiles are allowed to operate regardless of any set schedule.

Ordinances embodying points covering the compulsion of a schedule and containing the provision that jitney busses shall not run on streets where the Pacific Electric Company holds a franchise, have been submitted to the City Commissioners by both the Long Beach Ad Club and the Chamber of Commerce. But the city solons have not, as yet, seen fit to take favorable action.

It is to this end that Mr. Underwood will concentrate his efforts and endeavor to save for the city, if possible, its present street car system.

BIG DAY'S SESSION.

Beginning with special services at the Christian Church tomorrow morning at 9:30 o'clock, the delegates and visitors to the twenty-eighth annual convention of Christian churches of Southern California will put in the biggest day of their ten days' session here.

The closing services of the convention will be held tomorrow night in the municipal auditorium, beginning at 7:30 o'clock with a praise service led by Evangelist Earl H. Fife and a big chorus.

Prayer will be offered by E. E. Francis of Glendale, and there will be a lecture by Frederick D. Kerchner, the convention speaker from St. Louis, on "The Closed Door." C. C. Chapman, president of the convention, will dismiss the delegates with a few parting words that will include facts and figures showing that the present convention has been an overwhelming success, such a success that it can hardly be compared with similar sessions held in past years.

OCTOGENARIAN WRECKED.

Attributing his mishap to the alleged failure of the lights to be kept burning on the jetties at the entrance of the port's mouth, a violation of the Federal law, Robert L. Purves, 80 years old, of No. 2222 Myrtle avenue, missed the harbor entrance on returning from a deep-sea fishing trip tonight and was wrecked on the beach.

As he was beached near the jetties the boat in which the octogenarian was rowing capsized and pinned him beneath it, inflicting serious injuries.

To add to his suffering thousands of mosquitoes attacked the aged fisherman, and he was in a pitable condition when discovered by W. A. Ballard of No. 1610 Locust avenue, who was walking along the beach at the point where the accident occurred some time afterward.

Two reports have been made to the police this week complaining of the fact that there has been no lights burning on the jetties at the entrance to the harbor.

This small inn contains a room every inch of which is covered with postage stamps. Ceiling, walls, doors, chairs, tables, picture frames, every part of the room, except the floor, is thickly covered, while from the ceiling hang long festoons and ropes, made of bundles of stamps for which there is no other place. Fully 2,000,000 stamps are pasted up, and 1,000,000 more hang in the festoons.

MASTER ORGANIST TO GIVE RECITAL.

VAN NUYS TO ENTERTAIN ARTIST MONDAY NIGHT.

Lemare Hears of High School Instrument and Comes to Perform on It—Special Cars to Take Angelenos to San Fernando Valley's Metropolis.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

VAN NUYS, July 28.—The big Van Nuys-made pipe organ recently installed in the local High School by the California Pipe Organ Company of this city will receive the test of the master hand Monday evening, when Edwin H. Lemare, styled "the greatest living organist," will give a recital.

As Lemare's time for several years to come is fully taken up by advance engagements in the East his Van Nuys visitation will be his only public appearance in this vicinity. In fact it was only by a fortunate combination of circumstances that Van Nuys found it possible to secure him.

Lemare is deeply interested in the pipe organ from an educational viewpoint and when he learned that the organ in the Van Nuys High School is the second instrument of the kind to be installed in a public school building, either in this country or Europe, he consented to give a recital here.

Lemare is the world's most renowned organist. During the period of the San Francisco exposition he was in charge of the wonderful exposition pipe organ. On this instrument he played 121 recitals with a total attendance of more than 150,000. During the last three weeks of his stay the daily average attendance was 5000 and many thousands were turned away.

Van Nuys is planning to make Lemare's visit one long to be remembered among musical circles of the Southland. In order to make possible the attendance of pipe organ enthusiasts from other places the Pacific Electric Railway is to provide a special car service from Los Angeles, leaving Hill-street station at 7:15 p.m., and leaving Van Nuys on the return trip at 10:30. This will bring all Los Angeles and suburban people back to Los Angeles in ample time to make connections with their local cars.

The patronesses are to include many prominent women, among them being Mmes. E. R. Brainerd, Carrie Stone Freeman, J. F. Anderson, J. J. Abramson and Miss Lucretia del Valle of Los Angeles, Mmes. J. L. Egbert, R. H. McClay and E. P. Grant of San Fernando, Mmes. G. Walter Monroe. W. A. Driscoll, Helen Mitche and W. E. Bechteheimer of Owensmouth, Mmes. Mathison B. Jones and H. E. Bartlett of Glendale and Mmes. F. A. Kellogg, N. F. Smith, A. E. Streeter, Howard Trotter and S. O. Houghton of Van Nuys.

AUTO CUT IN TWO BY ELECTRIC CAR.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

MONROVIA, July 29.—O. S. Armstrong, Los Angeles fertilizer dealer, was seriously injured tonight when his automobile was cut in two by a Pacific Electric car west bound at Las Lomas station, two miles east of here.

Armstrong was picked up unconscious and taken to the Haben Hospital in Monrovia. Later, he recovered partially, but was unable to say how the accident happened.

Though no bones were broken, the man is suffering from numerous cuts about the head and upper part of the body. The attending physician is of the opinion that the man will recover. The automobile is hopelessly wrecked

Las Lomas crossing, where the accident occurred, has a sinister reputation. Within the past year two persons have been killed near there and several machines destroyed. It is difficult for motorists to see the track in either direction.

BRINGS STRANDED FROM ALASKA.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

SEWARD (Alaska) July 29.—The United States coast guard cutter Unalga arrived here today from Bristol Bay with a number of prisoners and a score of passengers who had been left stranded at points to the westward as a result of the accident to the steamer Dora last month, which has prevented the regular monthly trip being made. The Unalga also brought a large consignment of mail. The prisoners, who will be taken to Valdez, include two men accused of murder, two accused of attempted murder and seven insane.

Deputy United States Marshal Paul Beckley, who made the trip on the Unalga, said that the accident to the Dora, with the consequent omission of two trips to Bristol Bay, has caused a serious food shortage at Unalaska, Unga, Sand Point and Bristol Bay points. The inhabitants, he said, are subsisting principally on flour, beans and fish.

Mr. Beckley said that regular service should have been maintained at any cost by the steamship company, as it now would be possible to make only one more trip into Bristol Bay before the freeze-up. As the Dora carries only 120 tons of cargo the prospect for getting sufficient food supplies into the Bristol Bay settlements to provide for the people during the winter months is doubtful.

It's All Off.

ABANDON PLANS FOR FIFTY-MILE ROUTES.

POSTOFFICE DEPARTMENT TO KEEP PRESENT SYSTEM.

Claim is Made that Proposed Changes Would be Demoralizing to Service and that Patrons on Rural Routes Would Suffer Much Inconvenience Thereby.

Orders have been received from the Postoffice Department that the ten automobile rural delivery, fifty-mile motor route plans, intended to take effect August 1, have been abrogated, and they will not be established as originally intended. Postmaster Brown, therefore, announces there will be no change in the manner of delivering mail by the rural routes at present.

The motor routes were originally ordered to begin June 1, but were held up by Congressman Randall, who claimed that the service would be demoralized under the plans then under contemplation by the department. It was then understood that beginning August 1 the service would be established.

No reason for the recalling of the plan is known here, but some very intelligent guesses are being made, one being that as the proposed service would cut off about half of the rural mail carriers in the country, and that Congressmen representing these constituents are hearing from them. The matter originally was a part of the Wilson administration programme of alleged economy, but it is claimed that the service, if established under the present arrangement, would be far from satisfactory so far as prompt service to postoffice patrons is concerned.

The arrangement provided for a daily trip of fifty miles, and working out of Los Angeles, it would be almost impossible for a man operating an automobile to serve the hundreds of patrons living within a twenty-five-mile round trip radius in Los Angeles county. In addition they would be compelled to sort their mail within the hours of daily employment.

In sparsely-settled districts it might be done, but there is no fifty-mile trip leading out of Los Angeles that could be satisfactorily served. The use of automobiles in the mail service is certain to be extended, but the travel limit must be reduced. That means the employment of as many men as are now on the pay roll, and that would work no economy and reform.

What to Avoid In Hot Weather

Carelessness Causes Many Ills.

Avoid iced drinks, impure water, unripe food, and eat sparingly of meat. In hot weather excessive thirst causes many people to indulge in iced drinks and other liquids injurious to the delicate tissues of the stomach. Physicians are unanimous in declaring that iced drinks, impure water and unripe food cause the major portion of such distressing ills as Diarrhoea, Cholera Morbus, Typhoid, Cramps and stomach aches prevalent at this season. If you would avoid these distressing complaints begin at once the use of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. It is conceded by many physicians to be a most valuable disease preventive. If taken in tablespoonful doses in equal amounts of water or milk before meals and on retiring you can be reasonably sure of protection from disease incident to summer weather. Don't fail to have Duffy's at hand at all times. It is your nearest doctor in case of emergency. Follow the example of thousands of others. "Get Duffy's and Keep Well." Duffy's is sold in sealed bottles only, $1.00, and is obtainable at most druggists, grocers and dealers. If they can't supply you, write us. Useful household booklet free. Movie Actresses and Their Hair

Did it ever occur to you that every movie actress you have seen has lovely hair, while the most popular count their curls as their chief beauty? In fact, (this is a secret,) many are leading ladies just because of their attractive locks. Inquiry among them discloses the fact that they bring out all the natural beauty of their hair by careful shampooing, not with any soap or makeshift, but with a simple mixture which they make up for themselves by putting a teaspoonful of canthrox, (which they get from the druggist,) in a cup of hot water and applying this instead of soap. After its use their hair dries rapidly, with uniform color. Dandruff, excess oil and dirt are dissolved and entirely disappear. The hair is so fluffy that it looks much heavier than it is. Its lustre and softness is delightful, while the stimulated scalp gains the health which insures hair growth.

AGAINST CAFE DANCING.

The Board of Directors of the Friday Morning Club at its meeting during the past week adopted resolutions addressed to the City Council, in which the board declares that "in the interest of morality and the protection of our young people we believe that dancing and liquor-selling should not be associated." The board urges that the present ordinance which prohibits dancing in places where liquor is sold be continued.

Demand for Milit Million Dollar Mules Am

THE fortunes of war have brought to Los Angeles and to Southern California opportuni es for largely increasing the bulk business in various lines. There is enhanced demand for supplies hat are produced here, and for horses and mules that are California-raised. The opportunity is open for Los Angeles concerns to bid on va large contracts. It is possible for this part of California to gather some of these choice contracts, and should a state of war develop it is probable that the programme recently outlined by the Naval Advisory Board would be put into effect. This resulted in a survey of all the industrial establishments and commercial concerns here, to determine just what each could handle in case of the placing of emergency orders.

Right now in Los Angeles the government is disbursing large sums of money in the purchase of horses and mules. Its agents are here for the purpose of buying 5000 of these animals for the cavalry and artillery services. It is calculated this will require a four-month campaign in this vicinity and mean the expenditure of about $1,000,000.

Capt. Winterburn, a quartermaster of the regular army, is representing the government in these transactions. The firm of Guyton & Herrington of Kansas City, one of the largest handlers of horses and mules in the United States, is handling the assembling and inspection of the animals, and has placed Col. Sweet in charge of this work.

BUYERS' HEADQUARTERS.

Headquarters has been established at the stables and yards of John Snowden & Son, No. 405 Aliso street. More than a week ago the assembling of animals began there, and each day all that could be handled have been brought in. There are daily inspections and tryouts in the enclosed yards at the rear. The public is excluded. Skilled horsemen hunt the animals that pass initial inspection, and they are put through their paces, then scientifically measured and appraised; and if they pass muster they are taken to another yard, where the brand of Uncle Sam is pressed upon them.

John Snowden, who has long been in the horse and mule business in Los Angeles, has been scurrying around in the northern sections of the State the past two weeks, gathering up all the available mules he could secure. They will be shipped here and submitted for inspection of the government agents. Other horse and mule buyers are bringing in stock from various portions of the State, yet with all this activity it is expected at least four months will be required to secure the 5000 animals desired from this point.

And this is but a beginning to the opportunities that are open to Los Angeles and all Southern California. Headquarters for the purchase of

And this is but a beginning to the opportunities that are open to Los Angeles and all Southern California. Headquarters for the purchase of commissary and other army supplies for the Pacific Coast are at Fort Mason, San Francisco. For some time past the announcements for bids have designated San Francisco, Seattle, Tacoma and Portland as points from which bids f.o.b. can be quoted. Through the activities of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, including a personal visit of Carl McStay to Fort Mason, the quartermaster has agreed hereafter to include Los Angeles in these lists.

OUR PRODUCTS NEEDED.

Southern California produces certain products that it will be easily possible for local business firms to provide under army contract. Dried fruits, jams, jellies and canned goods, hay and grain, and various manufactured articles are in the lists that are open to bidding. The list itself is extensive.

Within the past few weeks Los Angeles firms more than ever before have been awakened to the possibilities of army contracts. The result is that probably fifty firms or individuals are closely watching the lists and making bids on the proposed contracts.

Last week two carloads of army cots were sent from Los Angeles to Nogales on a rush order. These were gathered up from several concerns.

The Moreland Truck Company recently secured a contract to furnish six auto trucks for use at the front, and these have been shipped. Wednesday night this firm secured an order for six more auto trucks, to be sent immediately to Calexico. These are one and a half-ton trucks, and this one piece of business represents approximately $24,000 for the Los Angeles firm.

Produce commission houses here are sending out a carload of vegetables a day to Columbus and Nogales. It is possible this trade will be largely expanded.

During the ensuing week a representative of the Chamber of Commerce will visit El Paso and other border points where the military is concentrated, for the express purpose of studying conditions there and to determine in just what lines of supplies the Los Angeles and Southern California business men can compete to advantage.

WHAT IS NEEDED.

Just now the quartermaster at Fort Mason is advertising for bids on a wide variety of products and supplies. He asks for bids on 300,000 pounds of hay, 60,000 pounds of bedding, and 100,000 pounds of straw, delivered at San Diego. Various Los Angeles firms will bid on this. There has developed quite a demand for paints, and at least two Los Angeles firms are trying to capture these orders.

As a sample of the supplies needed and the wide scope covered, the articles asked for July 25 may be cited. They include leather bands, blankets, bolts, braces, brushes, burlap, cans, cards, coolers, dryers, fittings for pipes, forks, graphite, hames, handles for mops and stable brooms, harness, hatchets, hoes, hooks and staples, iron, leather, nails, nuts, oils, padlocks, paints, pans, paper, picks, rakes, rivets, rope, rules, screwdrivers, shears, stands for typewriters, stone, tacks, thread, twine, varnishes, wrenches, and so on, through the alphabet.

In the last call for commissary supplies one might run over the contents of a first-class grocery and provision store and have the list.

In this call are included requests for bids on beef, fish, flour, cornmeal, baking powder, beans, rice, potatoes, onions, tomatoes, prunes, dried apples, dried peaches, jams, coffee, tea, sugar, vinegar, pickles, salt, pepper, cinnamon, cloves, ginger, nutmeg, lard, butter, syrup, flavoring extracts, apple butter, apricots, bacon, cabbage, candy, cheese, cherries, boneless chicken, cigars, cocoa, corn, crackers, gelatin, herring, ham, hominy, horseradish, lobster, macaroni, malted milk, mincemeat, molasses, mushrooms, mustard, oatmeal, olives, oysters, peaches, pears, peas, pumpkin, raisins, soups, tobacco, walnuts, yeast, and so on almost indefinitely.

Uncle Sam evidently proposes that his men shall have a taste of succulent California vegetables, for in this list are included apples, beets, cabbage, carrots, cauliflower, celery, eggplant, grapefruit, lettuce, lemons, onions, parsley, parsnips, peppers, peel of orange and lemon, piefruit, radishes, squash, tomatoes, turnips, etc.

What Did Sherman Say?

PREPAREDNESS AND NEAR-WAR PLAY HOB WITH SUMMER GIRL.

Monterey and Mexico have Taken Our Eligibles Away, and Swainless She's Wasting Her Sweetness on the Desert Air of No Man's Land.

BY ALMA WHITAKER.

THE summer girl's a-sighing, the summer girl's a-crying, "Come you back, you gallant soldier, come you back and play with me."

Tres desolee is the piquant summer girl, beauless, swainless, escortless, prepared to the last ribbon for conquest, ravishing in summer finery, primed to the teeth in all the arts of allurement, and nary a beau in sight. They could not love her, dear, so much, loved they not honor more, and honor has snatched them from her side to stern training camps, like Monterey, and to guard a menaced border line "somewhere in Mexico."

Monterey, Mex. — what wistful heartaches are they not responsible for in these cruel days? Could anything be more hopelessly incomplete than a summer lassie without a laddie? "Ah, but the world is cruel, cruel to you and to me," when ne'er a lassie has a laddie down by the silver sea.

Never were fashions so enchanting, never were sport hats more piquant, never were bathing suits more utterly revealing, never was sunshine more seductive, or moonlight more appealing. The scene is laid to its last provocative detail—for "Hamlet," without the Prince of Denmark! Oh, woe is the summer girl in this sad, mad, bad year of preparedness, 1916, wasting her beauty on the desert air of No Man's Land, listening ever to the ironical taunt of the wild waves' lapping against a swainless shore.

WITHOUT A HERO.

This summer's story is a dreary novel without a hero. Heroines de luxe, heroines galore, heroines blonde and heroines brunette, heroines petite and heroines Junoesque, shy and retiring, merry and impudent, athletic and bouyant, docile and leaning, queenly and proud, saucy and kittenish, intellectual and highbrow, or alluringly stupid, all are faced with the one terrible calamity. Cupid, Cupid, why hast thou forsaken them? Must all their infinite care in the selection of a tricky bathing suit, all their subtle perspicacity in the choice of hats, all their profound study of the piquant length of skirts and shoetops, all their careful adjustment of coy escaped tendrils, all their carefully-acquired knowledge of glances, count for naught?

Even the young matrons, who had thought themselves secure in the possession of a swain for life, find themselves "deserted," their lovers flown to other arms.

AMONG THE MISSING.

Think of the calamity that robs young wives of such masculine partners as handsome Pat Thornton of San Gabriel, of Jimmy Page, of Harry Pattee of polo fame, of Rufus Spalding, of Edwin Janss, of Robert Pitcairn, of Norman Kerr, of Russell McD. Taylor, of Ross Hickox, of Andrew J. Mullen, of Horace B. King, of H. V. Gifford, of Edward L. Doheny, Jr., of E. J. Milner, of Edward Fahy, of Bayard Taylor, of F. B. Brackett, of Earl Remington.

And picture to yourselves the yawning gap that must ensue in debutante circles by the cruel absence of Tod Ford, Jr., of H. R. Boynton, Jr., of Niel Brown, of Walter Brunswig, of Fred L. Brainerd, of Bill Bacon, of Bill Campbell, of Willie Clark, of Cruse Carriel, of Lester Carey, of Philip Forve, Jr., of L. C. Frey, Jr., of Leigh Guyer, of G. G. Gatch, of P. A. Howard, Jr., of Robert Holton, of Eric Kobbe, of J. E. Jardine, Jr., of Lloyd R. Macy, of S. G. Mudd, of Ralph Day, of Robin Skelley, of Roger Topp, of Donald O'Melveny, and so on through a glittering list of arch beaux?

Was it for this that beauteous maidens and adorable young matrons concentrated on the stores and the dressmakers for long weeks? Was it for this that cute bathing caps found themselves the subject of deep cogitation? Was it for this that the last superfluous inch was shaved off a ducky bathing suit? Oh, woe is the summer girl!

SOME TO EXULT.

But whist, 'tis an ill wind that blows no one any good. Think of the time the remaining college cubs, elderly beaux, frosty widowers, passe papas, Italian opera singers, indispensable movie actors, alien tourists, hotel clerks, mother's boys, postmen and chauffeurs are having! Any port in a storm. Every dog has his day. The wind is tempered to the shorn lamb.

How they will be able to brag of their romantic conquests in the years to come! With what supreme blaseness will they be able to proclaim a surfeit of feminine appreciation! Theirs not to reason why, theirs but to smirk and sigh! How happy could they be with any were 'tother dear charmers away!

This is the tragedy of the summer resorts. They toil not, neither do they train, these half-baked spurious beaux, yet Apollo in all his beauty was not sought like one of these.

And even so there don't begin to be enough to go round. Even when all the heroes are at home there is evidence of shortage. What is Dan Cupid thinking of? Preparedness is all very well, but these our maidens are arch-exponents of preparedness, they have left no curl uncurled, no stitch unstitched, no frill unfrilled, no glance unglanced, no smile unsmiled—they come, they see, but, alas, the beau is unworthy of conquest when he's there, and mostly he isn't. Love's labor lost, alas.

THEY BLUSH UNSEEN.

Pale, sweet spinsters in the years to come will heave with sighs as they look back over that dreadful month, July, 1916, in the pages of a lavender-scented diary. They will laugh a harsh, metallic laugh and breathe vengeance on fate. Fair flowers that bloomed and faded in a drought-ridden summer. Born to blush unseen in the most cunning bathing suit ever permitted by the Morals Efficiency Committee. They will recall the pitifully inadequate post cards with which their courage

MORE THAN FIVE MILLIONS IN ARMY CONTRACTS FOR COAST.

APPROXIMATELY $1,000,000 will be expended by Uncle Sam in Los Angeles within the ensuing four months in the purchase of 5000 horses and mules for cavalry and artillery service. Those who have given the subject close study declare that between $5,000,000 and $6,000,000 in business from the government will be given out in contracts to Pacific Coast business concerns this year because of the activities of the United States Army. Already several thousands of dollars have gone into the coffers of local concerns because of the movement of men to the border.

Through the activities of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce the business men of Southern California are becoming deeply interested in the possibilities of securing a good share of Uncle Sam's trade for the Pacific Coast. In certain lines they have a decided advantage, and fully fifty firms or individuals of Los Angeles are closely watching the calls for bids issued by the quartermaster at Fort Mason and are making their offers. The prospect is for a great expansion of this line of business.

At present a carload of fresh vegetables is sent daily from this city to border points for feeding the soldiers; two carloads of army cots have been sent from Los Angeles, and one firm has sent six auto trucks and has a rush order for six more.

Devotion.

"JACK" TANNER SAVES LIFE OF HIS BROTHER.

BRENT TANNER of this city, now a patient at the Good Samaritan Hospital, convalescent from a serious illness, will owe his probable recovery to the devotion of his brother, Dr. "Jack" Tanner, according to close friends of the brothers. When Brent Tanner became ill and his life was in the balance, Dr. "Jack" Tanner gave up his home in Santa Barbara and rushed to this city. He took up quarters in the hospital and at the California Club while his wife, Mrs. Virginia McDowell Clark Tanner, took apartments in Pasadena.

Dr. Tanner has been in constant attendance on his brother, assisted by Dr. Guy Cochran, and yesterday it was announced that the patient is in a fair way to recovery. At the California Club Dr. Tanner said yesterday, that his brother is in an excellent condition.

Dr. "Jack" Tanner, globe-trotter and bon vivant, acquired national prominence following his marriage to Mrs. Virginia McDowell Clark, widow of Walter Miller Clark, drowned on the Titanic, and the subsequent legal battle between the Tanners and Mr. and Mrs. J. Ross Clark, her father and mother-in-law, over the possession of Mrs. Tanner's little son, J. Ross Clark, III.

The struggle for the possession of the child was the sensation of the year in legal circles in this city. Mr. and Mrs. Tanner, who were in Paris on their honeymoon when the papers were served, hastened to Los Angeles and began a year-long fight to retain possession of the baby. The courts awarded the custody of the boy jointly to the mother and the grandparents, each to have possession of the child during six months of each year. This order was made in November, 1912. At present the child is with the grandparents on their ranch in Wyoming, where he will remain until October.

Mrs. Tanner has been living at No. 425 North Orange Grove avenue, Pasadena, and with friends, pending the completion of their new home at Columbia and Grand avenues in the same city.

This house will be completed in a short time and the first occupants, beside the owners, will be the sick brother and the child.

LEAVES OF JOY FROM A TRAVELER'S NOTEBOOK.

BY HARRY CARR.

OLD CHURCHES full of queer smells and illustrious corpses were never my idea of a good time. I found more interest in the people I traveled with than in the monuments of a glorious past. Although some of the people I traveled with were monuments of a glorious past.

Going over on the boat was a Danish grass widow. She had married nearly everybody in her own country, her last venture being a cavalry captain. She was still living in hope. She was fat and about forty and reasonably fair. Her glances were languishing and romantic, but her conquests were very practical.

This was her nineteenth trip on the same steamer. Her long experience was turned to business-like effect.

One of the passengers on the boat was a Norwegian baron or a count or some such celebrity. He was very elegant and full of bows and formalities and punk jokes. The minute she saw his name on the passenger list, the grass widow could see herself a baroness. Out of her intimate knowledge of the ropes, the lady manipulated the dining-room steward's seating lists until she found herself sitting at the captain's table between the commander of the ship and the Norwegian baron. Upon both she beamed, but not in the same way.

Her beams upon the ship's captain were only academic. The languishing smiles and sugary glances that she turned loose upon the baron meant business.

The baron, however, was an old bachelor of some experience and he wasn't easy to catch.

The merry widow walked the deck with him in the evening. She played shuffle board with him. Every day, she appeared in a new and ravishing costume. Some dresser, was that grass widow.

In spite of our most painstaking efforts, we couldn't find out just how she was getting along. It was evident that the lady herself couldn't tell either. The baron was very attentive and very ceremonious and studiously polite. At dinner, he was a model of courtesy. But what worried the widow was that, when she occasionally left him for a minute, she found him bestowing the same ceremonious etiquette and the same delicately flavored jokes upon the first woman he happened to meet on the steamer deck.

Having played all the rest of her cards, the beauteous grass widow finally pulled out a very old one. She decided to make him jealous. It looked to me as though she were trying to bring down an elephant with a bean shooter; but she didn't ask my advice, so I just stood at one side and looked on.

At the time she got this hunch we were just sighting the Orkney Islands, the first land we had seen since leaving New York.

One day, a thin smudge of smoke appeared on the horizon. The black smudge grew into a steamer that stood across our bows and ordered us to stop. It was His Majesty's blockade steamer, the Columbella. A ship's boat was lowered from the steamer and came pitching across the rough sea to our ship. We all stood looking over the rail at the life boat filled with British sailors and marines. As the widow came shouldering in through the group, she also took a look over the rail. What she saw changed the course of her life, as the Laura Jean says.

What she saw was a handsome rosy cheeked boy lieutenant sitting in the stern sheets of the life boat, giving orders to the crew. He was in the command of the prize crew that was coming on board to take our ship into Kirkwall to be searched.

It didn't take long for a lady of the widow's experience to see the chance. Here, she decided, was where she would make the old baron wild with jealousy with the usual matrimonial sequel.

I have to hand it to the Danish widow; she is a woman of determination. When she made up her mind to annex the boy lieutenant, she got right on the job.

The lieutenant was a charming little fellow. He had been a purser on a passenger boat before the war. He shook hands with us all and said cheerfully, "Say, fellows, I'm bored to death out on this blockade. What do you say we play poker or something?"

We were all delighted with him and somebody rushed off to find the saloon steward to get a deck of cards when a firm hand reached out and removed him from our midst. It wasn't Death, but something quite as relentless. The widow simply walked right into the group, shouldering us out of the way and linked one of her arms through the arm of the lieutenant. He looked back over his shoulder with a pathetic appeal to us; but there was no rescuing him from the widow.

We were in Kirkwall three days, but we hardly saw him after that. The widow had him to tea; she promenaded the deck with him; she had him to dinner. When his soul panted for cards, the widow took him to the card salon and discreetly played cards with him.

I tried to see what effect this had on the baron, but he was too subtle for me. After we left Kirkwall, we had our same seats at the table. The baron still sat at the left flank of the widow. If his manner had grown cold, we couldn't see it. He seemed to have the same old jokes and the same elaborate courtesy, although we noticed that he omitted the usual deck promenade. He disappeared after dinner, leaving the widow to her devices.

We didn't know whether the widow had won or lost until we got to Copenhagen. The passengers were crowded all over the deck of course while the steamer was warped slowly up to the dock. It is a very small harbor and it takes a long time to turn the ship.

The widow was there in a fascinating fluff of veils and baggage, but the baron was nowhere to be seen.

At last the ship was docked. We all raced down with our baggage and opened it for the Danish customhouse officers. I saw the widow standing there at the foot of the gangway. Her baggage had been opened with celerity due to the ravishing smile she cast upon the customhouse official.

While she stood there waiting, the baron started down the gangplank. He was all fixed up. His hands were gloved and he was dressed in the height of fashion. He carried a little cane in his hands and plodding down behind him came two porters carrying his baggage. The widow looked up and smiled a tropical smile at the descending baron. It missed fire. The baron's eyes were fixed on vacancy. He passed her without a spark of recognition.

The widow's ace was trumped.

DRAMA LEAGUE RECEIVES.

Former National President is the Guest of Honor.

The Los Angeles center of the Drama League held a reception Friday night in promenade thirteen of the Brack Shops in honor of Dr. Richard Burton of the University of Minnesota, formerly national president of the Drama League of America, who is at present engaged in delivering a series of lectures before the summer school of the University of Southern California.

Dr. Burton is a lecturer and writer of wide fame, and he and Mrs. Burton are by no means strangers in Southern California. Many social events have been arranged in their honor since their recent arrival here.

In the line of reception were Mrs. E. B. Jones, president of the Los Angeles center of the Drama League; Mrs. William de Mille, daughter of Henry George and the wife of the noted playwright, William de Mille; Dr. and Mrs. Allison Gaw of the University of Southern California; Prof. and Mrs. Wood of the University of Southern California; Mrs. Sarah M. Johnson, treasurer of the Los Angeles center of the Drama League, Miss Dora Holmes and Mrs. Eliza Tupper Wilkes.

There was a large attendance of distinguished people. The reception commenced at 8 o'clock and lasted until after 11, and was delightfully informal.

Dr. Burton spoke briefly on the aims of the Drama League.

COUNTY'S LONGEST BRIDGE IS OPENED.

TO BEAR HEAVY TRAFFIC FROM CITY TO POMONA.

Officials of Automobile Club and Representatives of Highway Commissioner's Office View Giant Spans Over the San Gabriel River and Wash.

Los Angeles county's longest bridge, and one of the most costly in the State, was opened to travel yesterday at Bassett, across the San Gabriel River and wash.

This is one of the most important bridges in the county, since it will carry the heavy traffic between Los Angeles and Pomona and other valley towns on the Pomona boulevard. For many months since the storms, automobiles and other vehicles have been forced to leave the smooth boulevard for a detour through sand and dampness.

The bridge has been constructed by the county road department at a cost of $96,000—for the bridge proper—and an additional $10,000 is called for to build the necessary protection work from floods and for the approaches.

Its length is 880 feet, divided into eleven spans of eighty feet each, supported by immense eighty-foot steel girders.

Officials of the Automobile Club of Southern California and representatives from County Highway Commissioner Joyner's office yesterday were present at the opening at 2 o'clock. There were no normal ceremonies, but a feeling of relief by all present that the big work was finally accomplished.

Protection pilings will be used in the river bottom to guard the handsome structure from storm water, and there will be no danger of its ever washing out again. In the east and west fills there has been used 40,000 yards of earth. Some of the protection work has been completed, but there is still some to be done.

The distance of the bridge from the city is sixteen miles.

SUIT HINGES UPON FEW SPOKEN WORDS

DID MRS. DE BAKER PROMISE GIFT OF PROPERTY?

Spanish - speaking Man Who Cared for Her Brother Claims Place from Which Heirs Would Evict Him—Court has to Call an Interpreter.

A few words spoken by Mrs. Arcadia B. de Baker to Domingo Quarterolo, an Italian, play an important part in the suit of the heirs of Mrs. de Baker to secure possession of property at No. 1127 Second street, which Mr. Quarterolo claims. Mrs. de Baker spoke to him in Spanish, he says, and when it was undertaken to translate the conversation through an Italian interpreter, because Mr. Quarterolo speaks English indifferently, Judge Conley, who is trying the case, demanded that an interpreter of Spanish be called.

So the conversation was given in Spanish and translated as follows: "Take good care of my brother, and if he dies before you, the property is yours—and something else besides."

The brother referred to was J. Bandini, who died in August, 1910. The property, located at Santa Monica, belonged to Mrs. de Baker. Mr. Quarterolo continued to stay on the property. The heirs are seeking to oust him on the ground that he was permitted to live on the premises by Mrs. de Baker during her lifetime; that it was by suffrance only. Although formal notice was served on him, Mr. Quarterolo refused to vacate, after the final decree of distribution in the $7,000,000 de Baker estate.

The case will be resumed tomorrow.

JUDGMENT IS REVERSED.

Decision Gives Insurance Money to Second Wife.

The District Court of Appeal has reversed the judgment of Superior Judge Myers, in favor of the defendants, in the action brought by Iva L. Garrett against William E. Garrett, a minor, and the Bankers' Life Company. The action involved two membership certificates in the corporation, worth $4000, held by the late Edward E. Garrett. The money had been paid into the court to await the result of the litigation by the life insurance company.

In June, 1903, Mr. Garrett took out two certificates of membership in the company, payable to Emma L. Garrett, then the wife of the insured. Later on, Garrett and his wife were divorced, whereupon Garrett changed the beneficiary, substituting for his wife his minor son, William E. Garrett. Later Garrett married Iva L. Garrett, and indorsed the certificates to her. The company approved of the transfer, but the approval was not made officially until after the death of Mr. Garrett.

The lower court found in favor of William E. Garrett, holding that the change of the beneficiary had not been legally completed, but the District Court takes the other horn of the dilemma, and decides that it was, and that the second wife is entitled to the money, which now amounts to $4070.

FOR CHARITY THRIFT.

Head of County Relief Work Wants Mechanical Engineer Added to His Force, Declaring Big Saving will Thereby be Made Possible.

Request for a mechanical engineer to head a mechanical department within the Department of County Charities was made yesterday in a letter filed with the Board of Supervisors by Supt. Martin. At present all the work is done under direct supervision of the mechanical department, which last year charged against the charities $80,000 for services rendered.

Supt. Martin declared this overhead charge of approximately $700 per month could be reduced by from $5000 to $10,000 per year under the plan proposed. He suggests that a competent engineer for the work would be obtainable at a salary not to exceed $175 per month and that, aside from the laborers, only one office assistant would be necessary to carry on the work. The engineer's duties would be confined largely to the making of necessary repairs and small improvements, those to exceed $2000 being left in the hands of the mechanical department, as heretofore.

Action on the request will be taken Tuesday.

FINNEGAN OF PAINT-BRUSH.

Man Who Smeared up National Forest with Signs will Now Erase Same.

"On again, off again, gone again, Finnegan," muttered a certain Los Angeles painter yesterday as he started back over his tracks to erase a great number of glaring advertisements of a local business college which for the past three months he has been busily painting on every big rock and cliff he could find along the route of the "Rim of the World," the wonderful scenic highway, 101 miles long, that runs from San Bernardino to Big Bear Valley.

The sign painter is not doing this for exercise. He is doing it to keep out of jail. A drastic Federal law prevents the disfigurement of natural scenery in the national forests by any signs which are in the interests of trade. Those necessary for giving directions to travelers are permitted, but not the kind exploiting the Los Angeles institution. Forest Supervisor Charlton called the sign painter's attention to his oversight and the sign painter is in the market for paint remover in barrel lots.

Fall for It.

BRIGHT LIGHTS BETRAY HENS.

Chickens Respond to Lure of Forty-watt Lamps.

Are Hoodwinked by Burbankers and Lay Extra Eggs.

Electricity Induces Biddy to Work Three Shifts.

Hoodwinking hens into rising at 3 o'clock in the morning and forcing them to begin to lay at that hour has proved a profitable experiment for Burbank poultrymen.

C. H. Kline began it. Last December he put electric lights in some of the pens and during that month, when the price of eggs was at its highest, succeeded in getting an egg production 20 per cent. above normal. He tried the experiment at first only on some of his hens and the result was the hens whose pens were lighted at an early hour had an egg average of 50 per cent., while those whose pens remained dark until the late sun illuminated them, had an egg average of 30 per cent.

One thousand hens were first experimented upon. In two weeks Mr. Kline found that a gain was made of 22 per cent., the normal gain being 18 per cent.

LIGHTED PENS.

There is a half-mile of pens at the Kline ranch, and each twenty-foot section is lighted by a forty-watt lamp. During the first days of the experiment brighter lights were used, but it was found these exerted a too exciting influence upon the hens. The lights are turned on and off by means of a time-clock system. Mr. Kline says that as soon as the lights go on, the hens arise and begin their matutinal conversation and labors. In no way does their conduct differ from that of hens who arise to the light of the sun, except that instead of a working day of eight hours, they have one of eighteen.

In each pen is a fountain of running water, dry feed and hopper feed. The extra amount of food consumed by the hens during the early hours adds to their egg production.

FIRST EXPERIMENT.

The Kline ranch was the first to make use of this experiment on the Coast. In a small way it had been tried in New Jersey, but the Burbank people are the first to adopt it in a large way.

There are 10,000 laying White Leghorn hens at the Kline ranch and all are to be subjected to the new process this winter. The lights will go on in September and will be burned for a portion of each night until the first of May.

The lights do not go on at the same hour each night, but the hens are made accustomed to their lengthened hours gradually. In September the lights are turned on about 5 o'clock a.m. They are started an hour earlier each week until they begin at 3 o'clock.

SYSTEM PROVED.

Last winter, after the experiments of Mr. Kline had become known, the Forsyth & Craig Poultry Ranch divided its flock into two, and a record was made of the ages, conditions and number in each half. A two weeks' experiment was made upon one-half of the flock, with the result that the hens whose pens were lighted raised from an egg production of 600 eggs per day to 1200 per day. Later the partnership of this firm was dissolved and the flocks were both subjected to the same treatment, with the same results.

MARKET CONTROL.

Mr. Kline says this new method of egg production can be made to control the egg market. The egg production can be made to expand when the prices are highest, and can be slackened when prices are low.

Eventually it will put the cold-storage egg out of business, says Mr. Kline, since fresh eggs can be produced as the market demands. Seventy-five cents per dozen is a thing of the past if egg men will utilize this new system, and a normal egg price will be reached, the Burbank experimenter asserts.

NEW HEN FOOD.

The ideal system for Southern California chicken growers will be reached when a food is found for hens which will obviate the need of importing grain from other States, says Mr. Kline. He thinks Southern California should produce all the eggs used in this portion of the State by using natural foods which are unfit for human consumption.

In pursuance of this theory Mr. Kline has planted three acres of Scicilian spineless cactus which he intends to use as food for his hens. He has experimented with it and found it ideal for egg production, as well as much cheaper than the alfalfa now used for green food. The hens are more eager for the succulent leaves than for the dryer grass.

W. F. Craig has also been experimenting along the food line and has been using milk and barley as his basis. The ideal food has not yet been found, say both men.

TO GIVE THREE SERMONS HERE DURING AUGUST.

Dr. Ambrose White Vernon, Who has Held Various Important Posts in Eastern and European Universities, will Visit Relatives in Los Angeles.

Dr. Ambrose White Vernon, noted lecturer, educator and clergyman, who resides at Brooklin, Mass., arrived yesterday, accompanied by his wife, for a stay of several weeks at the home of their cousin, E. B. Vernon, No. 121 East Avenue Fifty-six. Dr. and Mrs. Vernon have just completed a tour of the United States, and came here from the Yosemite.

It is expected that Dr. Vernon will preach in the First Congregational Church here the second, third and fourth Sundays of August. He is a close friend of Dr. William Horace Day and has indicated that he will accept the invitation of the latter, to fill the pulpit on those occasions.

Dr. Vernon has been before the public as an educator, author, lecturer and preacher for the past quarter-century. He is a graduate of Princeton University, the Union Theological Seminary of New York, the universities of Berlin, Halle and Gottingen, and has received degrees at Dartmouth, Yale and Harvard.

He was for several years professor of Bible and literature at Dartmouth, during which time he was pastor of the Dartmouth Chapel. In 1907 he accepted a similar position at Yale, leaving two years later to accept the pastorate of the Harvard Church at Brookline. Since that time he has lectured extensively, including among his series, several Dudleian lectures at Harvard University, in 1913, and at Andover Theological Seminary in 1915.

He is the author of "The Religious Value of the Old Testament," and editor of "Modern Religious Problems."

FINE SCHOOL SITE.

John D. Hooker West Adams-street Residence, with Fine Italian Gardens, is Leased—Open-air Classes will be Leading Feature.

Tuesday, October 3, the famous John D. Hooker residence at No. 325 West Adams street, with its two and one-half acres of gardens, will be opened as a school for girls. The Italian gardens, the scene in times past of many brilliant society affairs and benefit entertainments, will be used as out-of-door classrooms and children will study their lessons in the old pergola.

The site is to be occupied by the St. Catherine's School for Girls, now located at No. 636 West Adams street. It will be conducted under the direction of the Misses Maude Thomas and Alicia Mosgrove, who are the founders of the institution. The Hooker residence and grounds have been leased to the school for an indefinite period by Mrs. Hooker, who is a close friend of Miss Thomas and Miss Mosgrove.

No alterations for the accommodation of the school will be necessary, with the exception of refinishing and refurnishing the building which stands just back of the residence. This building will be equipped as a modern school room with blackboards and regulation desks, and will be used only when the weather prevents the holding of recitations in the gardens.

The school at present, in the quarters, will accommodate 150 under 14 years of age. Pr for additional classes will made during the first year in new home. The main building be used as the dormitory and quarters of the faculty and the bers of the boarding school.

The Hooker home was last year by Mrs. John P. Jones

We know you'll regret it if you don't take advantage of this opportunity.

THAT "DRIVE."
Unless the allies show more spirit and success in their present "drive" against the Germans, it will be several years before they get the troops of the Kaiser out of French territory. Then the Germans will have just commenced to fight.

PANTS A GIVE-AWAY.
A story from Colton intimates that plump girls can't hide in trousers. Nature and the tailor combined to make it rather difficult, but what real girl, plump or thin, wants to hide in trousers when she can wear a sport suit, with stripes a foot wide?

ANOTHER VIEW.
An expert has figured out that accidents due to automobiles are not caused by the over-speeding of these vehicles, but to the under-speeding of other vehicles and pedestrians. It is therefore proposed that in choosing a street, a person must travel at least at the rate of fifty miles an hour. That would help some.

ROBBED OF STOCK PHRASES.
"Lo! the poor Indian, whose untutored mind sees God in clouds and hears Him in the wind," has long been incorrect verse and now the Commissioner of Indian Affairs says the "vanishing Indian" is no longer vanishing. No doubt that's the result of his tutoring. Nevertheless the phrases will die hard.

TOO MUCH FOR HIM.
Dr. William Simon, professor of chemistry at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Baltimore, and the only man who had the distinction of having photographed a rainbow, is dead. If he had survived longer he might have tried to photograph the Wilson hopes of re-election, and that is some rainbow, if you should care to inquire.

AS TO BEET SUGAR.
According to a compilation made by the foreign trade department of the National City Bank, New York, the United States will this year hold fourth rank among the beet producing countries of the world. The total product is figured at 2,000,000,000 pounds, and in this grand total California has the honor of being among the heaviest contributors.

LAWN POLITICS.
In the list of clubwomen patronesses of the Governor's lawn party, one notices quite a number of his great army of office-holders—trustees, commissioners, deputies, etc., all getting something from Hire'm. Who can blame them for kow-towing to the Governor? Criticism of their political activity in his behalf would be unfair. They've simply got to do it. And the taxpayers have to settle.

THE MAINE ELECTION.
The first ballot of the political campaign is to be fought in Maine September 11, when a Governor, a State ticket and a United States Senator are to be elected.

Vance McCormick, the chairman of the Democratic National Committee, claims that more than half of the Progressives in Maine will vote the Democratic ticket, while H. D. Gardner, Progressive candidate for Governor in Maine two years ago, declares that most of the Maine Progressives are for Mr. Hughes.

In 1912 Maine polled 51,113 votes for Wilson, 48,493 for Roosevelt and 26,545 for Taft. In 1914 the Democratic vote for Governor was 62,039, the Republican vote was 58,862, and the Progressive vote had dwindled to 18,225.

The result of the September election in Maine will be awaited with interest. Both Roosevelt and Taft are billed to stump the State for the Republican ticket there, and the Progressive organization has apparently passed out of existence.

FACILIS DECENSUS AVERNO.
Great Britain has inadvertently conferred a benefit upon German firms doing business in the United States by blacklisting them. The result has been that the firms named have gained much more business from Germans and Scandinavians and indignant Americans than they have lost from Englishmen. Another result will be to lessen investments in the $100,000,000 loan which the French government is trying to place in the United States.

In ancient days men fought with swords and spears and bows and arrows and, after Friar Tuck—that man of God who invented gunpowder—soldiers fought with guns and looked up to their flags and—

"Ere yet the life-blood warm and wet
Had dimmed the glistening bayonet,
Each soldier eye did brightly turn
To where its sky-born glories burn,
And as his springing steps advance,
Caught war and vengeance from the glance."

It is different now. The common soldiers shoot from underground and hurl stink-pot bombs at each other. And the uncommon soldiers stretch their unwearied legs under mahogany desks and compile blacklists and transcribe orders of council to prevent food from reaching the women and children of the enemy.

From Richard of the Lion Heart cleaving the Saracen with his sword to the British War Office official opening private letters and confiscating breeches that might otherwise shelter the nether extremities of Germans there is a difference as great as that between a Nimrod hunting tigers and a bugologist skinning fleas.

A GREAT YEAR FOR PRODUCERS.
Another exceptionally-prosperous year is assured to the California farmer and orchardist. From all parts of the State reports are bearing out the optimistic crop estimates which were made several months ago. Some of the crops will be less abundant than they have been in past seasons, but a real crop failure is unknown in California. It simply does not exist. Even if some crops are smaller than normal, this is a factor which will work to the greater benefit of the producer, as it means higher prices for his products.

Whether the world war continues or ceases, there is sure to be a heavy demand for most of the crops harvested in California. With the removal of approximately 25,000,000 able-bodied men from labor and industry to take part in the present Saturnalia of bloodshed, and the filling of their places by women, agriculture in Europe has suffered a terrible setback. It is to this country that the bleeding nations of the Old World look for the greater portion of their food supplies, and as California is one of the foremost agricultural States in the Union, her farmers have been getting their full share of war profits.

The season of 1915 went down in history as the greatest that the ranchers of California had ever enjoyed. Close to $115,000,000 was paid to the growers and producers of foodstuffs in this State last year. This sum will be exceeded this year by fully $10,000,000, and if the farmer is not in too great a hurry to market his product another million or so may be added to his profits.

Severe frosts in the northern sections of the State during the spring months caused considerable damage to the apple, cherry and potato crops; but the growers of these commodities have actually benefited by this fact, as they are assured of a high enough price for their remaining crops to more than offset what they would have received if their output had been larger. The growing season in California has so far been generally propitious, with abundant rains over most parts of the State.

While the production of deciduous fruits this year in California does not compare very favorably with the average for the past six years, there is good reason for optimism in the southern section of the State. On the first of the present month the condition of oranges was reported as 93, compared with a ten-year average of 88. On the same date the condition of lemons was placed at 90, compared with a ten-year average of 87. Today last year's crop of oranges and lemons are commanding fancy prices. Valencia oranges are selling for 50 cents a box more than they did twelve months ago, and the price of lemons has soared almost out of sight.

The lemon situation at present is exceedingly interesting. With the beginning, about a month ago, of unusually hot weather in the eastern and central sections of the United States there sprang up a heavy demand for lemons. Italian shipments to this country had practically ceased, on account of the war, so California was looked to for the East's supply of the cooling citrus fruit. In the last thirty days demand has so outstripped supply that holders of lemons have been able to secure $2 a box more than has ever been paid in the past for California lemons. The tremendous profits that have been made by lemon growers this year are sure to be followed by a greatly-increased acreage and a corresponding enhancement in the value of lands suitable for the cultivation of citrus fruits.

Another exceptionally favored commodity this year will be sugar beets. With a total acreage of about 200,000 acres California is going to play a big part in the sugar market this fall and winter. Most of the beet farmers of the State have already contracted to sell their crop to the refiners at prices representing an advance of from 50 to 75 cents a ton over what they received last year. With sugar selling for twice what it brings in normal times, and the allies depending upon this country for the major portion of their supply of the sweet staple, the sugar beet crop of California should bring the growers this season $10,000,000 in round numbers.

There never has been such a demand as at present for the good things we grow. Our beans and prunes, for instance, will be fed to hundreds of thousands, if not millions, of fighting men in the European trenches, and Uncle Sam will want a big share of our production for his own brave lads on the border. A few weeks ago the United States government paid as high as 10 cents a pound for white dried beans and the market today is considerably above that figure. Prunes this year will bring the grower fully a third more than he received in 1915, and the value of the raisin crop has been estimated at $17,500,000, as compared to $16,000,000 last season.

The prosperity of California is dependent upon the productions of its soil. This is the only way in which new wealth can be created. With the extraordinary foreign demand for the Golden State's food products and the heavy consumption in the homeland the farmer will have more markets than he can supply. The present is good to him and the future is a rainbow of promise.

EFFICIENCY.
Who would have thought that efficiency could be controversial? There seem to be as many religions of efficiency as there are of Christianity. Every one of our respectable Councilmen stands for efficiency, you understand, but they are seriously divided as to methods and suitable priests and proper ritual.

Efficiency Director Burks, as the local temporal head of the faith, does not exactly enjoy that unity which is strength in the disciples of the creed. There is much controversy as to the use of a set ritual, or the impromptu inspiration of nonconformity, sprinkling or total immersion, an orthodox litany or individual prayer. Should there be enthroned bishops of efficiency, canons, deans, pastors or curates, dioceses and parishes, or should worshiping be on the more nonconformist lines fo modest democracy?

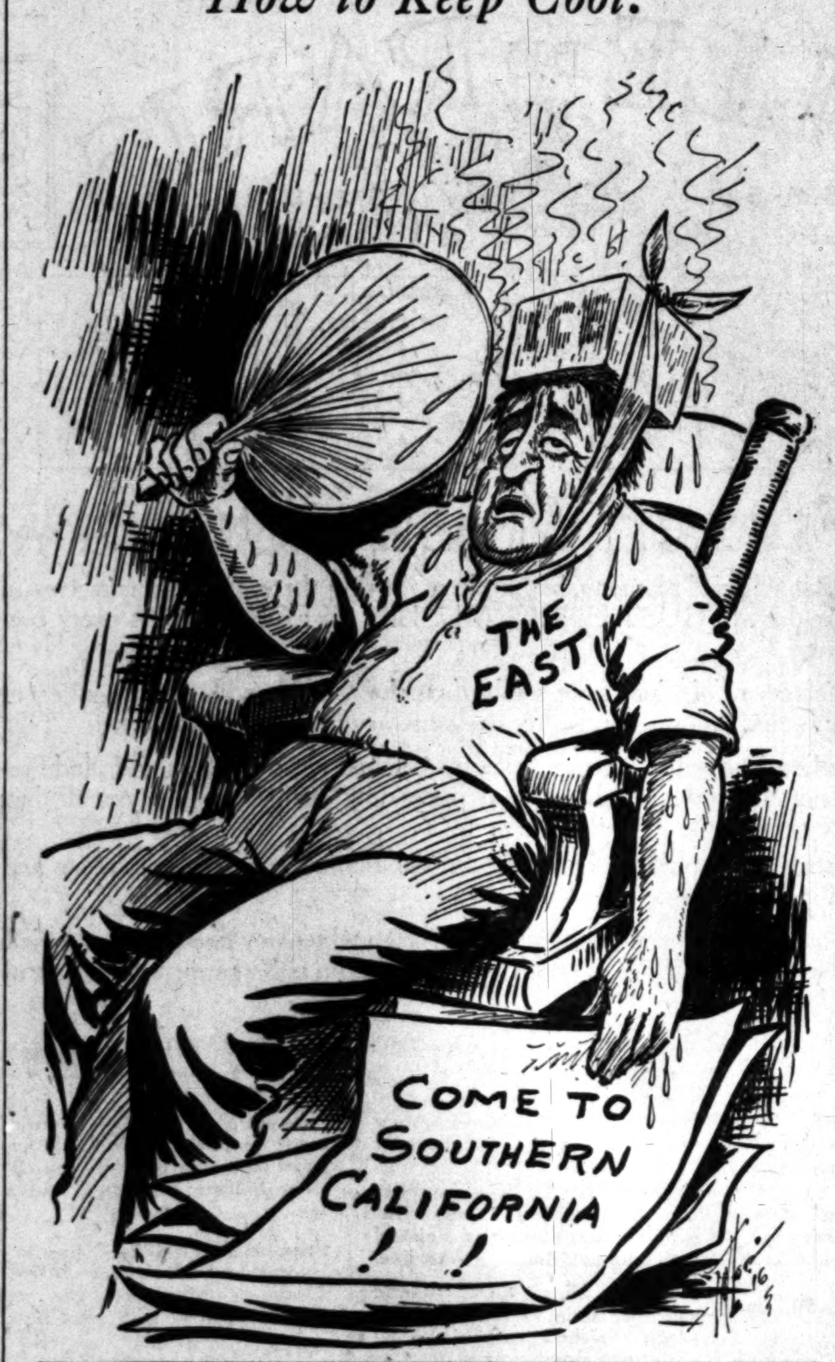
There appear to be as many straight and narrow paths to efficiency as there are to heaven—and as much bitterness and sectarianism in their choice. Efficiency is our faith, but which church shall we join? Shall we build a cathedral or a chapel? A meeting-house or a synagogue? We inefficient heathens gaze with dismay at the embarrassment of choice.

It is all very well to say that by efficiency we shall be saved. But directly we have embraced one form of efficiency, behold the apostle of another sect declaring us among the damned. Nothing could be more discouraging!

"Convictions," says Nietzsche, "are more dangerous enemies of truth than lies." And again, "He who cannot find the way to his ideal lives more frivolously and shamelessly than the man without an ideal."

Someone has said that we Americans have a poor talent for religion. We certainly don't seem to be overbright at efficiency.

How to Keep Cool.



SAN FRANCISCO'S OPPORTUNITY
The latest developments as to San Francisco's bomb outrage all tend to confirm the earlier reports that the perpetrators were not "foreign anarchists" but a still more noisome brood, hatched in that incubator of murder, arson and license, the San Francisco Labor Union Council. The three suspects now under arrest were all members of that body and occupied places high in its executive councils; one was a picket, another a spy and the third an international delegate. The fiendish crime of which they are accused is typical of the organization which they represent; murder and arson are its most effective weapons; criminal leisure and unbridled license are its ideals. No tyrant of legend or history was more fiendish or more rapacious; none waxed more fat and insolent on the blood and sweat of its victims.

Under the domination of this criminal organization industrial freedom had become a thing almost unknown in San Francisco; it was listed among the lost. The bosses of the council made and unmade Supervisors, judges and mayors; a subservient police force had become a protection in place of a menace to organized infamy. Such was the condition when the movement for a preparedness parade was launched. The Labor Council frowned on this demonstration in favor of law and order and gave instructions that it should be suppressed. All union men were forbidden to march in the parade; no member of a union could work on any article that was to be used in or for the great preparedness demonstration.

Against this dictum, however, 30,000 loyal, patriotic citizens rebelled. They placed above the union label the Goddess of Liberty and the Stars and Stripes. Then the council bared its poisonous fangs and the dynamite squads prepared the bombs for direct action. They struck, tearing a gaping wound in the parade and drenching the cobblestone streets south of Market with the bloody debris of innocent women and children. Half a hundred fell, but the line of march stiffened. The blow awakened indignation in the place of fear. A few petty politicians and members of the police force sulked, but the great mass of independent citizenship have demanded that the Labor Council be purged by the flaming sword of outraged justice, that the thrall of the walking delegates be broken and that the fires of industrial freedom be kindled on the altars sprinkled by the blood of the innocent victims sacrificed to the Moloch of union labor despotism.

San Francisco possesses a latent spirit that, once roused, is indomitable. That spirit was manifested when the vigilantes wrested the sword of justice from weak or criminal hands in "the days of '49" and rid the city of an element second in lawlessness only to that which perpetrated the Saturday outrage; it was manifested again when earthquake and flame took for their toy the great western metropolis and after working their will threw it back as a burned and broken thing on the sands of the Pacific. A third demonstration appeared Wednesday night when 10,000 determined men and women raised their hands and their voices at a great mass meeting in San Francisco's municipal auditorium in a demand that criminal associations be suppressed, thugs imprisoned, murderers hanged and intimidation of honest citizens and honest labor be no longer tolerated.

As in the days of the vigilantes, a committee of one hundred was appointed to "assist" in the restoration of law and order. The temper of this movement is not to be misunderstood. Among the score of speakers that addressed the mass meeting there was not a member of the notorious Labor Council nor of any labor union. On the committee of one hundred, union labor is not represented. Neither do the names of Fremont Older, Rudolph Spreckels or other self-styled pacifists appear. The beginning is auspicious; it is a popular demonstration in favor of independent, militant industrial freedom.

San Francisco gives promise of self-redemption. The petty officials that have cowed and crawled before the spawn of the Labor Council must be driven with the lash of public scorn out of public life. Picketing and other forms of lawless intimidation must be suppressed. The independent workman must receive the recognition he merits and the industrial city must no longer strive to exist half slave and half free. Before proceeding further with its crusade for municipal ownership of its street railways, the community must assure public ownership of its own streets. There must no longer be sections on the water front and elsewhere through which the independent workman can pass only at the peril of life or limb.

There is work for the municipality, the State and the Federal government to perform, rude work for hardy hands. Industrial freedom loves not carpet knights. The dragon of the Labor Council will not loose its hold on the community without a struggle. There will be timid voices to cry, "stop, you are hurting business;" sophists will rant about human rights, animated soap boxes will fulminate about downtrodden labor; the Emma Goldmanites and the I.W.W. will rally to the rescue. But the forces of law and order throughout the country will not be idle, a manifestation of a spirit of independence will be eagerly welcomed; the mills and factories that have been driven away by outrageous union labor demands will be replaced with others, attracted by more favorable labor conditions. The purse of eastern capital will reopen.

The first movement has revealed a bit of radiant sky. San Francisco stands on the threshold of an era of industrial freedom; her hand is on the latch; an expectant State and nation await the opening.

Capitols too Small.

[Buffalo Commercial:] One-third of the States of the Union find their capitols inadequate to accommodate the increased State activities that have grown up in recent years, according to data gathered by the Columbus Chamber of Commerce, and are wrestling with the problem of finding additional room. To aid the Ohio Building Commission, the organization has secured information from many States on the manner in which the problems are being solved.

The majority seem to favor the plan of erecting a new office building as an annex to the present capitols. In some States the plan has been to build additions to present structures or to remodel the buildings to make more room.

Washington has gone in for a comprehensive group plan of State buildings to cost more than $6,000,000, while California is bringing to completion a new capitol costing a similar amount. Each is located in a large park. Compared to these the Ohio plan to spend little more than $1,000,000 is thought to be very modest.

At Madison, Wis., is being completed a new Statehouse that has cost $7,000,000, while in Nashville, Tenn., the plan is to build a separate office structure. The same sort of plan is entertained in Nebraska, Michigan, like Ohio, is getting ready to provide additional room for State departments. In none of the States does it appear that the rent of outside quarters has been made a political issue as it was in Ohio.

RIPPLING RHYMES.

BE CHEERFUL.

Don't talk of griefs and things like those, don't be a chronic fretter; for if you don't describe your woes, all men will like you better. Perhaps you have the largest corn that ever hurt a trilby; but if you treat the same with scorn, you more attractive will be. Perhaps you have an aching tooth that's given you the willies; why, then conceal the hateful truth and talk of Easter lilies. Time was when I would lose my chums as fast as I could gain them; they'd leave me, gnashing teeth and gums—I never could retain them. My conversation gave a shock, it made the victims shiver, because I always wished to talk about my lights and liver. At last it dawned upon my mind that if I'd not be lonely, I must some cheerful subjects find—and cheerful subjects only. So I began to dance and sing, and talk of matters cheery, and people murmured, "You, by jing, no longer make us weary." I do not talk of how I feel, of anguish grim and gripping; if I have earache in my heel I talk of lambkins skipping. WALT MASON.

SNAP SHOTS.

[Dallas News:] Do not let your teeth go unbrushed in the expectation that you will escape by the skin of them.

Of course there are plenty of arguments against female suffrage, but we don't know any reason why the goose that lays the eggs should not help legislate for the goslings.

What we personally think about Socialism is that if you are not doing much for yourself you wouldn't do much for anybody else.

Flour Was Tough.

[Chicago News:] "I just stopped to tell you about that flour you sent me the other day," said Mrs. Newlywed.

"Why, madam," answered the grocer, "that was the best flour I carry in stock. What was the matter with it?"

"Matter, indeed! Why, it was so tough my husband couldn't eat the biscuits I made with it."

Well Qualified.

[Judge:] "Are you good at figures?" asked the business man.

"I ought to be," replied the woman who had applied for a position. "I used to be wardrobe mistress for a burlesque troupe."

BEING THE PARTICULAR PEPPER IN SOME PERSONAL OPINIONS

Of Don yo de Chiltepin.

Language may be used in a courtroom which would never be tolerated elsewhere. But it must be in Quotations! The selfsame words, if used as original words, would mean fine and imprisonment.

Justice has to deal with many things beyond the pale of decency. And what is true of our constituted courts of law is equally true of the Supreme Court of Public Opinion. Before which bench I am now a witness against the Enemies of our Country. And for the moment I am less concerned with the low-browed, ignorant anarchists, the foes of law and order—the Standing Menace to each one of us—than with the Sheep in Sheep's Clothing, whose wits are shoddy-gathering; the Mutton-minded Molluscs that spill their Mush all over us.

Mixed metaphor? Seguro, Miguel! I mixed it myself, to match their Scrambled Brains. And I've not muddled it half enough yet!

"And a man's foes shall be they of his own household." The Scripture means Serious ones. It is relatively easy to elude, circumvent or otherwise nullify a Mere Enemy outside the breastworks. The individual assassin, burglar, dynamiter is merely a Pimple—even more insignificant in proportion of Society than is a tiny pustule on a giant. He is not the Disease, but one of the Symptoms—and not the worst. You can prick a pimple with a needle, but to keep from having more pimples you'll have to attend to your Blood. No carbuncle ever did grow where every little corpuscle is doing its duty. No burglar could break in if every other man was on the watch. No man would do murder if every other man did his full duty. He couldn't. Crime means not only the wild momentary act of an individual fool—it means the lesser folly and collective contributory fault of the Community right along.

Hang the murderer, ravisher, dynamiter. Hang 'em Quick. Hang 'em High. Let them dangle where others of their sort shall see and learn not to trespass so far again on our communal slackness. But then don't go to your Virtuous Couch and dream that because you killed one diseased bunny there will be no further breeding in the rabbitry you help to maintain.

Don't fancy that your taxes for the courts and police cover your whole duty to Law and Order; and that you can thenceforth let your children run loose without a rein; and that you can sit back dozing while the Mentally Unoccupied foment sedition—much less that you can pat on the back.

Don't forget the historic fact that all the lasting harm in the world has been done by Eminently Respectable People. The criminal is one lone, hunted, dodging creature. Every man's hand is against him. He cannot—nor all the criminals put together could not—make a war, a religious persecution, a racial hatred—even an unjust law.

No, we have to take the blame ourselves, by-and-large. If a few hundred thousand of us elect one man to represent our brains, our morals and our citizenship, as Our vicar in Sacramento or Washington or Los Angeles—are we guiltless if he proves ass or knave? What's a republic for, anyhow—our great experiment of a Republic, which the world is watching anxiously to see if that really Is the Way? Is it to Dodge Duty? Or to Do it?

And now, blushing for my pencil, I quote my text. It was printed without blushes, and approvingly, in the July 15th Highland Park Herald in this city; personal organ of C. H. Randall, member of Congress for that district. Under his frank, also, his constituents are constantly receiving equally sane Congressional reprints of speeches by him and his sort against the grape, against Preparedness — against everything but Randall. (The latest are "The World-Wide War Trust" and "The Navy League Unmasked.") This verse is, indeed, quoted from "The National Rip-Saw" (how is that for a cultured and American name?)—but it is quoted in his paper with his indorsement:

WHERE ARE THEY NOW?
(From the National Rip-Saw.)

Where are the fearless bankers, and all the politicians,
The reverends and lawyers, the scholars and physicians,
The brave preparedness people, that marched in that parade,
With waving flags and beating drums and brass bands fiercely played?
Prepared to go to slaughter across the wild frontiers,
Where are they, now the call goes forth for valiant volunteers?
Why don't they form in line again and tramp the streets once more?
On to the recruiting station and enlist to go to war?
Where are these husky heroes, where are they one and all?
Are they deaf and dumb and blind as bats that they do not heed the call?
Why do they skulk to cover? Why do they shrink and shirk,
And send young boys—mere children—to do their bloody work?

And then we wonder at the dynamite butchery in San Francisco the other day! Hunt down the devils that did it! Amen! Poor devils—for they never had the advantage of being editors and Congressmen and prohibition candidates. But they have been fair Scholars. They and the "Rip-Saw" and Randall are of one mind as to Preparedness to back not only the honor but the very life of the nation. They both blow it up. The obscure fiend that set the bomb that tore women and children limb from limb was at least brave enough to take his chances. He knew what will happen to him when he is caught—as he will be. But the Pious People who encouraged him to express their sentiments in his own way—they played safe. They knew our easy law wouldn't hang, or imprison them for life. And what do they care for the immortal Scorn of all that see what they are doing?

WILL YOU HELP?

Two Dollars will Give Child a Ten Days' Outing.

The King's Daughters, who have been carrying on philanthropic work in Los Angeles for many years, plan to open their seaside cottage at Manhattan Beach on Tuesday for the month of August, and to devote this period to outings for children of this city who otherwise would get no such pleasures.

The cottage has accommdations for thirty-five children. The King's Daughters hope to have the house filled to capacity all the, month but their funds for this purpose are low, and they ask all persons who desire to aid in this effort to give children a wholesome outing to send funds at once for this purpose.

Two dollars will pay for a ten-days' outing for a child under the best of conditions and supervision. Contributions for this purpose can be sent to Mrs. George P. Lewis, treasurer, No. 1352 West Thirtieth street, and will be gratefully received and immediately applied to this use.

Sore Eyes, Granulated Eyelids, Eyes inflamed by exposure to Sun, Dust and Wind quickly relieved by Murine Eye Remedy. No smarting, just Eye Comfort. At your Druggist's or by mail, 50c per Bottle. For Book of the Eye free, ask Murine Eye Remedy Co., Chicago.

To Look and Feel Bright in Hot Weather

This is the season when she who would have a lily-white complexion should turn her thoughts to mercolized wax, the firm friend of the summer girl. Nothing so effectually overcomes the soiling effects of sun, wind, dust and dirt. The wax literally absorbs the scorched, discolored, freckled, withered or coarsened cuticle, bringing forth a brand new skin, clear, soft and girlishly beautiful. It also unclogs the pores, removing blackheads and increasing the skin's breathing capacity. An ounce of mercolized wax, obtainable at any drugstore, applied nightly like cold cream, and washed off mornings will gradually improve the worst complexion.

When depressed by the heat and you want to freshen up for the afternoon or evening, bathe the face in a lotion made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel. You'll find this more refreshing than an hours rest. It is fine for smoothing out wrinkles, even the deeper ones.

Charity.

TO AID JAPANESE.

Proceeds of Recent Concert are Used to Help Indigent Orientals Who are Patients at the County Hospital—Work is to be Extended.

Recently a charity concert was given by the Japanese of Los Angeles, which was liberally patronized by members of the Friday Morning Club and Ebell Club, as well as by the Japanese. Members of the local colony desire the public to know what use has been made of the proceeds.

About $100 was netted, and it was planned to use this to send one of the tubercular patients at the County Hospital to some mountain location and pay his expenses while there. When the subject was presented to the Japanese patients at the hospital, not one of them would accept the proffered help in preference to his brother patients. It was then decided to purchase some good books and two sets of barber tools for the use of these patients, and to give each one of those who are indigent a certain sum of money. A portion of the fund is still held in reserve for emergency cases in the Japanese colony.

It is proposed to extend this work and give further concerts and public entertainments for the purpose of maintaining a fund for charitable work among the Japanese.

OH, WICKED TIA JUANA!

Oh, wicked Tia Juana!
  I watch your midnight dance
Or stake my coin upon a
  Game of slimmest chance.

I overlook your squalor,
  Night Capital of Sin,
But love marked-down $1
  Must make the devil grin.

Your swaggering senoritas,
  Smoking their cigarettes,
The wheel sure to repeat as
  I "pinch" my winning bets.

I note your tawdry brightness,
  Your woe, your joy, your smile;
Men are all politeness,
  But maids are full of guile.

At the crowded craps game
  I "flash" a U.S. bill
And Jezebels without a name
  Set up a chorus shrill.

The church around the corner
  Now calls the Magdalen,
A kindly priest will warn her,
  Then she will sin again.

The day grows hot and hotter
  Until the vespers ring.
I'll buy a glass of water
  And pay the birds to sing.*

WOMEN'S WORK AND WOMEN'S CLUBS

BY DOROTHY B. JOHNSTON.

THE American School of Home Economics, a most important factor in welfare advancement and standing for the ideal home life, has a simple code of belief, as follows:

Right living should be the fourth "R" in education.

Home making should be regarded as a profession.

Health is the duty and business of the individual; illness of the physician.

Most illness results from carelessness, ignorance, or intemperance of some kind.

As many lives are cut short by unhealthful food and diet as through strong drink.

On the home foundation is built all that is good in state or individual.

The upbringing of children demands more study than the raising of chickens.

The spending of money is as important as the earning of money.

Economy does not meant spending a small amount but in getting the largest returns for the money expended.

The home maker should be as alert to make progress in her life work as the business or professional man.

The most profitable, the most interesting study for women is the home, for in it centers all the issues of life.

Study of home problems may be made of no less cultural value than the study of art or literature and of much more immediate value.

The management of a home and the care of a family is a business—a profession, and a very complex and difficult one to master. All the wisdom a mistress may have, or can acquire by the most diligent effort, is needed for success in the profession of home making.

Household science holds every other in tribute, yet it is the newest of the sciences. Traditions handed down from mother to daughter and the unsupported evidence of friends is not sufficient for present day needs. To meet changed conditions, a study of the latest economic developments relating to the home is necessary for all true mothers and real helpmeets.

Los Angeles district is fortunate in having Dr. Maud Wilde as chairman of the new welfare department of club work—a woman eminently fitted for the needs. As head of health in the district federation, the past two years, Dr. Wilde did valiant service, cooperating with the national movement to have "better baby week" something educational—going far beyond the comparative contests to which people have in the past limited their activities. And Dr. Lulu Peters who succeeds Dr. Wilde as chairman of health is just as eager to broaden the scope into a school for mothers and children which Dr. Wilde is establishing, and for which the new appointee will formulate her line of work.

Appointments for Ebell.

Notwithstanding the fact that Mrs. Chester C. Ashley, Ebell's new president, has been quarantined to her home in La Salle avenue, because of the illness of her daughter, Catherine, who is in her second week of scarlet fever, the list of appointments for the coming year is now completed and ready for publication, and the contemplated work and programmes are well outlined.

Mrs. Grantland Seaton Long has presided at the board meetings of Ebell in the absence of Mrs. Ashley, to whom all the members extend their sympathy. Miss Ashley has been very ill, but is now improving.

Those who will serve in furthering the splendid work this organization of women is doing follows:

Club Welfare Committee: Chairman, Mrs. Della F. Bates; assistant chairman, Mrs. F. S. Hardin; Mrs. Harry Andrews, Miss Ethelyn Ashton, Mrs. Maud L. Baldwin, Mrs. Williamson Dunn, Mrs. Stoddard Jess, Mrs. Lulu D. Miller, Mrs. George R. Murdock, Mrs. Newton Karr Potter, Mrs. M. H. Ross, Mrs. Frederick Beall West.

EXILE BECOMES UNBEARABLE.

Unable to Join Comrades in War Soldier Ends Life.

Illness Holds Italian from the Alpine Campaign.

Despairs when Forbidden to Fight for Country.

John De Fillipe, Italian reservist, ended his life Friday because he felt the fate of his native land might depend on his individual presence on the firing line in the Alps, and he was too ill to join the colors. He was found in a dying condition in his room, No. 333 North Avenue Twenty-three, and rushed to the Receiving Hospital, where the belated attention of surgeons was without avail.

When the war started nearly two years ago, John De Fillipe received word his country demanded his services. He went at once to a surgeon and asked if he could be made fit to join the army. The reply was a negative.

AN ALPINE SOLDIER.

Since that day his health had steadily declined. In the past his health had been good. He was a member of the famous mountain corps now treading the Alpine heights and conducting the most spectacular campaign of the great war. The mountains he loved, but the doctors had told him he must remain at the sea level, because of a peculiar affliction of his heart.

He subscribed to the foreign illustrated papers, and followed with infinte care th eachievements of the infinite care the achievements of the famous division in an American weekly had been read until the print was almost illegible from handling. He has read again and again of the exploits of his comrades.

HIS SERVICE NEEDED.

When the word of the supreme test now in issue in the Alps came to him in the daily press, he became convinced the presence of one more man in the battle might turn the tide. Yesterday he read where Italy was in need of every possible man, and later the account where the greater numbers of the Austrians had achieved a minor victory in a skirmish above the clouds.

Mr. De Fillipe told his friends he alone might have won that battle, had he been present to assist his comrades. By brooding over the matter, he became convinced he alone might have saved the honor of Italy had be given his personal support.

With these clippings in his hand, he swallowed a dose of powerful medicine, and immediately became unconscious. The landlady discovered his condition and alarmed the police. When taken to the Receiving Hospital he was beyond aid.

SMALL RIOT QUELLED.

A small Méxican revolution, which was started yesterday morning at Dominguez Junction, was quelled by an arrival of a posse of deputy sheriffs, headed by Deputies Sweezy and Anderson. Just what caused the disturbance in the labor camp was not ascertainable, but the two principals in the riot, Maurice Calderon and Joe Cabera, were arrested and taken to the County Jail.

CHARITIES WORKER OUSTED FROM PLACE

CHARGED WITH UNFITNESS, DISLOYALTY TO OFFICE.

Summary Action by County Department Head Follows Ignored Request for Resignation of Woman Alleged to be Unamenable to Control—She Refuses to Reply.

Charged with being unamenable to the discipline of the office and with failure to co-operate with other departments of the county government as well as the one in which she was employed, Miss Lillian Haley, for two years in the department of county charities, was yesterday notified of her dismissal, effective August 1. In his formal letter to Miss Haley, J. B. Williams, director of outdoor relief, stated the dismissal was due to tempermental unfitness; failure to co-operate with the department as well as other departments and even the families in her charge and finally, disloyalty to the department and its head.

Miss Haley was given an opportunity to reply to this letter and secure a hearing from Superintendent of Charities Martin, but failed to do so. She declares this was unnecessary and pointed to her long record in charitable work as proof of her fitness to continue in the service. When she came to Los Angeles from Boston, where she was employed in this sort of work, she became affiliated with the Associated Charities of the city and was finally made secretary of the organization. Resigning that position she joined the county force.

Supt. Martin stated that the very experience which Miss Haley speaks of should have taught her the essential nature of discipline and co-operation.

"When she was asked to resign, she refused to do this until after the dismissal order was made," said Mr. Martin. "While she is well informed on many phases of charity work, she is absolutely uncontrollable and has been violating not only office rules, but civil service rules as well."

He further expressed regret that Miss Haley should have taken the stand she has and said she will be given an opportunity for a hearing before the Civil Service Commission to determine whether the dismissal is just.

JOKE'S ON JOKER.

Entertains With Wine and Stories; Forgets Bill; Jailed.

Jose Martinez is a raconteur par excellence. He can tell stories that make everyone about him wag their heads in merriment. A few days ago at Randsburg he invited a group of friends to dine with him in style at the little inn.

Senor Martinez ordered everything of the best. He called for the finest wine, and as much as could be set on the table. Then he told stories. Everyone was laughing, almost in hysterics.

And then he excused himself for a moment. The moment grew to hours and the Randsburg innkeeper swore to a complaint against the joker. This was sent here and yesterday Deputy Sheriff Sepulveda found Martinez, basking in the light of an admiring cafe audience near the Plaza, drinking fine wine and narrating his choicest tales.

Under the terms of the good roads bill, finally agreed on by the House, Kentucky will receive $1,509,000 from the Federal government for the improvement of its highways during the next five years, provided the State puts up a like amount.

Prizes Awarded to Western Canada for Wheat, Oats, Barley, Alfalfa and Grasses

The winnings of Western Canada at the Soil Products Exposition at Denver were easily made. The list comprised Wheat, Oats, Barley and Grasses, the most important being the prizes for Wheat and Oats and sweep stake on Alfalfa.

No less important than the splendid quality of Western Canada's wheat and other grains, is the excellence of the cattle fed and fattened on the grasses of that country. A recent shipment of cattle to Chicago topped the market in that city for quality and price.

Western Canada produced in 1915 one-third as much wheat as all of the United States, or over 300,000,000 bushels.

Canada in proportion to population has a greater exportable surplus of wheat this year than any country in the world, and at present prices you can figure out the revenue for the producer. In Western Canada you will find good markets, splendid schools, exceptional social conditions, perfect climate, and other great attractions. There is no war tax on land and no conscription.

BORDER SEETHING WITH MARTIAL PREPARATION

While Washington Talks Peace Armored Motor Trucks and Deluge of Supplies Pour into Army Camps and Men Drill at High Tension—No Discharges Allowed Former Guardsmen.

BY HENRY L. MARSHALL.

FIFTY armored motor trucks, each of three tons capacity, arrived at Nogales, Ariz., on flat cars the past week, and immediately went into commission, for army use. The main line of the Southern Pacific through Arizona to Nogales is congested with supply trains, loaded with everything from entirely new uniform outfits to canned beans and carloads of potatoes, hundreds of tons of alfalfa, and carloads of horses and mules. Three million rounds of rifle cartridges were unloaded at Nogales last week.

What is Uncle Sam preparing for? The dispatches from Washington indicate that Mr. Wilson and Carranza are about to clasp hands across the boundary, while in Nogales 12,000 troops are being drilled at high tension and at the same time being equipped on what is undoubtedly a first-class war footing. The same reports come from El Paso and other border camps. Every dispatch from Washington exudes the atmosphere of peace, and every order that rings out over the preparation camps is contradictory to all peace propaganda. While the parley is going on, Uncle Sam is getting ready. That's the whole size of it.

And the reason for the conflicting conditions is apparent [illegible] peace talk has no backing [illegible] and everyone in any way [illegible] with the situation knows this [illegible] true, from President Wilson [illegible] the man on guard before the [illegible] Sibley tents on the edge of the [illegible]zona Desert. There is no [illegible] Villa, nor in Obregon, nor in [illegible] and Carranza has not the [illegible] bring it about, even if he [illegible]

Meanwhile the soldiers on the [illegible]der are getting ready. A [illegible] with unimpaired hearing would [illegible] convinced that the United [illegible] about to embark on a [illegible] enterprise if that blind man [illegible] spend a few days in Nogales.

NO DISCHARGES ALLO[illegible]

One straw that shows [illegible] the wind blows is the fact [illegible] man of the old National [illegible] whose time of enlistment [illegible] at this time is given his [illegible] papers. Several cases have [illegible] my notice the past week, [illegible] soldiers have been told by [illegible] quarters that they could [illegible] home, although their time [illegible] Test cases have been made [illegible] soldiers have demanded [illegible] that they be given discharge [illegible] All these requests have been [illegible] Not a man can be spared [illegible] time, is the only answer [illegible] it is further stated that every [illegible] whose time of enlistment has [illegible] has been placed on the reserve [illegible] for three years.

This arbitrary action is [illegible] and is causing a great deal of [illegible]sion in the National Guard [illegible] the Federal service, which [illegible] about 100,000 men. As high [illegible] per cent. of the personnel [illegible] National Guard is composed of [illegible]ness men and men with property [illegible]terests and with families. [illegible] they enlisted to form a defense [illegible] the nation in time of peril, [illegible] they are merely to be kept in [illegible] camp, they will resent this [illegible] action and the courts will be [illegible] with injunction proceedings. [illegible] even during the Civil War, [illegible] battles were imminent or [illegible]ress, were men deprived of the [illegible] to go home when their time of en[illegible]listment expired.

All of which has so far been [illegible] with silence on the part of [illegible] who represent the government, [illegible] it can mean but one thing [illegible] is that Uncle Sam is approaching [illegible] time when he is going to settle [illegible] deplorable Mexican business [illegible] settle it to remain settled for [illegible] time to come.

WORK AND RECREA[illegible]

Even the chaplain of the [illegible] joins with the other officers in [illegible]ing out the value of consistent [illegible]cation to duty. As one Sunday [illegible]ceeds another he brings [illegible] soldier character of the Bible [illegible]ing Saul above Solomon, [illegible]ing lightly as may be on the [illegible]ings of the Prince of Peace.

And in some of the [illegible] more particularly the Idaho [illegible]try, the chaplain arranges [illegible]ments in which the boys [illegible] No story is barred because [illegible] and the chaplain's only [illegible] is not to make them [illegible] Male quartettes have sprung [illegible] every regiment, and the [illegible] clubs are getting ready for [illegible]test. The camps are [illegible] full of all kinds of talent.

And just as I expected, the [illegible]ness and raucous indecency of [illegible] few that influence the many [illegible]ually quieting down. The first [illegible] weeks of active service seem [illegible] accompanied by a release from [illegible]straint of all kinds, and [illegible] are careful of their language [illegible] manners at home drop [illegible] the semi-savage state that [illegible] seems to warrant. But it [illegible] for a brief time, and today [illegible] the normal man showing his [illegible] for needlessly-loud vulgarity.

The Seventh California [illegible] regiment in that respect, [illegible] the fact that of all the [illegible] that have passed through the [illegible] of Tucson, it was the Seventh [illegible] received the request from the [illegible]ber of Commerce of that city [illegible] as the guarding contingent [illegible] locality. Some of the boys of [illegible] regiments ran a little wild [illegible] city.

"I LOVE YOU, CALIFO[illegible]

Twice a week one of the [illegible] regimental bands plays a [illegible] the old Nogales Plaza. The [illegible] filled with thousands of [illegible] every night, and the band [illegible] surrounded by a crowd that [illegible] along its own variety of [illegible] applause. The other evening [illegible] the Seventh band from [illegible] played a concert there [illegible]tically three regiments from [illegible] Golden State that roared [illegible] chorus while the band played [illegible] Love You, California."

Mind you, these boys are [illegible] from home, and under [illegible]stances that are not always [illegible]ing to the locality, and they [illegible] somewhat homesick, although [illegible] one would have a fight on his [illegible] if he accused them of it. [illegible] to say that the California [illegible] California. And for the sake of [illegible]ifornia and the nation [illegible] most beautiful flag in the world [illegible] will do whatever task is [illegible] them, for under the bantering [illegible]less exterior there is a [illegible] and a military spirit that is [illegible] intensity not dreamed of [illegible] pacifist, and it is quite likely [illegible] the time will come when [illegible]triotism will arouse the [illegible] of the world.

As Minister of War, until bad health compelled his tirement, he showed great energy and ability in building up the French army after the first disass experiences of the war. Questioned.

TORRENS LAW IS CRITICIZED.

Are Property-holders Safe in Accepting Certificate?

Supreme Court Decision Cause of Doubt Arising.

Attorneys Believe Effect of of Act is Nullified.

Are property holders safe in accepting a Torrens certificate? This question is being asked here, following the case in which the act didn't work. A man who bought a State tax deed to property tried to have it registered under the Torrens Act, but the court held it could not be registered. Moreover, the man lost the property, for the effect of the decision was that it belonged to the estate of the person in whose name it was registered when sold for delinquent taxes.

Many objections were urged against the act before it was passed by the State Legislature and are being revived now. Persons, who examined the act before it became a State law said the method of transferring titles was neither as good nor as safe as the old method of recording instruments, and they maintain that opinion, now that the act has been tried out.

POINT OUT BAD FEATURES.

Under the old method the rights of all parties are clearly established and definitely fixed by innumerable precedents; the Torrens Act is unilluminated by judicial interpretations. As far as this country is concerned it is purely an experiment, these critics say.

Attorneys say the worst feature of the act is that once property is placed under the Torrens system it cannot be taken out. Many people do not understand that. No provision is made in the act for withdrawing property from its operation, no matter how unsatisfactory the result may be.

Another serious objection urged against the Torrens system is that, assuming the proceedings are regular and the first certificate issued is valid, the State Supreme Court has held that subsequent certificates issued by the registrar, where no proceedings in court are had, are not conclusive.

This is spoken of by attorneys as a serious blow to the Torrens Act, for the subsequent certificates issued by the registrar embody the distinctive idea of the Torrens system, viz., that such certificates create an indefeasible title. The basic principal of the Torrens system is that the registrar's certificate is the title and not merely evidence of the title. This has been declared to be repugnant to the United States Constitution. In the case of Robinson vs. Kerrigan, 151 California 40, the Supreme Court of California holds that the certificate is not conclusive. Some attorneys say if that is the law then the Torrens Act is knocked on the head, as it means that the registrar's certificate is not the title, and so the Torrens system does not exist in California, even though a Torrens Act be on the statute book.

EFFECT NULLIFIED?

It is cases like these which lead people to ask whether property owners are safe in accepting a Torrens certificate. If the intended effect of the act is nullified, as some lawyers say it is, then all the act really has given is another system of conveyancing which does not compare with the old one.

Many people believe that under the Torrens Act the title is guaranteed by the State. Adding to the uncertainty with regard to the working out of the act comes the statement of a Los Angeles attorney that this is not the case. He says the State guarantees nothing.

An insurance fund, one-tenth of 1 per cent. of the assessed value of the land registered under the act, is collected upon the original registration, to be deposited with the State Treasurer and held by him as a Torrens title insurance fund. Any person who is deprived of any interest in land registered under the act, through the operation of any of its provisions, may commence an action in the Superior Court against the State Treasurer to recover the amount of the loss. Any judgment recovered is payable out of the assurance fund. It is provided, however, that the suit to recover for any loss must also be brought against any other person who may be liable therefor, and this remedy must first be exhausted before the assurance fund can be resorted to.

DROPPING MIDDLE NAMES.

A Two-ply Title is More Convenient Socially, Morally and Financially.

[New York Herald:] This is the day of the two-cylinder name, which fact has been proved by cognomen connoisseurs who have looked over every name at Harvard and inspected the persons to whom the names belong. They learned that some extremely nice persons have no middle names at all, and seem to get on rather well without them.

It is assumed that the every-growing trend toward efficiency is to be blamed for the dropping of oversized names, for it has long been understood that a person with a two-ply title need not be especially embarrassed about it. In the course of a wealthy man's life it means the writing of about 10,000,000 useless words if he uses his middle name on checks and indorsements, and these things have got to be considered.

The Porcelian Club at Harvard, the most exclusive organization of its kind in the country, proves this year the failing value of middle names. There are fifteen members this year and but five of them are burdened with excessive nomenclature.

Of course, George Washington and Abraham Lincoln had no middle names, but this evidence is considered as nothing at Harvard compared with the fact that Theodore Roosevelt hasn't. That one fact is almost enough to wreck the complicated title system at the university.

Dipping Elk to Rid Them of Ticks.

[Popular Science Monthly:] What is said to have been the first time that a herd of wild animals was dipped in an insecticide as a means of riding them of ticks occurred at Gardiner, Mont., recently, when the forest service undertook to ship about sixty head of elk that had been captured in the Yellowstone National forest to points in the Rocky Mountain and Sopris National forests.

DELVE DEEP IN SEA'S SECRETS.

Students Flocking to Marine Laboratory at Laguna.

Experts Guiding Seekers of Nature's Rare Charms.

New and Unusual Courses are Offered; Fun Found.

Down at Laguna Beach there is now in session a summer school that is attracting students from all over Southern California. Groups of college men and women are earnestly pursuing biological research and nature study at the Pomona College marine laboratory, under the scientific leadership of Prof. William A. Hilton, who is at the head of the zoological department of the college at Claremont.

For the past six years a summer school has been conducted at Laguna Beach under the auspices of the college and this season the registration exceeds all former records. The handsome building that houses the school is crowded with students. Several new courses are offered. Prof. Hilton has a number of assistants, notably Dr. Bean of Oregon, who is giving a course in ecology and seaweeds; Dr. Chamberlin of Harvard, an expert in mammalian embryology and human neurology, who will give special work; Miss Anna Hills, who is conducting a course in art especially directed to biological illustration, and a Cornell professor, who will give another special course.

SPIDER SPECIALISTS.

One of the interested and interesting students is Miss Margaret Moles, who won her A.B. degree at Pomona College in zoology last June and who is taking post-graduate work at the marine laboratory. Miss Moles distinguished herself during her college career by specializing on the humble spider—a creature usually regarded by her sex as distinctly horrid. Miss Moles glorified this much-hated insect, her clever brush portraying him in such fascinating style that even the most timid and retiring woman who ever brushed a spider with a shiver of horror was compelled to gaze with admiration on his pictured form. This clever young woman has so distinguished herself in her biological studies that she has been awarded a fellowship at Cornell, whither she will go this fall to further pursue her research work.

Prof. Pininger of Lordsburg is giving an interesting course on birds at the Laguna laboratory. Every Saturday—which is field day—one may see groups of students tramping about the lagoons in the canyons just shoreward from Laguna beach, led by this enthusiastic bird man and studying the winged creatures that haunt these inland lakes. Sometimes they go as far as San Juan Capistrano.

Headed by Prof. Hilton, other nature-lovers tramp up the coast to Balboa in search of specimens of sea and animal life. More than fifty specimens of shells have been collected within a limited range, and the sand, rocks and seaweeds are literally alive with many sorts of crustacea. In the numerous tide pools along the shore are unusual and interesting types of sea life, including a rare species of blind fish.

SHARKS COLLECTED.

Now and then sharks have been captured—not exactly the man-eating variety that has caused havoc recently on the Atlantic Coast, but of sufficient size and with such shovel noses as to create considerable interest.

Nearly 100 specimens of seaweed have been identified, and sponges, simple and complex, are found in the kelp.

One would never dream that there are so many varieties of butterflies around Laguna Beach, but in the cases in the Pomona College laboratory there are scores of specimens, many of them great, wide-winged creatures, superbly mottled and marked in gorgeous colors.

The rugged cliffs, the level stretches of shore, the high hills and the great variety of plant and animal life make Laguna Beach an ideal situation for a biological laboratory.

FINE PLANT.

The building erected by Pomona College for this purpose is a substantial two-story structure at the foot of the cliffs, a short distance from the ocean and convenient to one of the best collecting grounds. There are a large aquarium and lecture-room with cement floor in the front, and beyond are two commodious classrooms. On the second floor are eight private laboratories fitted up for special investigators. A tank-house near by furnishes salt water for the aquarium, which is an interesting feature and draws hundreds of visitors from among the beach summer residents. In the tanks are strange and wonderful forms of sea life—rare and curious fish, sea snails, keyhole limpets, sea hares, sea urchins, starfish and quantities of specimens with beautiful and brilliant markings and colors.

There are also cases of bees, bugs and beetles native to Laguna Beach, which, with the wonderful display of butterflies, offer education and entertainment to the casual visitors. Frequent evening lectures are given to which the public is invited.

Near the laboratory is a village of tents, with a dining-hall, where students may live. By way of recreation there are picnics, beach suppers and excursions to Laguna Heights, Arch Beach, to the picturesque canyons, and all the the joys of camp life, which so appeal to students that they regard these summer sessions at Laguna Beach as one long, delightful picnic of unusual educational value.

Banbury's Curfew.

[London Chronicle:] Banbury's curfew, which is now to be tolled at 7 o'clock as a warning to lower lights, claims to have been rung at 8 ever since Norman times. But there are probably older "curfews" than that. The one at Carfax, in Oxford, claims to have been instituted by Alfred the Great, who is said also to have presented Ripon with a horn that was blown in the streets at curfew time. Although these Alfred stories have been doubted, the curfew does appear to date from well before the Conqueror's days. According to the traditional view, he invented it from tyrannical motives; but the truth is more likely to have been that he seized upon and extended an existing practice in order to shut down the Saxon beer clubs and their dangerous talk.

Merchandise Manager Acts as Judge

—Realizing that this is your sale, in every sense of the word, and that it is the one big sale event of all the year, I have only to remind you that while there are no restrictions as to the prices, which you may make, there should be a keen desire on the part of every manager to keep the satisfaction of your customer uppermost. I know you have secured only worth-while merchandise in keeping with the policies of the Broadway—that you have made the prices lower than ever. The service should up to our high standard.

—This is a race for value supremacy and you have all prepared well for the occasion.

—Knowing the merchandise you have secured and seeing the prices that have been made, I predict that this will prove the great sale event in Broadway history.

MANY MILLIONS TO SAVE THE HEATHEN

SCOPE OF ADVENTIST MISSION WORK IS SHOWN.

Statistical Secretary's Annual Report Also Reveals Heavy Contributions Made to Other Church Enterprises, with Marked Yearly Increase in Total Americans Give.

Seventeen million dollars in ten years for missionary enterprises at home and abroad is the record of Seventh Day Adventists in North America, according to the annual report, issued by the statistical secretary, H. E. Rogers of Washington, D. C., and just been received by members of the local church. During 1915 the Adventists of North America gave $2,542,682.99 for various church enterprises, a gain of $213,931.11 over 1914.

Adventists throughout the world gave during the nine years from 1906 to 1914, $20,100,550, and the sum contributed in North America last year would raise this to $22,643,-236(but the world contributions of the last decade will be still further increased when all the returns are in from foreign fields. These are not yet available, as war conditions cause some delay in making complete compilations for the world.

Secretary Rogers' report shows that the tithe, or tenth of the income, paid by the church members of North America in 1915, amounted to $1,237,810.20, and that the offering for foreign missions, known as the 20-cents-a-week fund, totaled $692,477.71. More than 5000 members were added to the Adventist churches in America last year.

The religious statistics compiled for the Laymen's Missionary Convention, held in Los Angeles March 1, show that in California Seventh Day Adventists led all other Protestant denominations in per capita contributions in 1915, the amount being an average of $30.61 for the year for every Adventist in the State.

NEW INSTRUMENT INTERESTS DENTISTS

PASADENA MAN INVENTOR OF HOT-AIR SYRINGE.

Demonstrations During Convention of Dental Association Attracting Much Attention—Electrical Laboratory Busy Turning Out Device Unlike Any Other.

One of the interesting features of the recent meeting of the Southern California Dental Association was the series of demonstrations given by Dr. J. George Kanouse, at the dental college of the University of Southern California, of a new instrument for dental offices known as "Air Vac." This instrument is the invention of a Pasadena man, John C. Quintin, and since its introduction here, only a short time ago, has created deep interest among dentists.

Mr. Quintin secured his final patents on this combination wax extractor and hot-air syringe on the 4th inst. Already there are more than 400 of them in use in dental offices of Southern California, and more than 200 are in use in Los Angeles. He manufactures the instruments at his $30,000 electrical and mechanical laboratory, No. 866 North Chester avenue, Pasadena, which is said to be the only one of its kind on the Pacific Coast. About thirty of the new instruments are turned out per day.

With the close of the demonstrations before the dental association, plans have been made for general demonstrations in all of the larger cities of the Pacific Coast Out of 300 such demonstrations already given during the last week's convention, 200 of the instruments were sold to dentists.

Mr. Quintin was about two years in perfecting the "Air Vac," and it is said that nothing like it has ever before been presented to the patent office. It gives the dentist a handy hot-air syringe that will not burn out, and in less than one minute is ready for use, doing away with the use of a switchboard, and using only the resistance of an eight-candle-power lamp, or about thirty-six watts. The instrument is so connected with the air supply that the dentist can have either compressed air or vacuum at the platinoid tip by turning a small band at the back end of the handle, and any substance drawn into the tube can be readily discharged.

Wax impressions for gold inlays can be carved and shaped so as to provide locking bonds for the cement, resulting in a big saving of gold.

The description of the instrument given in the patent terms it a dental injector and extractor, a cylindrical body with a separate head therefor; a metallic tube within the body and removable tip for the tube provided with an opening in communication with the interior of the tube; an air supply means exterior of the body and means for regulating the passage of the air through and discharge from either end of the tube at will for the purposes set forth.

THE HOLY NAME.

Society Traces its Existence Back Seven Hundred Years.

[Brooklyn Eagle:] The gathering at Freeport of nearly 15,000 members and friends of the Holy Name Society was an impressive demonstration of the force of a movement among Roman Catholic laymen, which is world-wide, and in which more than half a million are enlisted in the United States. The diocese of Long Island is well at the front in this movement and is proud of its activity.

For almost four centuries "The Confraternity of the Most Holy Name of God and Jesus" has been specially favored by Rome. But it traces its existence back to the council of Lyons in 1274, and is probably the oldest popular organization in the church. Its object is to discourage and lessen profanity, blasphemy, the use of oaths, to cultivate and emphasize the sense of solemnity with which the name of God should be taken upon human lips.

In this matter the feeling of devout Protestants and of devout Catholics is precisely the same. So the Freeport rally ought to have and has the sympathy of good people of every creed. Swearing is a habit, a bad habit, from the viewpoint of personal dignity and good taste, if religion be left out of the calculation altogether. Whatever encourages purity of speech is a real service to any community.

FRUIT WANTED TO FEED SICK TOTS.

CHILDREN'S HOSPITAL NEEDS SUPPLY OF FOOD.

Directors Issue Call for Green Products, Which They will Preserve with the Labor of Their Hands—Will Mean Treatment for Additional Sufferers.

Opportunity to furnish beds and treatment to sick children, perhaps to save a few little lives, at absolutely no trouble and at almost no expense, is held out to the Southern California public by the director of the Children's Hospital. Yesterday a call was issued for donations of green fruit, even "seconds." This will be preserved by the personal labor of the directors, the average cost of feeding each small patient will be reduced, and the number treated will be increased in the same ratio.

The hospital, where a little less than fifty children are cared for at one time, on an average, has facilities for 150, but the directorate is handicapped by lack of funds. There is a sincere desire to increase, even if slightly, the average number of tots treated day by day. And so the fruit idea was born. Cost of food is an important item; but the value of "seconds" and surplus green fruit to the ranchman or the big produce dealer is comparatively small. And even the fruit below first grade is good for canning and preserving.

The donations should be sent to the Children's Hospital, Sunset boulevard and Vermont avenue, before August 2, the date of the next meeting of the board of directors.

WILL DEVELOP BIG OIL FIELD.

Local Men Interested in New Wyoming Territory.

Expert's Report will Result in Work at Once.

Test Wells to be Drilled to Prove Property.

With the return Friday evening of W. D. Clair, local oil expert, who has been conducting an exhaustive survey of the 66,000-acre tract of oil land recently purchased by a local syndicate in Natrona and Fremont counties, Wyoming, considerable interest is being taken in the new field by local oil men. In addition to many interesting photographs of the land, showing several of the oil springs that abound, Mr. Clair brought back samples of soil and of oil from different springs.

The oil has been analyzed and the result wired to interested parties in New York. As a result of Mr. Clair's report, Morgan Morgan and W. H. McIntire, local representatives of the syndicate, yesterday wired an agent at Caspar, Wyo., to secure drilling outfits and start opening up the field at once.

It is expected two rigs will be in the field within a week or ten days, and others as rapidly as they can be secured. Mr. Clair expects to return to the field within a few days with a crew of men and make a preliminary survey of the tract, with a view to locating pipe lines and roads.

TO PUT DOWN WELLS.

"If that field is what Mr. Clair thinks it is, and what it appears to be," said Mr. Morgan yesterday, "there is nothing like it in Wyoming. We will have two wells down in a few weeks and then will know for certain. Until that time we will not decide on any plan of action. Test wells put down in about 350 locations have struck oil-bearing sand in every instance at from 150 to 300 feet.

"In that territory development has been held back by lack of rail facilities. A few months ago the Wyoming and Northwestern Railway completed a line to within twelve miles of the field. Wells operating on the other side of the Rattlesnake Mountains have encountered oil sand at similar depths, a second sand at approximately 1500 feet, and a third, or Nebraska sand, as it is called, at about 3200 feet.

DRILL THROUGH SANDS.

"We are going to drill through all three sands. If the property proves up it is probable we will form a holding company and sublet to several subsidiary companies. It is a vast proposition, too big to talk about in advance. An idea of the magnitude may be best obtained by comparison. According to government statistics, California, the leading oil State in the Union, has in all, about 70,000 acres of oil land. We have 66,000 acres."

Mr. Clair, who was born in the oil fields of New York and has for the past twenty years worked in the Pennsylvania, Ohio and California oil fields, is more than enthusiastic. In making a report to George G. Smith and Harry Edginton, who are interested to a small extent in the property, he said yesterday:

"From every indication I believe there is a pool of oil beneath that tract, the equal of which has not been opened up in the mid-West. Samples of sand encountered at the varying depths leads me to believe that at the bottom of the syncline there is a vast pool. Starting from the apex of the anticline the strata of oil-bearing sand drop downward gradually, flatten out on the floor of the plain and rise again at the other side of the valley, fifteen miles away.

MANY SURFACE POOLS.

"There are more than fifty surface pools or springs where the oil bubbles out, and these are located at points where the greatest pressure would be exerted if the pool I believe is there exists. When the first well is brought in I want to be on hand and watch, for if it isn't a gusher that will flood the surrounding territory I'll miss my guess."

Among interested oil men who have inspected the samples and evinced an interest in pictures of the territory are employees of the General Petroleum Company, the Doheny interests, and of the Union Oil Company. Mr. Morgan is arranging to take a party of local oilmen to the property as soon as drilling is well along.

The property was secured by a syndicate, of which the local representatives are Messrs. Morgan Morgan and McIntire, about two weeks ago. It is understood New York and London capital is behind the deal. The land was sold by Jacob Ervay of National City, Cal., one-time cattle baron of Wyoming, and George Smith, manager of the western agency of the International Life Insurance Company. Definite figures as to the cash consideration have not been made public, but local representatives of the syndicate state it is in excess of $5,000,000.

NO LOCATING BY PROXY.

Local Land Office Rules on Procedure for Homesteaders.

Holding that to entitle a claimant to a preference right of entry by reason of prior settlement, it is essential that he establish residence on the land claimed within a reasonable time after his first act of settlement, to the exclusion of a homestead elsewhere, and that such residence must be maintained, pending the determination of an adverse claim, Register Rooche and Receiver Mitchell, of the local Land Office decided the contest brought by Ray E. Priest against Andrew Jackson, in favor of the contestant.

The land involved consisted of a quarter section east of Brawley, Imperial county, and it was proved that after Mr. Priest made his first settlement, he abandoned the land. In a word, the officials held that a man could not prefect a homestead entry by proxy. The land is a part of the territory recently opened to settlement by order of the Secretary of the Interior.

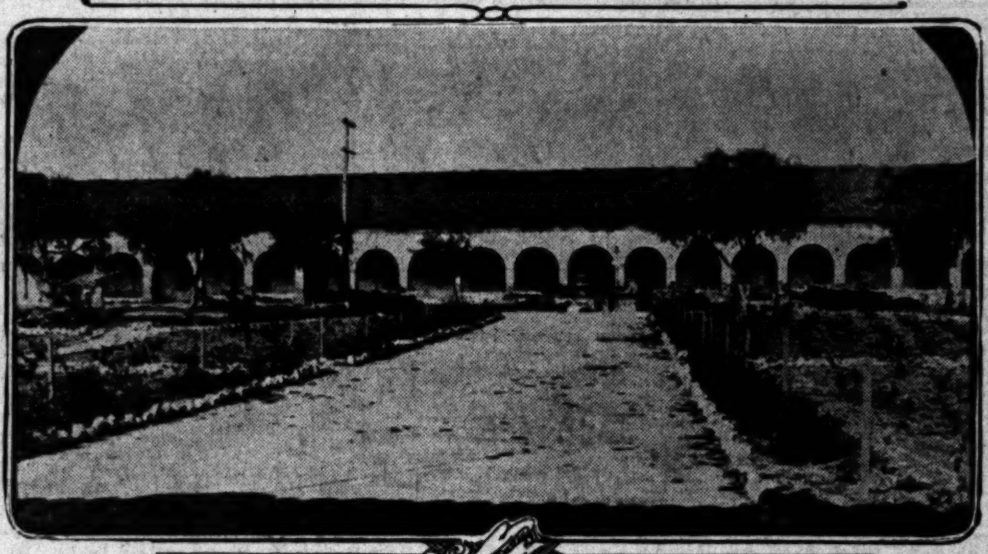
Once Mighty Walls to be Saved from Vandal Time.



View of San Fernando Mission,

Where 5000 candles, emblems of the patriotic devotion of real Californians, will lighten the shadows of dusk next Sunday, to the end that a ruined altar may be restored and a historic gem be preserved for posterity.

Spectacle.

FIVE THOUSAND TAPERS WILL GLEAM AT ALTAR.

Vesper Shadows in Crumbling Church at San Fernando Mission will See Next Sunday, at Anniversary Exercises, a Sight Witnessed Perhaps Nowhere Else—Fallen Shrine to be Restored.

BY JOHN STEVEN M'GROARTY.

IN THE way of a spectacle, I do not suppose that anything has ever been done, anywhere, that could be said to rival the 5000 candles that will all burn at one time in the vesper shadows of the ruined Mission of San Fernando next Sunday.

I doubt that 5000 candles have ever been lighted at one time even in Rome or in Moscow. Certainly, nothing of the kind has been seen in America, either at Plymouth Rock or at Monterey, or anywhere else between the tumbling seas, from the days of Capt. Miles Standish and Sebastian Viscaino down till now.

I should not like to miss such a sight, nor would you. It will be worth a far journey to see. And, please God, we shall burn some of those candles, ourselves—you and I who love California and have the dream of it in our hearts.

And it will warm us, too, when we see the great glow of the candles flaming, to know we are performing a deed of practical patriotism as well as participating in a scene of symbolical beauty. For, it is to raise a fallen altar that we shall burn the candles—to restore a lost shrine and to roof against sun and wind and winter rains a deserted hospice that was once a shelter for the wanderer on the King's Highway in the Golden Age of California.

MIGHTY OF YORE.

It was, indeed, a mighty place in the olden times—that Mission of San Fernando. It was thronged with dusky faces, and busy with the day's work. The songs of happy toilers rang through its stately arches, echoing to the hall of the Indian herder and his mate in the far-flung hills. Peace and gladness were there; and the voice of prayer. Its great doors swung ever open in welcome to whomsoever might come. Under its roof were food and shelter, and no price to pay.

But, long ago, silence fell upon that well-loved place—silences of loneliness and death. The flocks were scattered, the Indian neophytes were driven away to starve and die, the sandaled feet of the brown padres walked no more in the tiled corridors or across the pleasant fields. Sun and wind and rain wrought havoc with roof and wall and cloister. The vandal years scarred and rent the very memories of the place. And, at the end, it bent upon the dusty highway, a wrecked and ruined thing.

So, it will be a fine thing, and there will be a thrill in it, to see the candles burning for the saving of the old mission walls and the saving grace of our good name as Californians.

HAUNTING MEMORIES.

I should like to linger there at San Fernando under the stars and the crescent of the new moon, next Sunday night, after the last flicker of the last candle has gone out with the red of the sunset on the San Buenaventura hills. For, then, without doubt, the spirits of the mighty dead will walk and haunt the summer dusk as in the olden times. Fray Juan Crespi will be there, and swart Don Gaspar de Portola; and Father Junipero, surely, and many another well-loved ghost, as Capt. Andres Pico used to see them in the long ago.

After the war of 1846, in which the Californians were forced to make final capitulation to the unwelcome Gringo, Capt. Andres Pico took up his residence in the deserted Mission of San Fernando. He was greatly in the imagination and the admiration of his countrymen. He was a brother of the late Gubernador, Don Pio Pico, and he had had the glory of defeating Gen. Stephen Watts Kearney and the American troops at the battle of San Pasqual. There was some good vino still left in the vats of the mission cellars, and a little of the famous San Fernando brandy, at that time. So, when an old comrade in arms, or any paisano, not to speak of the stranger on the King's Highway, dropped in on Capt. Andres Pico, he was able to maintain the reputation of a California gentleman's hospitality, with a candle to burn, too.

Well, it is told in the old traditions that have come down to us, that Don Andres was wont to declare, in all solemnity, that the spirits of the padres and the Indians who slept in the quiet mission churchyard, came often to visit him in the lonely watches of the night, passing before him in endless processions.

It may be, however, that the spirits of the dear and well-remembered dead come no more to the crumbling walls of the Mission San Fernando. And, no matter. The dust of the great trail-blazers and of those splendid pioneers who made our California of today possible for us, is there in that place where we are to burn the candles in next Sunday's vesper shadows.

The public, I have no doubt, will get back to the Senorita Lucretia del Valle and old Don Carlos Lummis in this splendid effort to save what is left of the San Fernando Mission. Miss Del Valle, in making this campaign, is simply making good to the spirits of her ancestors who came with the first white men to California. Next to the Indians, themselves, she is the real thing as a Californian. The 5000 candles flaming in the vesper shadows will put her right with old Avilla and her grandfather, Don Ygnacio and all the rest. And Don Carlos Lummis will see a few thousand more adobe bricks saved to add to the thousands of others he saved, himself, when he had really no one to help him do it.

Adios, amigos, hasta la vista. And that will be at the Mission San Fernando on Sunday, next

AT PLAYGROUND CAMP.

Special cars will leave the Pacific Electric station at 7:20 o'clock tomorrow morning, carrying 250 girls bound for Seeley Camp, Skyland Height, San Bernardino, for two weeks' outing. Five special cars will carry them to San Bernardino, where they will take auto busses to the camp. A second group will leave on August 14.

It is expected that nearly 1000 city dwellers will avail themselves of the camp this summer. The playgrounds department has provided amply for the comfort of campers, and $7.50 covers the entire expense of two weeks in camp.

NATIONAL MILITARY TRAINING.

(To cast negative vote write the word "not" in blank space. This will negative the entire ballot.)

I am ——— an advocate of national legislation which will place the military policy of the country on the basis of a true democracy as provided in the Constitution of the United States.

I believe this can be brought about only by making all young men who are physically and mentally fit liable for military training before reaching the age of 21.

I believe that such a policy would not only produce the force of trained citizen-soldiers necessary to the preservation of the nation, but would conserve the human resources of the nation so as to reduce the criminal rate, produce a higher type of manhood and destroy all traces of class distinction by training and educating the poor and rich alike in the higher duties of citizenship under the same ennobling and invigorating system.

I believe that the Chamberlain Swiss System Bill (S. 1695,) or legislation along these lines, worked out with the advice of the General Staff of the Army, will solve the problem.

WILL STUDY EARLY ISLAND INDIANS.

ANTHROPOLOGIST TO VISIT BURIAL MOUNDS.

Expects to Gather Valuable Material from Channel Islands and Supplement Present Knowledge of Little-known People Whose Legends Reach to Antiquity.

Further and more comprehensive exploration of the ancient burial places on the channel islands than has yet been undertaken is to be carried on during the ensuing few weeks by Dr. Edward Salisbury, noted scientist and anthropologist, whose yacht Wisdom is now anchored in the offing at Venice.

Dr. Salisbury arrived at Venice the other day, after having cruised for months along the east and west coasts of South and Central America, and then sojourning for a short time on the islands of Catalina and Santa Barbara.

So interested has Dr. Salisbury become in the Channel Indians that he has decided to make this subject a particular study this summer. He will make Venice his headquarters, and will make trips to the islands for the purpose of searching and studying the ancient burial places. On these trips he will be accompanied by Glenn Edmonds of Venice and H. B. McDowell. In his recent visits to the islands he picked up some ancient pottery and beads.

Later in the season he will be joined by Rex Beach, the novelist, and they plan to make a trip to Kodiak Islands, Alaska, for big game.

BACK INTO MEXICO.

Promised a Welcome and Protection by De Facto Government, Party of Americans will Depart for Sonora to Resume Large Operations.

With the assurance that they will be welcomed and protected by the Mexican government, S. W. McDougal, assistant chief engineer of the Richardson Construction Company, his wife and a party of ten other Americans will leave this city Wednesday afternoon en route for Sonora, to resume operations on the Richardson company's vast properties in that State.

Besides Mr. and Mrs. McDougal, the party will include L. Munger, W. L. Smith, superintendent of irrigation for the Richardson company; Z. O. Stocker and H. C. Leuffer of this city. When they reach their destination the members of the party will be about 260 miles south of the border.

The Richardson company's employees were ordered out of Sonora by the United States government about five weks ago, when there appeared to be some danger of a conflict between this country and Mexico.

Gov. Adolfo de la Huerta of Sonora recently declared the Richardson Construction Company, which has offices in this city, an enemy of the Mexican de facto government. At that time Gov. Huerta appointed an administrator to take charge of the Los Angeles company's property in Sonora, which includes about 600,000 acres of farm land.

Officials of the company, however, received communications from Washington this week which led them to believe their property will be returned to them again by the Mexican government.

NO SIGN OF MOURNING.

English Women Bereaved by War Make No Outward Show of Their Sorrow, Says Traveler Just Returned From Europe.

Women in England have by tacit agreement given up wearing mourning for their husbands, brothers or sweethearts killed in the war, according to Rev. W. E. Bancroft, superintendent of the Methodist Missions in India, who arrived at the Rosslyn yesterday from Bombay. Mr. Bancroft has just completed a tour of Europe. He says the absence of black garments in England is the more striking, because in France and other European countries they are seen on every side.

The missionary says Christianity is spreading rapidly throughout India, the Methodist missions alone, he says, have gained more than 40,000 converts during the past year.

"A promising feature of the work," said he, "is the number of high caste converts coming to the fold. These men lose all their possessions and the comradeship of their former idolatrous companions and relatives when they become Christians, but notwithstanding all that, they are constantly forsaking their heathen beliefs and professing Christianity."

Councilmen in Row of Words Over Salary Ordinance.

Cuts Engineering Department Yet Increases Pay.

Budget as Ready to Report Shows Large Saving.

Salary raises in the City Engineering Department aggregating more than $5000 for the year were disclosed yesterday when an analysis of the new salary ordinance was presented by Councilman Conwell. Incidentally, there was a stormy few minutes in which Councilmen Conwell and Wheeler "mixed things" verbally over the question of whether or not the ordinance introduced yesterday made these salary raises. Councilman Conwell said it did. Councilman Wheeler said it did not. Both were right. Councilman Conwell's figures were based on a comparison of salaries with those paid up to July 1, 1916, while Councilman Wheeler thought the comparisons were with the salary ordinance that went in effect less than a month ago, in which the increases were granted.

The contention of Mr. Conwell was that inasmuch as the Council has been trimming the budget at every possible point, it is inadvisable to allow any salary raises this year.

NOT CONSISTENT.

"Here we are cutting the budget of the City Engineer another $142,000 and discharging a lot of men, and at the same time we are granting salary increases to others in the same department," said Councilman Conwell. "I'm not saying any of these salaries are too high, but it is inconsistent, I believe, to take the bread and butter from a lot of men by discharging them outright and then granting increases to others who can get along on what they have been receiving."

Councilman Wheeler contended that in all the salary increases granted in the engineer's office, the highest is $10 a month, and with the other minor increases to laborers and artisans, their pay is still below the "union scale."

The engineer's salary ordinance will come up for consideration Monday and it is possible that at the same time the Council may consider the salary increases that were granted employees of the other city departments which, it is understood, amount to something over $11,000 for the year.

BUDGET COMPLETED.

The Budget Committee yesterday announced that it has practically completed its work and as soon as the clerical work of summarizing can be completed, the budget will be presented to the City Council. As the budget stands it calls for an expenditure of $5,810,000 as compared with $5,700,000. Inasmuch as $110,000 of this is to be spent directly in the newly annexed territory, the amount to be expended for the rest of the city is approximately $60,000 under last year's expenditures.

The final cut was made yesterday in the library department, but the cut is only that caused by the fact that the total assessed valuation is below expectations and the amount the library will receive is definitely fixed by the tax levy in the charter. The committee decided that it could not consistently require the library department to carry the city's obligation of about $20,000 in the Carnegie contract. Under the present budget the library department will get about $34,000 more than last year, but it has three new libraries to furnish.

LAST TAX PROTESTS.

The Council, sitting as a Board of Equalization, will receive no more protests after Monday, but it is estimated that it will take a week or ten days to finish the work already on hand, and City Attorney Stephens, who is in Sacramento, will ask the State Board of Equalization for an extension of time.

As the Council received and adopted reports from the special committee to which many complaints taken under advisement were referred, it was discovered that the City Assessor's valuations on land are being sustained generally throughout the city. About the only exceptions are a few isolated cases in Wilmington, where decreases of 5 to 10 per cent. have been allowed on land, and along Vermont and Moneta avenues, between Fifty-sixth and Eightieth streets. On Alvarado street, between Wilshire and Pico streets, where insistent demands for reductions were presented, all were denied. In the Hollister tract, along Wilshire boulevard, the Council reduced most of the lots 35 per cent. because, though now improved, the improvements were made after assessment time. Reductions in improvements granted by the board will probably aggregate about $2,000,000, and about 2 per cent. of the applications are considered favorably.

Yesterday afternoon Councilmen Wheeler, Topham and Bram refused invitations to the baseball game and spent the day looking over property on which applications for reductions have been taken under advisement.

GIRL'S CHARGE UPHELD.

Clerk Found Guilty of Wronging Young Indian Miss.

Alleging that Fanny Harjoe, an Indian girl, is 21 years old and therefore not amenable to the juvenile court law, and further that he is not responsible for the condition she is in, William Gibson, a grocer's clerk, fought through Atty. Backus a charge of contributing to the girl's delinquency.

Yesterday in Judge Reeve's court Gibson was found guilty of the charge. He applied for probation and the hearing was set for tomorrow afternoon. As the age of the girl was in dispute, Supt. [illegible] Duclos of the Indian school of Riverside produced the records showing she was born in 1896.

Gibson met the girl, who is a ward of the government, when she was a domestic for a Pasadena family. She said he was responsible for her condition.

One-time Classmates Tell of Candidate as a Lad.

Not Cold; Fond of Good Time, They All Declare.

Warm of Heart, a Brilliant Student and a Wit.

When Charles Evans Hughes, the Republican standard bearer, is elected to the Presidency next November, probably no one in the United States will be prouder of the wonderful achievement than Charles W. Pendleton, a well-known lawyer and clubman. It is a personal matter with Mr. Pendleton, who has been a life-long intimate friend of Mr. Hughes, the two having been schoolmates, chums, members of the same college fraternity and brought together for a week or more every five years since they left school, the class reunion being held quinquennially. The last reunion was held less than two months ago at Providence, R. I., the home of Brown University, from which Messrs. Hughes and Pendleton graduated when the former was only 19 years old. Because of his intimate acquaintance with the Republican nominee, Mr. Pendleton is in a position to tell something of the characteristics and private life of the "man of the hour." Two other men in Southern California enjoy the distinction of having been classmates of Mr. Hughes. They are John Murray Marshall and C. Baker, both residents of Pasadena.

AS FRIENDS SEE HIM.

The general idea that Mr. Hughes is a cold, clammy individual and interested only in the sterner things of this life, is scorned by Mr. Pendleton, who says there is no man with a warmer heart or more genial on acquaintance.

Following is Mr. Hughes as seen by his classmates.

"He was the youngest man in his class. He was long, lanky, extremely slender and until he became acquainted, shy and awkward. He knew what good fellowship meant and he practiced it as heartily as any man in college. He entered actively into the affairs of the university and his fraternity. He was not a student in the sense of one who burns the midnight oil. He has a quick, retentive, really brilliant mind. He learned easily. He read voraciously, especially all worthwhile books in English and in French. He had a ready, fluent wit and in fraternity meetings, when he participated in a debate or gave an original paper or discussion, he was eloquent, keen and always interesting.

"We all liked and admired Charlie Hughes. Yes, that is what we called him. He never had a nickname. But as much as we liked and admired him, we never for a moment in our college days pictured him as becoming the famous man and inspiring personality that he is today.

LIKED A GOOD TIME.

"Just plain Charlie suited him. He was not popular in the sense that he was a first-class athlete or in that he was a leader in college pranks and mischief. He did not push himself forward. But he was just as fond of a good time as anybody. There was plenty of fun in him and he could let go with all the vim and vigor of the best of us.

"He was envied by many because he had such an easy time with his studies. He never 'plugged.' He would go through a lesson with a rush and what he wanted in it would stick in his mind.

"Outside his studies and fraternity work he devoted himself largely to writing. He was a member of the Brunonian's editorial board and it is interesting in view of his later career to note that one of his chief contributions was a series of articles on the early laws of the university. On graduation he held third scholarship honors, which entitled him to deliver the classical oration, then one of the commencement fixtures."

Messrs. Hughes and Pendleton were sons of Baptist ministers and naturally had many things in common. Mr. Pendleton says his chum was one of the best fellows he has ever known, though the two were opposites in temperament and living. Mr. Pendleton was the fashion leader of the class, a big, breezy individual with more of the western than the eastern air about him. After their graduation the two separated, Mr. Hughes going to Columbia to study law and Mr. Pendleton came to California and studied law at [illegible]. Both have been very successful in life and both have taken active parts in politics.

Mr. Pendleton said yesterday he takes no little pride in the distinction of being the first man in the United States to predict that Charles Evans Hughes would be President some day. This prediction he made upon a visit to Mr. Hughes while the latter was Governor of New York in 1909.

SELF-PRAISE FAILS.

Alleged Wire Thief Toots His Own Horn; Court Deaf.

"Tooting your own horn" among your friends may be perfectly all right, but such self-laudation has no merit in a court of justice as demonstrated yesterday morning by [illegible] Argulloas. He appeared without counsel before Justice Hinshaw, to answer to the charge of having stolen copper trolley wire belonging to the Pacific Electric. He braved death to cut out about 900 feet of wire while it was highly charged.

When asked for an explanation, Argulloas gave a detailed life history and extolled his virtues to the court. But he was bound over to the Superior Court on bond of $1000, which he could not give, and therefore had to go to jail.

Army of the Lord.

BRING TOGETHER FIVE THOUSAND ENTHUSIASTS.

Sessions of Twenty-eighth Annual Convention of the Christian Churches of Southern California, Held at Long Beach, More Largely Attended than Any Previous Gatherings—Closing Meeting Today.

EXCEEDING in attendance and interest any of its previous gatherings, the twenty-eighth annual convention of the Christian Churches of Southern California, which closes today at Long Beach, has been a marked success in every way. It has been made notable by oratory of a high order, gospel songs that thrilled, enthusiasm which inspired and that earnestness which has characterized the work since the Disciples of Christ in Southern California first established themselves at Downey in the seventies.

In point of attendance the convention has been a record-breaker. When it opened ten days ago at the Long Beach auditorium, under the presidency of Charles C. Chapman, about 2000 registered, but every day has seen additions until by tonight it is expected the total will reach 3500. In addition 1500 persons have been present who did not register, so that the attendance figure is given as 5000.

GREAT INTEREST SHOWN.

Features of the convention have been the presence of an unusual number of returned missionaries from foreign fields, the great interest taken in the Christian Endeavor sessions, the ardent demonstrations by the Sunday-school department, and the scholarly addresses by Rev. Frederick D. Kershner of St. Louis, Mo., former president of the Texas Christian University and now editor-in-chief of the Christian Evangelist. Rev. Mr. Kershner was the convention's chief speaker. He preached the convention sermon and delivered nearly a score of special addresses. He will speak twice at the auditorium today—at 11:15 o'clock this morning and at 8:15 o'clock this evening.

The convention gave a great reception to the visitors from foreign fields who literally are obeying the biblical instruction, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel." Mrs. Royal J. Dye, instructor in missions, related personal experiences at Bolenge, 1000 miles up the River Congo in equatorial Africa. Miss Bertha Lacock of Porto Rico told of work nearer home among the women of Latin America. Interesting talks also were given by returned missionaries from India, China and Japan which fired the delegates with renewed zeal to help to enlarge the missionary map of the world, a copy of which was suspended above the platform. A near-by banner bore the inscription, "The First Work of the Whole Church is to Give the Gospel to the Whole World."

RECOGNITION DAY.

A special session with the national societies was called "recognition day" and addresses were made by Rev. John H. Booth of Kansas City, representing the Church Extension Society; Rev. F. W. Burnham of Cincinnati, the American Christian Missionary Society; Rev. A. McLean, also of Cincinnati, president of the Foreign Christian Missionary Society, and Mrs. Effie L. Cunningham of Indianapolis, representing the Christian Woman's Board of Missions. Speakers for the National Benevolent Association and the American Temperance Board were Leonard G. Thompson and L. M. Timmons, respectively, both of Los Angeles.

The Christian Endeavor sessions, marked by special programmes, excelled anything held previously. Camp Myrtle was organized during the convention and is named for Myrtle Wilson Stiff, a missionary in the Philippine Islands, who is supported by the young people.

PRACTICAL DEMONSTRATION.

The Sunday-school department sessions evoked enthusiasm. One entire day was devoted to a demonstration of actual Sunday-school work, whole departments being brought from various schools in Southern California including Pomona, Santa Monica and East Side, Long Beach.

Not the least interesting event was the reception held at the Old People's Home on the slope of Signal Hill. L. J. Massey of Long Beach recently gave the National Benevolent Association the property, which is valued at $10,000. This home had just been prepared when the convention started and the reception afforded a large number of delegates an opportunity of seeing the new institution. Secretary F. M. Rogers stated this home is but the beginning of a work which will embrace the establishment of a home for orphans under the auspices of the Christian church.

A FIVE-YEAR PROGRAMME.

Mention of a five-year programme adopted by the Christian Missionary Society of Southern California delighted the delegates. This programme is for the wiping out of church debts, the location of new buildings, the entering of new fields, the strengthening and bringing to self-support of twenty-eight main points and an educational programme for the betterment of Bible schools. The Los Angeles Training School, conducted under the auspices of this organization, enjoys the distinction of being the only school of its character conducted by the Disciples of Christ in America. Rev. Edgar Lloyd Smith is director of religious education and superintends the work.

The annual meeting of the board of directors of the Christian Missionary Society of Southern California, under whose auspices the convention was held, took place yesterday afternoon. Officers were elected as follows:

THE OFFICERS.

Charles C. Chapman, Fullerton, president; James G. Warren, Los Angeles, vice-president; F. M. Rogers, Los Angeles, secretary; S. M. Cooper, Los Angeles, treasurer; Joseph Crall, Los Angeles, attorney; Walter Adamson, Los Angeles, superintendent Christian Endeavor department; R. W. Blackburn, South Pasadena; J. S. Bilheimer, San Dimas; Lloyd Darsie, Hollywood; W. F. Holt, Los Angeles; L. J. Massie, Long Beach; Clinton Crabtree, Whittier; Russell F. Thrapp, Los Angeles; Sanford Woodbury, Pasadena; L. M. Anderson, Los Angeles; J. P. McKnight, Los Angeles; C. F. Hutslar, Los Angeles, and C. R. Hudson, Pomona, directors; Bruce Brown, Los Angeles, general evangelist; Edgar Lloyd Smith, Bible school superintendent, and R. W. Abberley, general evangelist.

A number of the officers are well-known business men of Southern California and it was said yesterday by members of the convention that the Southern California disciples have been especially blessed in their missionary work by a group of business men who have unselfishly devoted money and time to the affairs of the church.

An encouraging announcement made during the convention told of the great success attending the "men and millions movement" launched nationally by the Christian Church. The objectives are 1000 volunteers for the ministry and $6,300,000 in money for colleges and missions. It was stated that more than 500 volunteers have enlisted for the ministry and two-thirds of the $6,300,000 has been pledged.

The chill or cold test of an oil is the lowest temperature at which the oil will pour. This characteristic need only be taken into consideration because of its effect upon the free circulation of oil through exterior feed pipes, etc., where pressure is not applied. The cold test is in no way indicative of the lubricating or heat-resisting qualities of an oil.

RAILROADS ANSWER IN CROSSING CASE.

POWER OF STATE COMMISSION IS QUESTIONED.

Santa Fe, Salt Lake and Southern Pacific Present Their Side of Retracking and Union Terminal Proposals—Want City Made Party to Action.

Replies of the Salt Lake Railroad, the Santa Fe and the Southern Pacific Company to the complaints filed with the State Railroad Commission concerning the grade-crossing and union-terminal situation were filed with the Railroad Commission yesterday, and the City and County Viaducts Association also filed a complaint with the commission.

The Santa Fe, in its answer, sets forth that, inasmuch as the city of Los Angeles and the Pacific Electric and the Los Angeles Railway are interested, they should be made parties to the suit and should bear a part of any expense incurred through the rulings of the commission in the case. Regarding the joint passenger-station and union-terminal proposition, the Santa Fe asserts in its answer that the State Railroad Commission has no jurisdiction to compel that road to enter into agreements for the use of union-terminal facilities or of stations for freight or passenger service.

The Salt Lake goes further in its answer, asserting the State Railroad Commission has no jurisdiction or power in the matter at all, and specifically denies jurisdiction in the matter of changing stations and terminals or ordering the construction of viaducts or the abolition, otherwise, of grade crossings within the city.

The complaint of the Los Angeles City and County Viaducts Association makes the following requests of the commission:

To investigate the entire situation.

To hear all parties and examine all designs.

To order relief by reclaiming Alameda street and other streets, by the improvement and abolition of grade crossings, and by reorganizing the trackage situation so that, as far as possible, the operation of the lines of the defendants along or across the streets of the city of Los Angeles may be eliminated, taking such further, other or additional action as may be necessary or expedient to improve the present condition.

Dance Programme.

Representatives of the committee of citizens that is circulating the initiative petitions to permit dancing in hotels and cafes propose to submit a formal communication to the Council in the next few days, with a view to obviating the necessity for a special election. The petitions already have enough signatures to call for this special election, but, if the Council will agree to permit dancing and submit the ordinance to a vote of the people at the next special election, the initiative petitions will not be filed.

New Elections on Bonds.

Members of the City Council, who are investigating the situation with reference to the Hollywood and the Mission District water bonds, said yesterday that they believe the only method open to the city, in view of the errors in description in the ordinances, will be to have both former elections declared void and proceed at once to call new elections. The city will lose about $1000 through the necessity for engraving new bonds for the Hollywood district, and the expenses of the two elections may mean an additional $1000 cost.

FADED DEED TIES HARD LEGAL KNOT.

BROTHER AND SISTER BATTLE FOR PROPERTY RIGHT.

Was Instrument Actually Delivered to Son by Mother?—He Says Bequest was Reward for Diligence in Selling Papers and Shining Boots at Plaza.

In the boom days of 1884, Carlos Redonda, then 6 years old, earned $5 a day selling newspapers and shining boots at the old Plaza. He turned the money over to his mother, Fermina S. de Redonda, and as a reward for his industry at that tender age, he says, she gave him a deed to property in New High street.

The deed, old and faded, was produced at the trial of the suit of Mrs. Helena R. Solomon against Carlos, her brother, asking that the property be distributed in accordance with the law of succession and declaring that Carlos has no right to collect the rents from the property. The deed is alleged to have been given to Carlos April 17, 1884. It is signed only with an X.

After the deed was recorded it was laid away. Mrs. Redonda placed it in a box in a room of the adobe house in New High street and there it lay until after her death, July 26, 1910.

Judge Conley of Madera county, sitting in extra sessions court, took the knotty point under submission yesterday. He must determine whether the deed was actually delivered or whether the act of Mrs. Redonda, in placing the instrument in the old box, amounted to the actual delivery to her son Carlos.

INS AND OUTS ABOUT THE COURTS.

HER ESTATE. Thomas Pleets, a brother, filed a petition for letters of administration on the estate of Mrs. Jennie Morton yesterday. The alleged mysterious death of Mrs. Morton at Patton Hospital is being investigated by the Coroner. The estate consists of $800 cash in a bank.

ACTOR SUES. In a suit for $25,330 damages filed yesterday by Pop Leonard, a film comedian, he alleges an automobile driven by W. Peerless struck and injured him March 20, last, at Sixth and Flower streets. Negligence is charged.

HABEAS CORPUS. Ivan Newman, recently arrested in Los Angeles on a charge of having deserted his wife and baby in Holland, Mich., served upon Sheriff Cline yesterday through his attorney a writ of habeas corpus. This will be heard before Judge Craig tomorrow morning.

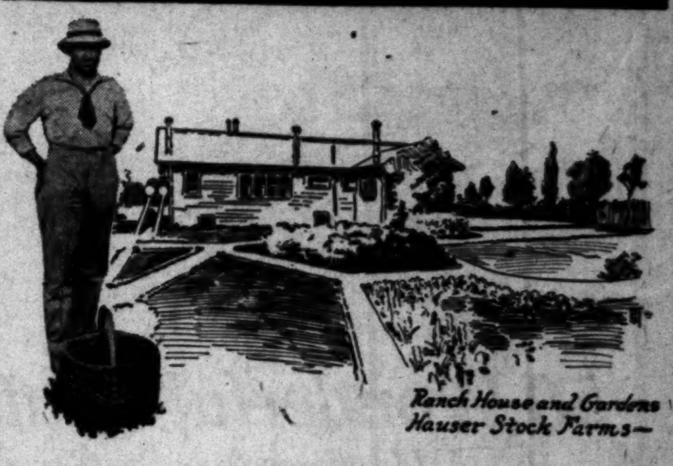
Clears $700 on single acre in Palo Verde Valley—
"AN INLAND EMPIRE IN CALIFORNIA"



Gentlemen:

Last year I cleared close to $700 off of an acre of vegetables. I raised 3060 pounds of sweet potatoes on one-fifth of an acre. We have a wonderful vegetable soil and a world of cheap water. I have been all over the State, but this country beats anything I ever saw. It is a little Garden of Eden. G. C. CADY.

$100 An Acre For "Double-crop land" and perpetual gravity water right.

Seasoned ranchers who are thoroughly familiar with farming conditions all over the West—men who could afford to buy anywhere—are locating in Palo Verde Valley.

Many have sold their productive Middle West farms to take advantage of the unusual money-making conditions of this "Inland Empire in California." Experienced men from Ventura and Los Angeles Counties, Imperial Valley and other fertile sections of California prefer the advantages of Palo Verde Valley to those of their former locations.

Those who are seeking almost ideal conditions for successful cattle and hog raising, dairying, alfalfa, cotton, beans, fruit and vegetables are now flocking into this almost overlooked garden spot in Riverside County.

Those who are tired of poor soil, continuous, costly fertilizing, high water cost, shortage of green feed and other disadvantages, are finding in Palo Verde Valley a veritable oasis—where Nature works overtime for everybody.

The new California Southern Railroad is almost completed—the last and only disadvantage is removed. Go and compare this $100-an-acre land with anything in the State at double the price. Be your own judge and jury. Secure advance information from our illustrated booklet and special magazine—they're free.

Good Outlook.

POPULAR OPERA PLANS.

"LEN" BEHYMER PROMISES BEST EVER COMPANY.

Among the matters that are absorbing the attention of "Len" Behymer during his present eastern trip is the organization of an opera company along the lines of last season's "La Scala," to give performances here at popular prices. Sparks Berry has united his efforts with those of Mr. Behymer in carrying out this project. In fact, he left for the East considerably earlier to sign up artists for the coming year.

As yet, no announcement regarding the personnel of the company has been made, although a much higher class organization than last year is assured. According to a communication received from Mr. Behymer, the season of opera here will last four weeks.

"We have planned a splendid repertoire of twenty works, a number of which will be new in many respects," he said. "The organization will be the best heard in Los Angeles at the range of prices. We will have many "guest" surprises among our artists, only they will not be guests, but regular members of the company.

"The 'guests' idea is a European idea of the past; America and especially the West want all around evenly-balanced productions for each performance and we will make every effort to give them."

All things considered the season of 1916-1917 promises to be one of the most remarkable, as concerns opera, that has been witnessed in a number of years in this country. Plans have been laid for a dozen if not more organizations in various sections. The prospects are for three different seasons, in this city during the year, the Boston, La Scala and California, under the management of Constantino.

Lemare Recital.

One of the most interesting musical events of the summer season will be the organ recital tomorrow evening at the High School auditorium in Van Nuys. This will be the only recital given by Mr. Lemare in the immediate vicinity of Los Angeles, as he is returning to San Francisco. Much interest is being manifested by local musicians in the event, and a special train has been provided by the Pacific Electric, leaving the Hill-street station at 7:15 o'clock and returning immediately following the recital.

Following the programme, one of the features of which will be the improvisations by Mr. Lemare on short themes presented by members of the audience: "Prelude and Fugue A Minor" (Bach;) "Sylvine" (from "La Farandole" Suite,) (Dubois;) "Minuet in A" (Boccherini;) "Sonata No. 6." (Mendelssohn;) "Lullaby," "Rondo Cappriccio" and "Andantino in D flat" (by request) (Lemare;) "Concert Overture in C Major" (Hollins.)

College to New Home.

The college of music, University of Southern California, one of the foremost local musical educational institutions, will have a new and larger home after next Tuesday, according to announcement by Dean Walter F. Skeele. The Marble homestead on the corner of Thirty-second street and Figueroa is to be occupied. This building has been extensively altered and improved to make room for the numerous studios, offices, practice rooms, study and recital halls, etc.

The change in location is necessitated by the rapid increase in the number of students at the college of music, which was founded thirty years ago, and has doubled in size within the past few years. Fourteen prominent musicians of the city are enrolled on its faculty, and nearly 250 students attend.

St. Cecilia Club.

A rather striking series of programmes has been arranged for the coming season of the St. Cecilia Club, opening October 2. This organization, which was founded in 1907, has as its president, Miss Kie Julie Christin, and devotes its attention exclusively to the study of musical works and the trend of musical development.

The opening programme will be concerned with Shakespeare in music, following which there will be two programmes of ultra-modern music. Subsequent programmes will be devoted to sacred music (St. Cecilia day;) morning and night music; Norwegian, Russian, Italian, German, French, modern English and American music, and other themes.

Besides Miss Christin, the following are officers and members of committees in the club: Miss Isabelle Isgrig, vice-president; Miss Sadie Stanton, corresponding secretary; Miss Willy Smyser, recording secretary; Mrs. Benjamin Bloser, treasurer; Mrs. Harry Baxter, member-at-large; Programme Committee, Mrs. John W. Thayer, chairman; Mrs. A. B. Perkey and Miss Mary G. Read; reception, Mrs. Bernard Schulman, chairman; Mrs. Philip Zobelein and Miss Margery Pickell; auditing, Mrs. Baxter and Mrs. Roy Kellogg; Historian, Mrs. Harry Rose, and leader of current events, Mrs. Jesse Philip McKnight.

Young Pupils Please.

A group of the pupils of Halesia D. Hoffmeister gave a matinee musicale recently at the studio of Mrs. May MacDonald Hope, No. 2004 South Union avenue, presenting a programme of quality and difficulty. Selections ranged from Bach to Scriabine and included a number of unusually pleasing selections. Those who took part were Mildred Connor, Elena Molera, Eunice McConnell, Myrtle Belle McDonald, Alicia Molera, Florendera Appell, Angelonia Hoffmeister, all of whom are between 10 and 14 years of age. Some special rythmic and chord and scale exercises formed an interesting feature.

Singing Club Picnic.

The singing club of the Swiss society Helvetia will hold a picnic today at Joseph Fueter's ranch at Burbank. Motor trucks will leave Turner Hall for the picnic location promptly at 10 a.m., according to Theodore Grumbach, member of the committee on arrangements.

HAPPY THOUGHT CLUB SYMPOSIUM.

BY EUGENE BROWN.

Hereafter the Happy Thought Club will keep a register and members will not only be asked to record their most beloved poet and author, but also their favorite flower, their ambition and their most desired pastime. The old resident, created a ripple of merriment when he announced in advance that his favorite flower was the flapjack and the best sport making love.

At the symposium yesterday only the preliminary steps toward compiling the register were taken and the secretary was instructed to prepare a form to be printed on a card and filed away as an alphabetical index of the club.

The Cheerful Nut rather objected. "We'll be having an efficiency bureau and a fight the next thing," he sneered.

"Well you'll be in neither one," said Mavourneen Briggs, rather sharply.

Prof. Watts Eaton Hughes of the club information bureau reported that he had had several more queries concerning the idenity of the alleged lady monandriac. The Chief of Police disclaimed any knowledge of the misanthrope—whatever that is, but said he was prepared to do his duty if any complaint were made. Dist.-Atty. Woolwine said that the records of his office had never shown any case of the kind, but he was prepared to act fearlessly should occasion arise.

"Thank God, we are well guarded," exclaimed Louise Josephine Wiggles, piously, crossing her fingers and knocking on wood.

Mary Lee Werolla Long, who is known as the Astor of China, sent in her suggestion for the design for a club button for the Sunshine Sisterhood section. She wanted the face of May Irwin surrounded by the rays of the setting sun on the Pacific Ocean. Mary is the daughter of a missionary to the Orient and used to be in love with Pierre Loti.

Concerning the Sisterhood and its emblem, came a passionate effusion from Amelia Ora Schmitke, the Claremont lulu bird, whose wings were dipped in the waters of the Halcyons. Inh re merry versiflage she said:

"Now the Sunshine Sisterhood's
a fac',
For isn't it writ in white and black
That we are permitted to wear the pin
If we think enough thoughts to let us in?
We are sure that, being a native daughter,
With the heritage California brought her,
The co-ed ought to do her bes'
To contribute sunshine through the press."

As chairgirl of the Press Committee of the Merry Sunshiners, Amelia is quite active in the new membership and is much admired for her weird beauty, which is of the Eva Tanguay type.

Some time ago reference was made to the adventures of Etta Lott, the witching Cassandra of Griffith Park, who was selling stock in a company exploiting the Pierian Springs and was supposed to have been pinched by the postal authorities.

Now Etta emerges from her retreat and sends a communication and appeal to the club as follows:

"Brothers and Sisters: A short time since you mentioned the failure of the enterprise I was connected with and I take this opportunity to explain that the trouble arose from the fact that having acquired some understanding of the real estate business, I advertised the Pierian Springs as land instead of water.

"Now I am thinking of selling stock in the Hope Springs—that Pope speaks of as being never failing, or eternal. This time I must make no mistake, but I am undecided whether to advertise them as water or milk. Confidentally, do you think that if I joined the club the members would buy stock?

"The idea of a Happy Thought Club is very pleasing. It seems to make the world brighter. Goethe says: 'A friendly thought is the purest gift mankind affords to man,' and possibly a happy thought ranks second to it.

"In a visit to Palm Springs lately the thought occurred to me that the Creator deserved membership in the club for making anything as interesting as the desert vegetation grow there. We enjoyed seeing the beautiful Palo Verde, the smoke tree with its top covered with little blue flowers like violets; the wonderful desert willow with its orchid-like blossoms, besides the common vegetation. They seemed to bear a message to us to be happy. The desert vegetation was my greatest surprise in California, but, of course, like Moses at the burning bush, we must take off our shoes to see.

"Sometime I may accidentally stumble upon something that will make me worthy of membership in your club—this is now my great ambition. I also hope to sell some stock in the Hope Springs."

Miss Lott also bursts forth into song. She contributes a Hughes limerick—vers libre, as follows:

George Harvey, the wise one, has said it,
And I think it is much to his credit:
"Nobody wants Hughes but the people."
Sound this slogan from every steeple.
For the ticket—he's the right one to head it.

The secretary read an application for membership from Portia Porter, who hails from and reigns in the port of Porterville. She is a godmother of the celebrated Porterhouse steak, but has very little at stake now. She sent in what she called "a piece of Porteresque poetry by Portia, from her pretty portable place at Porterville, where she raises peas in peace."

The pleasant paragraphs 'pended were promptly perused. Also Portia was invited to qualify for the sisterhood by submitting a happy thought for the club collection. Portentous!

Absalom St. Vitus, who writes advertising for a hair restorer company on the East Side, sent the club a campaign hint as follows:

Fall in line and march to this rhyme
And Hughes will reach the goal on time:
"Hughes!
Hughes!
The man we choose
To step into watchful, waiting shoes."

Uncle William Snaggs, the unmuzzled warbler of Alhambra, mixed his politics with the movies and sent in a joint effusion to the club collection which the secretary read for the refreshment of the club, and which was as follows:

"Dear Brethren: Of course I don't want to cause any discord among the Happy Thoughters, so if Eglantine wants to toot for Bessie Love, let 'er toot. If I'd want to say all I'd like to say about my favorite movie person I would have to hire a hall to say it in. My favorite's name may not be as euphonious as the one Sister Eglantine admires so much, but, begosh, if you'd ever see her, as I saw her down at the beach some time ago, you'd swear that she is the euphoniousest that ever hap-

STAGE.

Strong.

LINE-UP IS STRIKING.

FOOTLIGHT FORECAST BRINGS MESSAGE OF NOVELTY.

With the Russian ballet—a novelty, by the way, in vaudeville—and the production of a new and promising play, as well as the first presentation in stock of a famous success of last season, the Rialto is well stocked with pleasing attractions this week.

Burbank.

"The Fibber," a new play by Grace Livingston Furniss, will be given its premiere tomorrow night, under the direction of Fred Butler, at the Burbank Theater. The piece promises to be one of the Morosco successes. It is a smart comedy of clever lines and original plot. It deals with a strange series of happenings in the high-class flat colony of New York; during which the hero assumes the name of the chief character in a book written by the heroine of the play, resulting in a series of comical mysteries.

Edith Lyle and Paul Harvey have the leading roles, supported by such favorites as Dora Mae Howe, Frank Darien, Margaret Shelby, Vera Lewis, Warner Baxter, Winifred Bryson, Nan Carter, Ralph Bell, John Burton, Mary Baker, Merle Stanton and others.

Orpheum.

One of the most beautiful and artistic vaudeville productions is forecast in the Russian Ballet, headed by Theodore Kosloff, which will open tomorrow afternoon at the Orpheum. The principal dancer's own orchestra will furnish the music.

Kosloff, trained in the royal ballet academy at Moscow, is said to have no superior in his art, while Vlasta Maslova, premiere danseuse, is almost equally noted. The ballet is a selected one, all trained in the Moscow school. The aggregation appeared for several successive weeks at the Palace Theater in New York, meeting with unqualified success. They give a series of beautifully-staged classical dances, solo, duo and ensemble numbers. Bakst designed the scenery and costumes, said to be exquisite.

Others on the new bill will be Claire Rochester, possessed of a soprano and baritone double voice; Kramer and Morton, "two black dots;" Consul, the wonderfully educated monkey, and Betty, in a simian pantomime; together with the holdovers, including Melville Ellis and Irene Bordoni, Edna Brothers in "The Might Have Beens," Murray Bennet, and the McLallen and Carson roller skating act.

Morosco.

"Outcast," Hubert Henry Davies' drama, in which Elsie Ferguson gained fame, will be the offering at the Morosco, commencing this afternoon. A notable cast will present the play.

Edmund Lowe, will play the leading masculine part in the play. Mary Servoss, the popular leading woman of the Morosco, will have the role in which Elsie Ferguson won success. Miss Servoss's versatile art will find ample opportunity in this exacting role. Douglas MacLean, already a Los Angeles favorite, has the leading juvenile part. The supporting cast includes Fred Tiden, Gertrude Maitland, Marjorie Davis, and others.

Pantages.

Ponies that display human intelligence, dogs that apparently go the genus homo one better in the matter of brains, and monkeys that vie with the dogs in the display of gray matter will be the stars during the coming week at Pantages. Thaler's great dog, pony and monkey circus will hold the boards as the week's headliner.

For those who laugh with their music there will be the Petticoat Minstrels, clever girls who sing, dance and comedy. Charles Semon's attenuated form is known to vaudeville the world over, drawing laughs wherever displayed. He will be on the bill. The three Rianos are contortionists, gymnasts and impersonators of monkeys. They offer a sketch in which the monkeys are actors after the fashion of Kipling's "Bander Log." Elwell and Kenyon, the Harmony Duo, and Mae Curtis, the personality girl are two more hits of the coming bill.

Republic.

"Skinning the Cat," the latest travesty on the New York dance craze will be a diversion at the Republic for today and tonight only, and Monday an all new bill of six vaudeville acts and a five-reel feature photoplay comes to the popular Main-street house.

Margaret Caraher, the Australian nightingale, brings a turn that will appeal to music lovers; Swor and Westbrook come south with a high-class singing, talking and dancing act; Loftus and Loftus will present a travesty turn with plenty of comedy singing specialties; Billie De Rex and Bobbie are billed in a vocal dancing and piano act; while Egan and DeMar will add to the mirthful section of the bill with comedy songs, patter and dancing act. In addition, Edmund Breese will be seen in the five-reel feature "The Lure of Heart's Desire," and there will be a big surprise act.

Hippodrome.

An excellent and varied bill is promised at the Hippodrome, beginning tomorrow.

The Great Lutes Trio promises a surprise, one of the members being without arms, yet nevertheless proving an expert rifle shot and accomplished musician.

Other acts are Norris's Baboons in a "Monkey Romance;" Charles Gibbs, known as the "prince of the land of mimicry;" Miller and Kent in "Just Married;" Larry and Sallie Clifford in "Darktown Topics;" the Darling Saxaphone Four, a quartette of clever girls; and Graham and Randall in "How Ignatius Got Pneumonia."

A Resourceful Book-keeper.

[Boston Transcript:] Grocer: That careless clerk of mine left the tap of the vinegar barrel open and when I went to it there wasn't a drop left.

Friend: What did you do?

Grocer: Fired him and charged the loss to running expenses.

Fingering Finery.

AMONG THE STORES AND AMIDST THE SHOPS

Along Our Dazzling Streets, where Dame Fashion's Shopping is Done.

BY OLIVE GRAY.

Now is the time to buy:

The velvet or other pile material for your winter suit. The saving on these fabrics in that great clearance sale will furnish sufficient funds for the making and accessories, and garments of plush or velvet will be more than ever popular the coming season.

The glistening flounces or bands of paillettes for your best reception gown, in that sale where such trimmings will be found at half and even less than half of usual prices.

Your entire stock of all-silk hose for the year to come. Yes, these are also in that great sale, and the price is as little as you pay for the ordinary kinds of stockings, and you may have a choice of plain or the most ornate of styles and colors.

Practical Suggestion.

To prevent rust upon the bedding at the beach the Good Housekeeper paints the bed springs with aluminum paint such as is used upon radiators and for the inside of ovens.

Character Clearance.

"Once a year," said Evelyn, "John and I have what we term a 'character clearance.' It is a part of our anniversary proceedings." As Evelyn and John are among the few—well yes, I'll let it stand—few truly happy married persons whom I know, I was at once interested. "We make it a point on this occasion to review our past year of married life and to enumerate the faults which we have tried to remedy and to set new stakes for future development. We aim to cover in this review every department of our lives. Our economic progress, our mental advancement and that of character, each comes in for a share of criticism and new resolve. I believe it is this plan, more than anything which has kept our love fresh and our daily life from becoming stale and commonplace," she added ruminatively. "You know every-dayness is so apt to degenerate into that bovine stupidity which too often marks the sometime married. It seems as though many married persons hurried into their courtship all that they had to say and forever after are held in a sort of silent spell in their relations with each other, saving all their brilliance and all their thought-expressions for someone else. We try to avoid that miserable state and I believe our character clearance has much to do with its accomplishment."

That Tenth Clearance.

Whether there is some sort of magic in the number ten, or whether the number has unconsciously been set as a mark for unusual achievement, or whether—but why argue? The fact is there and facts are indisputable. That tenth annual clearance sale for which we all habitually wait with bated breath—breath bated with some little cash to catch the bargains!—is about to set a new high mark in sales. I know whereof I speak, for it has been my privilege, in company with The Man, to canvass con and dote upon many of the bargains which will be offered—bargains which after having read these lines, you will be, perhaps, constrained to read about in the many pages elsewhere to be found. I'll confess that it was in the way of a terrible temptation to pass from aisle to aisle of that great stock receiving-room where such a revel of bargains had been housed, for it was almost impossible not to break the whatevereth commandment it is which tells us not to covet and the one which restrains us from theft. However, even in this day of pocketry no receptable could be large enough to carry off all that I wished to steal, so it seemed almost useless to begin. From dress fabrics to table damask, from silk stockings to pocket handkerchiefs and even into the realm of furniture and rugs, there were articles there which forthwith listed themselves among the must-haves or the certainly-do-wants. And the insidiousness of it all lay in the fact that so extremely small were the prices that one's imaginary ledger forthwith began to bulge upon the side of savings and one became convinced that money in the bank was sheer wastefulness in comparison to investment in those alluring bargains. For next winter's wardrobe, for all next year's supply in the home, for—well for so long ahead that the high cost of living might well be knifed indefinitely—such was the appeal. And that is why—or mainly why—you and I and she and even he will be on hand when that clearance revel opens on Tuesday morning, next. However, true that "all the world loves a lover"—it is more true that all the world loves a bargain.

Ingress for Crowds.

We talked, half jocularly, of course, about building outside stairways to upper windows to allow the crowds to enter more directly than through doors to participate in that bargain revel. But anyhow, we shall wish for entrances of India rubber, to expand wide enough to admit us all when the opening gong sounds on Tuesday morning. If you have not guessed yet where that bargain revel is, better try again, for you'll miss it if you are not informed.

One's Best Gowns.

Some of the things which I am planning to Robin-Hood from that sale (for it is exactly like banditing to buy at such prices!) are as follows: Chiffon velvet for a winter coat, black velvet for a winter gown, crepe de chine for a frock dansant—perhaps more than one, so lovely are the colors—navy blue chiffon taffeta for a three-piece suit—so cheap is this and so scarce!—and, oh dear! one really should have a gown of that exquisite pailletted stuff in Catalina blue! Or would you take the green and black? Well, I know, that blonde flouncing all pailletted in glories of tan and gold is irresistible. Then those laces! Why, think of flouncing in full-skirt depth and for so little that even if one did not need it for years, or even ever, it would make an excellent posterity hand-down. Did you ever see prettier handkerchiefs? Enough for one's own use and to gift-give to all one's friends for the coming year is really a duty to those. No girl ever did have enough silk stockings, but if she is wise she will at least partially satiate herself with those all-silk ones costing less than usually charged for those of lighter weight and about half as silken. You begin to understand, do you not, that it is quite impossible to resist this great sale? I have ceased to struggle and am just docilely making out lists.

The Good Housekeeper.

The good housekeeper who has had upon her tablet of always-wanteds one of those enamelled breakfast suites, can no longer deny herself, for in That Sale—capitalized because it is an actual saving of capital to buy—those suites in any of the popular colors are to be had for exactly half of the usual price.

She who has lamented the scarcity and high cost of table damask will find there also an opportunity to restore her faith in linen makers. She may indulge her fancy in delicious coloring for the breakfast-room, both in draperies and in rugs to match or tone with the breakfast suite, and still be largely "to the good" in her expenditures. As to silk pillows, now so much in vogue, she may recover all she has at so few cents per yard as to make her almost ashamed to buy. And rugs—many are cut in half! No, no! Not the rugs, but the prices.

Such a Racquet!

Even though marked "second," the secondity is almost imperceptible and the price so fractional of that of the perfect ones of the noted makes from which they are selected that any good sport would be for them. Yes, I am still talking about that great clearance sale. If you have not guessed "where," I'll give you seven guesses at the house on Broadway which is holding the great annual clearance and when you recall last year's clearance at the same house and I tell you that the present sale excels that by seventy times seven, even though the tenth, you will agree as to the "someness" of the sale.

Library Dentistry.

"Where your bookshelves have lost a tooth"—recall the expression in "Margaret Ogilvie?"—you may remedy the deficit during that great sale, for it goes without saying that the Book Nook will participate in those wondrous values. Half the usual prices on full sets of standard and classical books, mere fractional cost upon many unusual and giftie volumes, and reductions upon so many always-wanted that there should be no more gaps in your library of permanent books, nor even any sort of hiatus upon those shelves or tables where do congregate the flotsam and jetsam of reading in the well-ordered home. The Book Nook is always up-to-the-minute in the minutest details and sometimes several seconds ahead.

Fashion's Clear Sailing.

Charming summer hats are made of crepe and organdy.

Broadcloth will lead among woolen fabrics for the fall.

Children's coats are very frequently made with belts.

All kinds of fur-cloths are being brought out for autumn.

Dark waists are apt to be enlivened with beaded garnitures.

Light-colored velour hats are most in favor for outing wear.

A novel coat has a narrow knife pleating all around the foot.

Even silk petticoats are made on very much distended lines.

Basque waists having fitted darts are one of fashion's freaks.

A feature of the smart new tailored dresses is the high collar.

Marquise and Napoleon shaped hats are coming in for early fall.

OVER THE SEA.

Sir Rider Haggard, honorary representative of the Royal Colonial Institute, has been visiting the colonial possessions of Great Britain, investigating conditions and facilities offered by British colonies for proposed land settlements for British soldiers after the war.

James Byvoed, one of Holland's bulb growers, has been in Washington studying the flower trade. In spite of the ravages of war, he says, Holland has had more money and been more prosperous since the war started than ever before. Every Hollander has work and is well paid for it, asserts Mr. Byvoed. It is his belief that the shipping and fishing industries of that country are at their height, making men rich. Not only does the citizenry thrive, but the military strength of Holland is at its greatest. A million dollars is spent daily to prepare for an emergency. All men in that country, from youth to manhood, are pressed into the service.

Prof. H. Osaka of Tokyo University declared in an interview in Havana that Mexico could count on the unconditional support of Japan in event of war with the United States. A Havana newspaper quotes Prof. Osaka as follows: "Japan would help Mexico against the United States for several reasons, chiefly commercial, and as a natural result of the contemptuous manner in which Americans treated our countrymen in California."

The new Lord Kitchener, elder brother and heir of the late British Secretary of War, has for some time been in Southwest Africa, where he has been serving in the campaign against the Germans. Although 69 years old, the new earl, who was born October 5, 1846, placed himself at the disposal of the government at the outbreak of the war and began active duty at once. He served in Burma in 1891, being mentioned in dispatches, and in the Manipur expedition in the same year, being again mentioned in dispatches. He married in 1877 the only daughter of the late Lieut.-Col. Frankling Lushington. A son, Commander H. E. F. C. Kitchener, royal navy, served in China in 1900 and is serving in the present war. There is also a daughter.

JUST A MOMENT.

BY GINGER.

Under the Sun.

The rays of the sun stream down in their might,
On a world that seemed so fair.
It burns our brows and dazzles our sight—
But what does the red sun care?

He blisters our backs with his fiery darts,
And takes the curl from our hair:
We sweat away by fits and starts,—
But what does the red sun care?

The fields bleach white with his burning glance,
And the waters shrink from his glare:
He drives us all to our linen pants—

In connection with the status of the prohibition amendments in Texas it might be said that Hades is also reputed a dry place.

There's nothing to prevent the open shop and the union suit going blithely arm in arm together.

If we do have to come to wooden shoes we at least will not groan when our toes are trampled on in a crowded car.

This administration buys its islands on a bull market and pays a fancy price. Putting up $25,000,000 for three islands that were once on the bargain counter for $5,000,000 is bum finance. McKinley got 700 islands for $20,000,000. Buy 'em at wholesale. That's the system.

A Missouri saloon sold for $30,000, but the reason was that it was on the Kansas line. It sells three million glasses a beer a year to near-by dwellers in a prohibition State. It takes eight white-aproned gents and a seventy-foot bar to keep the neighboring Kansans from perishing of thirst.

Souvenir postal card privileges at the border camps would be worth a mint of money while the National Guardsmen are strung along the line.

It is rather tough when an ardent Progressive cannot round up enough registered Progressive voters to put across his nomination petition as a candidate of that party.

If the railway men go on a long and troublesome strike they may wake up to find a heap of their business in the hands of the buzz-wagon bunch. Train men are not the necessaries of life they were a short generation back.

Today's Interview.

"I see we have the groceteria in our midst," remarked the passionate pilgrim, as he deftly dealt himself two cards from the bottom.

"Can't the doctors do anything for it?" queried I anxiously. "Is there any danger of it spreading?"

"There is," remarked my companion, sarcastically. "It may become a pest, or it may be welcomed with open arms and a brass band. Maybe you don't understand that a groceteria is a help-yourself shop. It is a commercial cafeteria."

"Shucks!" exclaimed I "I thought it was something that bit you while you slept."

"Perhaps it does in a way," responded the pilgrim, "but for our purpose it is a package grocery where every customer is his own salesman. If he doesn't get what he wants he can write letters to himself telling what a bum clerk he is and how a store really ought to be run."

"Do you mean to say that the cafeteria idea has broken out in a new spot?" said I.

"In several spots," returned the pilgrim. "It's the new kind of efficiency. We have had mechanical salesmen, slot machines and automatic distributors, but it's still cheaper yet when they make every man wait on himself. We're fixing it up so that all the clerks can go to war and all that the place will need is a fluffy-headed girl to check you out and take your money. I suppose everything has to be put up in packages. You don't get what you want but what they've got. You can take it or leave it alone. The frugal housewife comes in with her basket and wanders around the place. She picks out a package of clothes pins, a box of matches, a pound of prunes, a can of lard and a broom. When she goes out a blonde heifer searches her, shakes down her hair, examines her teeth and then gargles: 'Sixty-seven cents, please.' She pays the money and heads for her little home. Dreadfully simple, isn't it?"

"Maybe so; but supposing she wants a barrel of flour, a sack of potatoes, a crate of lettuce, a watermelon and a box of plums?"

"I guess she'd have to make several trips or else go to another store. You see the groceteria is meant for package buyers—the canned goods colony. They are the delicatessen shoppers. I suppose the next thing will be a buffet where every man mixes his own fizz. We used to calculate that the bulk of the shopping would be done by telephone, but that is mainly a credit business. Folks who have to pay cash or want to be sure of getting their money's worth have to do their shopping in person and they may as well wait on themselves while they are at it. I can't see any great harm in a groceteria."

"All right," said I. "We'll let it live. Possibly we may yet get around to a dental shop where a man can fill his own teeth. This efficiency business is spreading to beat the band."

THE CONQUERING MOTOR.

War's Demand for Horses has Increased Use of Machines.

[Chicago Journal:] It takes at least five years to breed and raise a first-class work horse. It takes—well, a good deal less time—to make a motor truck or tractor that will do the work of many horses. This is one of the several reasons why there is going to be a big increase of motor transportation, motor trucking and tractor farming within the next few years.

Of course, there are plenty of other reasons. The war has killed off vast numbers of horses while multiplying the manufacture of motors. When the struggle ends governments will have vast numbers of trucks and tractors to sell at clearing-out prices and factories will be ready to cater to private customers. But these factors, after all, merely hasten a development that was written in the book of fate.

The world is outgrowing the draft horse, and no true lover of the horse can be sorry. The artist may regret the passing of the great, docile, beautiful creatures; but the thoughtful man remembers the ice of winter and the heat of summer; hard pavements, callous drivers and heavy loads; and rejoices that these burdens are to be taken over by unfeeling machinery.

ROMANCES OF HISTORIC BACHELORS

How Their Experiences Influenced Their Lives.

VI.

EDWARD GIBBON.

BY MADISON C. PETERS.

Edward Gibbon, England's greatest historian, was born in 1737 of a good country family. After a sickly and unfortunate childhood, he was sent by his father at the age of 20 to the Swiss village of Lausanne. Here it was that he had the only real love affair of his life. He met and fell in love with Susanne Curchod, born in 1740, the daughter of a Calvinist minister. She was well educated and the belle of the surrounding country. One of her biographers tells us that "she was beautiful with that pure virginal beauty which depends on early youth."

Gibbon was at this time only 20 and Susanne but 17; they were attracted to one another from their first meeting and planned an immediate marriage, but the young man's father, upon hearing of his son's intentions, absolutely forbade this union with a foreign girl of obscure family. At this time parental authority held far greater sway than at the present. However, another and far more practical obstacle prevented the marriage, the young man, possessing by no means a strong constitution, was entirely dependent upon his fatner for his support. He had not yet began to write for publication, much less to make money through his literary efforts.

In spite of these objections Gibbon was severely criticised for breaking the engagement with Mlle. Curchod and returning to England in obedience to his father's command. The lovers were deeply grieved at parting and swore eternal faithfulness and undying love; Gibbon, true to his vow, never married, but Susanne entered the married state a few years later.

Susanne's father died soon after Gibbon's return to England and she went to Geneva and opened a school for young ladies in order to gain support for herself and mother.

A rich banker of Paris, M. Necker, met Susanne and fell in love with her. She became his wife, thereby gaining a position both socially and politically that made her envied by all; her daughter was the famous Madame de Stael.

Gibbon had, in the meantime, devoted himself to his literary work and it was shortly after this that he commenced his great work, "The Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire."

Several years later, after a visit to Italy, Gibbon went to Paris and called upon Madame Necker, and they became good friends. According to contemporaries this good opinion of each other had diminished somewhat; Gibbon thought that with her acquisition of wealth Madame Necker had become snobbish, and strange to say the lady thought that he was influenced too much by monetary consideration. However, during his stay, their relations were quite friendly.

It is said that Gibbon on one occasion forgot his loyalty to the sole love of his life. He invited the beautiful Lady Elizabeth Foster to breakfast and read to her several passages from "The Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire," just completed. Enchanted with the masterly narrative, her ladyship unsuspicious of all pretensions from such an enormously fat, ungainly old man with love-repelling face, enthusiastically complimented him upon his work, and immediately he fell on his knees and professed his love for the charming critic, who recoiling from his impassioned profession of love, entreated him to rise at once. But helpless from the unwieldy form, he sought in vain to regain his feet, and the lady equally powerless to relieve the awkward situation, at length with the help of two strong women reseated the famous historian to his armchair, from which it was supposed he had accidentally slipped. This reversal of his Fall and her Decline did not break their friendship.

Gibbon's friendship with Madame Necker ended only with his life. About fifteen years after his visit to her in Paris, as old age came upon the historian, he again went to Lausanne and made it his permanent home. Madame Necker, whose husband had in the meantime died, was also residing at Lausanne with her daughters; in fact, the little Swiss town had become quite a literary center.

Gibbon resumed his friendship with his former sweetheart and they spent the declining years of their lives together. In the latter part of 1795 Gibbon was called to London; he was seized with dropsy and died early in the new year.

David Hume, in the first rank of English historians, was born in Edinburgh on April 26, 1711. He came of a fine old stock. One of his paternal ancestors was Lord Hume of Douglass, a notable character in both Scotch and French history. Although of an extremely unprepossessing appearance, ungainly, embarrassingly fat, heavy featured and dull eyed he was popular with the women.

Hume declared himself to be very moderate in all his passions and he frankly confessed that his greatest love was that of literary fame. This would indicate that he never cared deeply for a woman, though the Comtesse de Boufflers professed the kenest admiration and is suspected of having entertained a great passion for him. The beautiful Frenchwoman was an extremely temperamental person and was apparently incapable of being deeply enamoured of more than one man at a time. The beginning of the friendship between these two well-known characters was rather romantic. Mme. de Boufflers had read one of the historian's books and was so delighted with it that she wrote telling him of her enjoyment. Hume quickly replied and a lively correspondence ensued, and upon going to Paris, Hume became a warm friend of the Comtesse, who, to use his words, "saved him from a total indifference towards everything in human life." In his letter to Hume Lord Elibank gives us a good idea of the friendship of the two:

"Be not surprised that my chief errand to Scotland at this time was to have some conversation with you, when I assure you, from Mme. B., that her only errand to England, where I had the happiness to attend her from Paris, was the hopes of meeting you at London; you cannot in delicacy neglect the opportunity of gratifying this flattering curiosity, perhaps passion, of the most amiable of God's creatures."

Mme. de Boufflers wrote numerous letters to Hume, which have been published in their original language. There were many other Frenchwomen that Hume was fond of, though in a perfectly platonic way. While he never seems to have had a very serious love affair, he tells us that: "I took a particular pleasure in the society of modest women. I had no reason to be displeased with the reception they gave me."

The friendship between the historian-philosopher and the Comtesse de Boufflers lasted until his death. In one of his letters to her he says: "Three months are elapsed since I left you; and it is impossible for me to assign a time when I can hope to join you. I still return to my wish, that I had never left Paris, and that I had kept out of the reach of all other duties, except that which was so sweet and agreeable to fulfill—the cultivating your friendship and enjoying your society. Your obliging expressions revive this regret in the strongest way."

It is said of Hume that he once made an offer of marriage to a woman, who refused him, but whose friends afterwards told him that she had changed her mind. "So have I," replied the historian. He was at times depressed by his self-imposed solitude and spoke of himself as utterly abandoned and isolated.

Hume was kind-hearted and genial. He took the homage paid him while secretary to the embassy at Paris very modestly, thinking, perhaps, that it was his deeds rather than himself, that was the attraction, for his works were far more popular in France than in Great Britain. Huxley, in his history of Hume, tells of the Hume furores in Paris rather aptly: "In the extensive mixture of learning, wit, humanity, frivolity and profligacy which then characterized the highest French society, a new sensation was worth anything, and it mattered little whether the cause thereof was a philosopher or a poodle; so David had a great success in the Parisian world. Great nobles feted him, and great ladies were not content unless the "gros David" was to be seen at their receptions and in their boxes at the theater." Hume's cool head was by no means turned, but he took the goods the gods provided with much satisfaction and everywhere won golden opinions by his unaffected good sense and thorough kindness of heart.

Brig.-Gen. John P. Wisser, U.S.A., was retired last week under the age limit. He is now stationed at San Francisco in charge of the Department of the West.

Maj. Bryant H. Wells, brother of former Gov. Heber M. Wells of Utah, has been appointed to the General Staff of the United States Army. Maj. Wells but recently received his promotion in rank. At present he is in command of a regiment at the Plattsburgh training camp, and Gen. Wood, officer in charge, has requested that he be allowed to remain there until the end of the camp.

Commissioner Keegan of the Department of Labor says the United States will immediately seize and operate every railroad in the country in case the four brotherhoods vote on August 1 to strike. He believes that 99 per cent. of the men will vote for a walkout.

David Lewis, who was chosen at the State primaries in Maryland to succeed Blair Lee as United States Senator, worked in the coal mines as a laborer until the age of 22. He never attended school, but learned to read in Sunday-school, and while mining studied law. He was admitted to the bar in 1892, and was elected to Congress for three successive terms, serving in the lower house.

Victor A. S. Williams, brigadier-general in the overseas force of Canada, who is reported as captured by the Germans in recent fighting, has been a member of the permanent Canadian military force for more than twenty years, and was a member of the militia council of the Dominion before the war opened. He had his military education at the Royal Military College, Kingston. Between the years 1887-9, when he served in the Royal Northwest Mounted Police, and the service he rendered in the South African war, from which he returned with the Queen's medal and five clasps, this soldier rose steadily from post to post in the Canadian forces.

Capt. Koenig of the submarine Deutschland met an old childhood chum in Baltimore, Mme. Christine Langenhan, the German operatic star. Mme. Langenhan presented the gallant skipper of the submersible with a handsome loving cup, which she had made in New York as soon as she heard that her old childhood chum commanded the undersea mercantman which had come into Baltimore.

Cornelius J. Kane, turnkey at the Central Police Station, Baltimore, has been on the police force of that city for forty years. He celebrated his fortieth anniversary last week by reporting for duty as usual.

W. J. Trench of Mentone, Cal., a year ago left his overalls hanging on a peg. In one pocket was a valuable key with a string attached to it. When Mr. Trench returned he found his overalls, but no key. He has just found the string and the key, in a wren's nest.

Five years ago William Martin received a worn Bible from his grandfather as his share of his relative's property. A few days ago his sister came across the book. Opening it at random she was surprised to find a $20 bank note. Turning through the leaves she found other bills of various denominations until the total reached $710.

OF ART AN

BY ANTON

From "Seashore."

I heard, or seemed to hear, th
chiding sea
Say, Pilgrim, why so late and slow to come?
Am I not always here, thy summer home?
Is not my voice thy music, morn and eve,
My breath thy healthful climate in the heats,
My touch thy antidote, my bay thy bath?
Was ever building like my terraces?
Was ever couch magnificent as mine?
Lie on the warm rock-ledges, and there learn
A little hut suffices like a town.
I make your sculptured architecture vain,
Vain beside mine. I drive my wedges home,
And carve the coastwise mountain
into caves.
Lo! here is Rome and Nineveh and Thebes,
Karnak and Pyramid, and Giant's
Stairs,
Half piled or prostrate; and my newest slab
Older than all thy race.

American Paintings.

Some artists fight shy of "general exhibitions." And with good reason. In a mixed assembly, where everybody is talking at once, be the voices never so refined and well-bred, each may find some difficulty in being heard, and undoubtedly many are lost in the buzz. You may listen wisely and well, first to one and then to another, and may yet retain only a confused impression of what you have heard.

However, the general exhibition remains necessary and desirable, and the painters have met and conquered its obvious drawbacks with admirable resourcefulness and aplomb. They have hit upon the device of painting "exhibition pictures," pictures that can be "heard." They have made their canvases larger, more insistent, and in so doing have, of course, sacrificed some qualities, while gaining others.

As everybody knows, mere size is not the desideratum in art, but subtleties of tone, of color, of feeling and of arrangement that have nothing whatever to do with it. But if the artist is as big as his canvas he need not of necessity lose these subtleties, these paramount beauties, and the wider space may offer him a freedom of movement and expression all undreamt of before. The miniature painted on a grain of rice may be a wonderful work of art, but its merit is not that it is infinitesimally small. And the Venus of Milo is not less lovely because it is big. In brief, there is no big and there is no little in art—there is only art itself.

Though the painter who prefers a grain of rice to canvas twelve feet by twelve may have a real grievance in the matter of exhibitions there seems to be no hope of escape from his dilemma. After all, a public gallery is a big place and a grain of rice may be mislaid even in a cigar box. And after all, again, there is much to be said for a work of art that can't possibly be lost even in a huge public gallery.

Considerable has already been said for and about the seventeen American pictures now being shown in Exposition Park, the joint offering of Gen. Otis, Mr. Trask and the museum gallery to the art interests of Los Angeles. Nine of them have been briefly described, and the remaining eight will receive a like consideration today. They are well worth our attention, be assured, for they rank high as examples of modern American painting. Twenty-one smaller pictures by Americans are also on view in the Exposition Park gallery, and a few of these will be discussed. Lest I weary the reader with a monotonous array of de-

And after all, again, there is much to be said for a work of art that can't easily be lost even in a huge public gallery.

Considerable has already been said [illegible] about the seventeen American pictures now being shown in Exposition Park, the joint offering of Gen. Otis, Mr. Trask and the museum gallery to the art interests of Los Angeles. Nine of them have been briefly described, and the remaining eight will receive a like consideration today. They are well worth our attention, be assured, for they rank high as examples of modern American painting. Twenty-one smaller pictures by Americans are also on view in the Exposition Park gallery, and a few of these will be discussed. Lest I weary the reader with a monotonous array of details I will seek for the pith in every picture, its raison d'etre.

Edward F. Rook, who was born in New York in 1870, and who studied art under Constant and Laurens in Paris, contributes a beautifully-con[illegible] outdoor study which he calls "Laurel," though behind the bank of pink blossoms that melt to lavender in shadow there lies a landscape [illegible] green and bright under a sky full of clouds. We also glimpse a quietly-flowing river. Foreground laurel and distant trees are well massed and the whole picture is very strong in construction.

Another attractive eastern landscape is Ernest Lawson's "Hudson River and Palisades," vibrant with light and air, though this artist has not the firm grip on solid substances that characterizes Mr. Rook. I do not feel quality in his distant palisades, though perhaps this is because he intended they should be dreamlike in their colorful beauty. Autumn sunlight falls on a foreground tennis court and gilds green grass and russet trees, weaving long, pale afternoon shadows. Mr. Lawson was born in California in 1873 and spent several years of study in France.

Still another fine landscape is "Woodland Solitude," by Edward W. Redfield, head of the group that has found Pennsylvania so excellent a sketching ground. Give Mr. Redfield a red barn and a steel-gray river, with a field sparsely strewn with snow, and he has all the elements he needs for the making of a great picture. Indeed, he uses them again and again. He sometimes gets the "feel" of winter atmosphere with a success that is little short of miraculous. The red barn is missing from "Winter Solitude," but the stream and the snow are there, the stream reflecting the brown trunks of trees, the snow pallidly yellow in sunlight, delicately blue in shadow. Mr. Redfield's fidelity to nature, the firmness of his grasp and the breadth of his expression have place him in the first rank of American landscape painters. He was born in Bridgeville, Del., in 1868, and studied under Bouguereau and Robert-Fleury.

Of the same "school" with Mr. Redfield is W. Elmer Schofield, born in Philadelphia in 1867, studied under Bouguereau, Ferrier, Doucet and Aman-Jean. Temperamentally these two artists have much in common. Both love to paint winter, though Mr. Schofield's penchant is not so marked as Mr. Redfield's. Both are masters of a free and ample technique, far removed from the meticulous. Mr. Schofield's present picture, "Waterfall," painted in tones of grayish-green relieved with the white of snow and the lavender of the shadows, is winter in epitome, and there is rush and roar in the falling waters. Here is bigness of effect, if you like—the bigness of the "exhibition picture." "Waterfall" could not have been painted successfully on a rice grain, nor could any of the other pictures I have spoken of, and neither could Colin Campbell Cooper's "Bowling Green," Hayley Lever's "Smeaton's Quay" and Leon Kroll's "Lower Manhattan," which is not saying that the tiny miniature might not have won a medal at the great exposition in San Francisco, as did each of the pictures I have just mentioned.

"Bowling Green" and "Lower Manhattan" are both, of course, graphic records of the multifarious life of modern New York. Mr. Cooper's studies, with pigments and with etching needle, of the deep canyons of Gotham's streets are no doubt familiar to my readers, for the artist has been faithful and signally successful with them for many years. In the canvas before us we have Bowling Green in winter, the skyscrapers rising red, yellow and white around it, the shadows of the "canyon" deeply purple. Instead of nature's clouds floating above this great canyon, we see the white steam and gray vapors of trade. Mr. Cooper, born in Philadelphia in 1856, studied at the Julian and Delacluse academies.

Leon Kroll's "Lower Manhattan" has even greater intensity of life than Mr. Cooper's "Bowling Green." The great arch of Brooklyn Bridge shows purple against a blue-gray winter sky. Through it we have the bewildering vista of Manhattan's buildings, all in pinks, purples, blues and many other "pastel" shades. The East River, coldly blue and with snow along its docks, seethes like a caldron with its hastening, tossing tugs and boats—a caldron whose contents are bursting into little puffs of white steam. It is all beautiful and exciting. The artist was born in New York in 1884, and studied with Laurens in Paris.

Hayley Lever has painted a great deal in and near St. Ives, on the Cornwall coast, and "Smeaton's Quay" is from there. His vigor of handling is so great that he is apt to make his neighbors on the wall look like the proverbial "thirty cents"—which is not saying that his neighbors are not as good as he, or sometimes even better, but that they are less assertive. Fortunately, in the present case, he has no near neighbor, being in a panel by himself. His color is pure and unmixed, giving life and sparkle to the blue waters of the bay around the quay, though there is a tendency to very white lights that approach the chalky. The same vitality is found in his rendering of the solid concrete of the quay, of the boats before it and of the picturesque headland above it. Mr. Lever was born in Adelaide, Australia, in 1876, and studied art in London, Paris and St. Ives.

Come we now to the smaller pictures, always keeping in mind that they are not the lesser in beauty and interest. Some of them, in truth, you may find more to your liking than the big ones. Childe Hassam, for instance, is represented by one of each kind, and I must confess that I prefer the smaller one, though if I were asked to explain why I might find myself entangled. I will state boldly, then, that I like "The West Indian Girl" for its fine decorative quality. It has the loveliness of a stained-glass window in arrangement and color. Head and bust of the dark-skinned girl are placed in profile against the pattern of an arbor in full fruitage. The purple of the grapes is seen in the high lights of her hair. Clad in a loose garment that has gules and spots of rich color, she carries carefully in her uplifted hands, for your delectation and mine (and someone else's, no doubt,) a plate heaped high with luscious peaches. It is all very rich and rare.

A brilliant bit of technique is "Isabel," by Charles Bittinger, who was born in Washington, D. C., in 1879, and who studied at the Ecole des Beaux Arts and the Delacluse and Colorossi academies. Painting and arrangement are palpably—perhaps too palpably—clever. A red-haired woman in a sweeping yellow satin gown sits with a white-robed child in the center of a room carpeted in gray-blue velvet. There are no accessories except a blue-and-white vase near the wall, a vase rather too conscientiously painted. The background, wonderfully well done, is a piece of Japanese tapestry embroidered in gold. Presumably the picture is a portrait of the little girl, for every stroke of Mr. Bittinger's knowing brush points in her direction.

We always find poetry in the landscapes of John F. Carlson, who was born in Sweden in 1857, and who therefore, naturally enough, paints winter scenes of extraordinary beauty and feeling. "Silvered Acres" is one of these. Slim, bare birches are holding a few yellow leaves away from the eager clutch of the cold. In the distance a barn and hills show pinkish in the silver of the snow. Here is an artist with a vision, and he delivers his message with no effort to startle you, or to steal away your judgment.

Willard L. Metcalf, too, is true to nature and to himself, and to the high requirements of art. A landscape painter who has won many medals and honors, he seems to let no ill-considered canvas leave his easel. Even so, however, I feel inclined to quarrel with him for his sky in "October Afternoon." It appears too coldly green to me, too purely "decorative." But the rest of the picture is very fine—trees dressed in the red and gold glory of New England's autumn, every leaf a-quiver in light and air. The purple of his foreground brushwood is in perfect harmony with the green of the bushes. Mr. Metcalf was born in Lowell, Mass., in 1858. He studied with George L. Brown in Boston, and with Boulanger and Lefebvre in Paris.

A characteristic marine by Paul Dougherty is "Changing Weather," a rocky seacoast under a sky gray with scudding clouds. A hurrying surf breaks in foam over the rocks, and the restless sea, depressed by the wind, shows a film of gray. A mist, felt rather than seen, hovers over the wide expanse of water. The treatment is direct and simple, for Mr. Dougherty knows his subject and has no need to fumble. Dignity and power, elemental bigness, are found in "Changing Weather." The artist, born in Brooklyn in 1877, studied art in many places, Paris, London, Florence, Venice and Munich.

The other sixteen pictures in this notable collection will be considered next week.

News and Notes.

Six figure studies by Frederick Bosley, instructor of painting in the Boston Museum, are being exhibited in the Kanst gallery, where they will remain to August 5. These pictures were recently shown in a gallery in Pasadena, on which occasion I gave a full account of them. They are strong in drawing, and show imaginative power.

Helena Dunlap is sketching at Taos, and declares herself delighted with the picturesque village and its mud houses. She is thinking seriously of staying there. Other well-known painters now in Taos are Doris Rosenthal, Irving Couse, J. H. Sharp and Ernest Blumenschein.

Douglas Donaldson's beautiful chalice, with its bird motif, is to be used as a perpetual trophy for choral societies. The artist is now working on a fruit dish which is to be presented to J. H. Francis by the school teachers of Los Angeles on his departure for Columbus. The silver bowl of the dish will be symbolical of Southern California, some of our fruits being used for the motif.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph H. Johonnat will come south next fall to make their home in Pasadena. They are great leaders in the applied arts, so their coming will mean much for Southern California.

Edward Henry Weston of Tropico, one of the most famous of the pictorial photographers of the world, demonstrated before the convention of the Photographers' Association of America at Cleveland, O., on Tuesday, July 25, and Wednesday, July 26.

J. Duncan Gleason is spending a week or two at Forest Home, sketching the mountains back of Redlands.

EDUCATORS, SCIENTISTS.

Alvin S. Johnson, who returns to Stanford University as a professor of political economy, was head of the Stanford economics department in 1911 and 1912. Since then he has been on the Cornell faculty. He has published several notable volumes.

Joseph Carter Rose, associate in botany, United States National Museum, has returned from an extensive botanical exploration in Brazil and Argentina. Dr. Rose, who is making an exhaustive study of the cactaceae of North and South America for the Carnegie Institution of Washington, was engaged chiefly in collecting these plants. A trip was made also to the top of Mt. Itatiaya, the highest mountain in Brazil. Besides the field work, all the great museums and botanical gardens of the East Coast of South America were visited. Large collections of living plants were brought back, while an extensive series of herbarium and formalin specimens has been deposited in the herbarium of the United States National Museum.

George Washington Kirchwey, the newly-elected president of the American Peace Society, was until recently Kent professor of law at Columbia University. His interest in both penology and pacific methods of settling national disputes has been long and keen, and his service for the American Institute of Criminal Law and Criminology and the New York State Society of the same name caused him to be called in to advise and act during the recent controversy over the administration of Sing Sing. Curiously enough, Prof. Kirchwey was prominent in the 1912 Presidential campaign as a definer of the platform of the Progressive party and as a champion of the candidacy of Mr. Roosevelt.

Proceedings before the Cambridge (Eng.) army exemption tribunal disclosed the fact that of six teachers of economics at Cambridge before the war, five are in the army. Prof. Pigou, the only one left, has no objection to serving, too, but the university argued through its spokesman, Dr. Clapham, it was in the national interest that the professor continue teaching and writing rather than become a "fifth-rate soldier." Furthermore, the Board of Trade has asked for his services.

Thomas F. Holgate has been chosen president ad interim of Northwestern University. He is dean of the College of Liberal Arts. Mr. Holgate will assume his duties immediately as temporary successor of Abram W. Harris, who recently tendered his resignation as president of Northwestern to become secretary of the national board of education of the Methodist Church.

Dr. Lucy Langdon Williams Wilson, wife of Dr. William Powell Wilson, director of the Philadelphia Commercial Museum, has left Philadelphia for a second expedition in the land of the ancient Pueblo Indians of New Mexico, where she will spend the summer excavating the rooms of long-forgotten communal houses for relics of the extinct tribes that once inhabited them. Mrs. Wilson is known throughout the world as an explorer. Her first work of prominence was in Yucatan, where she unearthed many relics in the half-buried temples of the ancient Indians. She also has visited virtually every ancient city in Mexico and has studied most of the diggings in Egypt and Babylon. In addition she has traveled extensively in other lands, especially in Palestine, where she made a study of the Zionist colonies.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

There, Brother Wilson, don't kick,
They have broken you up, we know,
And the words they speak
Make you rage, and seek
To land a body blow;
They are after you with Hughes's big stick,
But, there, Brother Wilson, don't kick,
Don't kick!

There, Brother Wilson, don't fume,
'Though the future looks mighty blue,
And the day, we fear,
Is a whole lot near
When they'll do things to you.
We know you are quite immersed in gloom,
But, there, Brother Wilson, don't fume,
Don't fume.

There, Brother Wilson, don't fret,
They have cornered you, we're aware,
And the folks who vote
Are after your goat—
To put you out for fair;
They'll get your nanny, is one safe bet,
But, there, Brother Wilson, don't fret,
Don't fret.

There was gossip around the club that the Old Resident had bought an airship and was practicing on flights between Hollywood and Montecito. It was known that the old sport was a high flyer, but it was not thought that he would attain the heights indicated by the story.

It proved, indeed, to be a hot-air ship.

The old man had decided to build a new henhouse out of dressed lumber and had gone downtown to buy a plane. The neighbor who heard it got this mixed up with "biplane," and hence the scandal started.

That settled it.

MEN AND EVENTS.

Merritt B. Holley of Travers City, Mich., has a collection of every known flag of the world. He has 135 foreign flags, and for thirty-one years has corresponded with persons in nintey-five countries, although he has never left American soil. There are thirty-eight flags in the collection which are significant in American history.

Robert Guggenheim, New York millionaire and copper magnate, is also a fancier of fine rabbits, and has a pen of twenty-six varieties, some worth as much as $100 each, which have won a wide variety of prizes at displays all over the United States.

Alfred R. Quaiffe, vault clerk of the United States Treasury, Washington, D. C., has handled $25,000,000,000 in his fifty years of service.

Dr. N. P. Crooks, a ship surgeon employed by the Pacific-Japan Steamship Company, has crossed the Pacific Ocean 123 times, covering in that time more than 1,000,000 miles.

Clinton Cyester in twenty-five years has traveled nearly 1,000,000 miles on Dayton (O.) street railway lines. He is a motorman.

Charles Brown, a New Rome (Wis.) farmer, has taken a contract with the United States Department of Biology to furnish that organization with 200 crows. An effort will be made to determine which kind of crows are destructive.

SAN FRANCISCO'S CUP OF BITTERNESS

The Feeling of Gloom Resultant from the Bomb Horror; and the Fight Between Thornwall Mullaly and Rudolph Spreckels.

BY JEANNE REDMAN.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, July 25.—San Francisco is inflamed over the bomb outrage. She is harboring a traitor, and will not stop until she has found and punished him. It was a hard blow to the ideals and intentions of the people of this city to find that their demonstration of patriotism had to be interrupted by a cold-blooded crime committed obviously as an insult to this very patriotism.

There seems to be a canker at the heart of things in San Francisco. There hangs over the city today a sense of sinister gloom, dread and foreboding. There is an evil spirit hovering over these lovely hills by the water, and we feel a great depression which comes from the sense of fighting the phantom of a wicked fate. Other cities may have their preparedness parades without disaster, but San Francisco superstitiously fears that she may never attempt to fly her ideals high without their being battered and rent by contrary winds.

You remember the course of events. The day of the 22nd was bright and clear, and hearts were high as the parade started up Market street from the ferry. With the fine vitality for which the city is famous, the old men of the G.A.R. with their children and grandchildren proudly carried their flags to the martial music of America only. Emotion was strong and the crowds cheered wildly as the parade came on. Suddenly there was the sound of an explosion, the sidewalk appeared to career straight up in the air, there were cries from the injured, a cloud of dust and smoke, and all was over, save the work of the nurses of St. Mary's Hospital who were on the spot and who cared for the injured until they were taken to the Central Emergency Hospital, where six of them breathed their last.

A ghastly horror, but the parade moved on. With shattered nerves, trembling in every muscle, the marchers, those of them who were not wounded, started again, and bravely faced the possibility of another such demonstration of violence before they reached their goal. It was but a few seconds before the news spread, and the crowds were infuriated to the point of madness. Had the assassins been found then they never would have come to trial. With the outrage and the disappointment hot in the minds of the people, there would have been no mercy for the criminals.

The Mayor has offered a reward of $5000 for information leading to the capture of the murderers. "If the city won't pay it I will," he cries, but there is to be no question about the willingness of the city to pay for it. An immense mass meeting of citizens was held Wednesday evening at the Exposition Auditorium to give expression to the sentiment of the better part of the community on the outrage. There can be no doubt that the people of the city will do the utmost in their power to find and punish the criminals, but that does not drive away the feeling of defeat which the crime caused to be felt by those who had planned for a great day of patriotic feeling and demonstration. There will always be the shame of a city which feels herself doomed to disaster, and the dread of efforts for ideals, even while she is under the spell of a force and determination to live cleanly and happily, against, apparently, tremendous odds.

There have been several private offers of money from individuals, members of whose families were killed or injured in the explosion, including that of $1000 by the former City Clerk of Alameda, Ben F. Lamborn, whose brother was among the killed. Mr. Lamborn demanded that there be called as witnesses in the investigation Emma Goldman, foremost of American anarchists; William McDevitt, prominent as a local radical; Rudolph Spreckels, who presided at an anti-preparedness mass meeting last week, and Fremont Older, editor of the anarchistic Bulletin.

The threatening letters which had been received by the members of the press caused alarm in the police department, and Chief White was already on a search when the bomb was thrown. There are many conflicting theories, and many persons claim to have seen conflicting sights. One man saw the bomb thrown from the top of a near-by building and a woman claims to have seen a man walking on top of that very building, but that is as far as that clew goes. The news from Chicago police stating that they believe the plot to have been hatched there, is causing great excitement and interest; but the theory which has set San Francisco on fire is the charge of Thornwall Mullaly against Rudolph Spreckels, holding Spreckels responsible. Both men are popular among the foremost citizens of the city, and the people are divided in their opinion; one-half for Mullaly and the other for Spreckels. There threatens to arise the sort of feud which held in the days when the gallant Calhoun divided the society of San Francisco into two sets, those who were for him and the United Railroads, and those who were not. The fight between Mullaly and Spreckels is in the papers, and is threatening to absorb all the other plots and charges.

Up to the present about $8000 in rewards has been offered, and more is expected by the city from the State. All this is cool comfort, however, and nothing but the catching and punishing of the criminals will satisfy the mad longing for revenge which is firmly lodged in the hearts and minds of every San Franciscan. There can be no consolation for the shock and sorrow to those who have suffered the personal loss.

San Francisco is gasping with horror today to learn that the latest arrests in connection with Saturday's bomb outrage are all members of a labor-union dynamite squad whose presence here has been known to the police ever since The Times horror, but whose members have been petted and coddled by the police and whose crimes have been condoned by police judges for political reasons.

Sheriff Tom Finn, the fat Progressive boss, has lost three valuable lieutenants, they are locked up and not likely to be released until death intervenes; Fremont Older and his Bulletin have lost subscribers; Rudolph Spreckels has lost two directors in his First National Bank and enough deposits to wreck a weaker financial institution, and Thornwell Mullally, through energetic action and patriotic utterances, has lost most of the odium that was heaped on him by Spreckels and the Bulletin during the former graft prosecutions.

Police activities did not actually quicken until it became known yesterday morning that private detectives were collecting evidence against Billings, Nolan and Ryan and they were about to demand the arrest of these unionites and claim the reward. In fact both the police and the newspapers had been trying to center public attention on a group of foreigners who were denounced as anarchists. But San Francisco learns tonight with a shudder that the theory now generally accepted is that the bomb was made in the brothel of Mrs. Belle Lavin at No. 2410 Mission street, the notorious resort from which Schmidt, sentenced to life imprisonment for complicity in The Times outrage, was dragged.

The police know that men have been murdered there, dynamite plots hatched and bombs made there, that the place reeks with blood and crime, but it has been permitted to run for five years, protected by the police for political reasons.

Warren K. Billings, Thomas J. Ryan and Edward Nolan, the three alleged bomb conspirators now under arrest, all belonged to the notorious San Francisco Labor Council. Billings has served time as a dynamiter, Ryan is the head of the picket squad of the Waiters' Union, and Nolan is a walking delegate of the Machinists' Union. He returned here but recently from the international conference of that union, to which he was a delegate. Acids and bomb material were found in Nolan's room, while from that of Billings were taken a can full of slugs and bullet ends of the same make and caliber of those found in the victims of Saturday's explosion.

Rudolph Spreckels and his bank have gained unenviable advertising here through, a row over a contribution of $10,000 to the law and order fund raised by the Chamber of Commerce. Spreckels was away when the contribution was made. When he learned of it last week he called a meeting of the directors and demanded that it be cancelled. The result was a squabble that occasioned the resignation of one director, the retirement of another, and a general upheaval in banking circles. Resolute thousands have pledged themselves to aid a committee of 100 appointed by the Chamber of Commerce to "assisting the police in cleaning up San Francisco." Present indications are that the cleaning up process will be made to include the police and rightly named "Inferior" Courts and the notorious Labor Council.

Tales of the old days of the Vigilantes are repeated by lips that are not accustomed to engage in idle gossip. An exodus of undesirable characters has already commenced.

BITS OF VERSE.

The Plea of Time.

I take the broken memories of grief
And soothe them into deep forgetfulness;
I bring to him who dreams a sure relief
In dream fulfilled, or that as sweet no less,
The peace of heart resigned. So cry me not
To stay, nor grieve that with the years I bring
To every heart what life and love allot,
That in each heart the winter follows spring;
For all the happiess I take away
I give in turn a welcome meed of joy;
Though ne'er again returns the happy day,
So goes the one of bitter-sweet alloy.
Condemn me not, remember that I, too,
Am ruled by that same God who rules o'er you.
—[Arthur Wallace Peach, in Boston Transcript.

The Little House.

And I said to myself, I will build a house
The day my Love comes by,
And there shall be much of a river wind, and much of the open sky;
With a singing bird to wake us, and a great rose red high:

A great rose red and high and near,
And shaken by the bees;
Close in the shadow of gold-green vines and a depth of green-gold trees;
And night will bring a cool of dreams like rain upon the breeze.

There will be gift of laughter given
When the sun is brave in the blue;
And there will be gift of quiet, come with the dusk and the dew;
Till the wonder of each shining hour will soak us through and through.

O little house of river winds,
O house so hid and neat,
The white long road that leads to you is cruel to weary feet,
Yet—with my Love for company—even the dust treads sweet.
—[Maxwell Struthers Burt, in Contemporary Verse.

Wonderment.

As some child perched upon a hillock smiles
In wonderment beside the summer sea,
So I upon my spirit hillock smile
As vagrant fancies wander here to me;
I, too, look out upon a boundless main,
The sea of life, whose rythmic ebb and flow
Sings to me here, at times too sweetly sings,
Then comes a wailing chord of unspent woe.

The blue, the blue, the spirit's wonder hue,
That back reflects the soft-tone azure sky,
The hue to longest hold our childish hearts,
And keep us asking the All Father why;
So like the child, why, God, is't thus and so,
What means the song that ever comes to me,
Now so trimphant, now so like a dirge,
From out that boundless tide, humanity?

At times the tempests lash it into green,
The calm but follows in a deeper blue;
Here on my hillock do I wonder still,
And, finite, try so hard to think it through:
If, at the last, my questioning at rest,
I shall have caught his tenderness in song
I shall be glad I shared the wonderment
Of love and work and play and tears and wrong.

THE RELIGIOUS RAMBLER.

Mexican Missionaries Out, Their Work Still Continuing—Natives Keep Schools and Churches Going as Usual, Though American Leaders Gone—Plan Great Mexican University—Agricultural Schools, Too, on Programme for After-the-War Rejuvenation.

TWO years ago there were about 250 American missionaries in Mexico; there are not over a dozen there now. Their work, nevertheless, is going on almost as usual, while they themselves are busily planning for great advances as soon as conditions become more assured. They are trying to arouse the American church to the fact that Mexico's fundamental need is for education and religion, whatever may be the course of political events.

Inquiry at missionary headquarters concerning the status of religious work in Mexico has developed several interesting facts. One is that all factions—Carranzistas, Villistas, Zapatistas and the lesser groups—are of one mind in approving and protecting American mission work and mission property. Amid the turbulence and overturnings of the past five years, with all the consequent destruction of property, the missions have suffered almost no injury whatever.

In the South there is one Presbyterian mission which has been on the route of the armies, yet, as the secretary expressed it, "Even the Zapatistas have not so much as taken a bit of fruit from the trees." A Methodist mission building was in a block where all the other properties were wrecked by mobs, but they passed it by. Carranza himself gave a safe conduct and free transportation for the removal of the effects of one mission through a disturbed region. No missionary has suffered insult, and mission work has been protected.

"RELIGION AS USUAL."

It was a surprise to learn that the work of all the missions is going on pretty much as usual, despite the absence of the missionaries. One Congregational service, of which I heard directly, averages an attendance of over 100 persons, which is almost its strength in times of peace. The mission schools are in operation, with only slightly-diminished enrollment.

All this argues for the success of the missions in the past, in building up a self-directing motive force of workers. The Mexican evangelists and teachers have proved themselves in this emergency. The work is clearly on a permanent basis.

HELPING FUNDAMENTALLY.

The presence of American missionaries north of the Rio Grânde is having the effect of increasing the interest of the churches in the basic problem of assisting the Mexican people to achieve a higher type of life for themselves. The all-American missionary conference in Panama last spring has assumed a large place in the present thinking of America's religious leaders. It massed the religious problems of our Latin-American neighbors in a way that is without precedent. As a consequence, many church people are reading the news from Mexico in terms of religious need. At bottom, Mexico requires a better type of citizenship, or, in other terms, an intelligent Christian civilization.

Already the American churches are in a comity agreement for mission work in Mexico. The territory has been apportioned among the denominations, so that there shall be no conflict or competition. A unified programme for missions in Mexico is already an accomplished fact.

A UNIVERSITY AND AGRICULTURAL SCHOOLS.

The refugee missionaries, who have come out of Mexico reluctantly, at the behest of the American government, are working for the consummation of one of their great dreams, to which many or most of the boards have given their assent—the creation of one great central Christian university, to be the capstone of the system of education maintained by the missions. Universities of this sort exist, or are now in propect, for most of the major mission fields. The Mexican missionaries say that now, more than ever before, such an institution is needed, and they count on the present real interest on the part of Americans to help them realize their dream. Not intervention, but education, say they, is America's duty to the neighbor on the south.

A special phase of Mexico's educational needs is also being pressed by some missionaries just now. This is the call for agricultural schools. I know of at least one case where an effort is being made to have the students and alumni and friends of one State agricultural sollege in this country provide a school in connection with a mission in Mexico. The Mexican peon must be taught how to farm.

The missionaries also plan a national home newspaper for Mexico, somewhat after the fashion of The Youth's Companion.

ANARCHY TALK IS CALUMNY.

A veteran missionary, who has come out of Mexico within recent weeks, and will return within a month, told me that the progress of education under the Mexican States, even at the present time, is beyond anything that America imagines. Schools are under way as usual. He attended a teachers' convention in Sonora just before leaving. The total expenditure for public education in Mexico averages $2 per capita. The schools are rapidly improving, for Mexico herself has determined to have an educated citizenship.

This same veteran, who, like the other missionaries, is strongly opposed to intervention by America, declared that "It is calumny to talk about a state of anrchy in all Mexico." He says tht even when a city is captured by an opposing army, it has a stable government within twenty-four hours. A successful Sundey-school convention has been held within recent months. The Mexican converts are all confident of their country's future, and under Mexican rule. One aspect of the present situation worthy of note is that the mission work of American churches in Mexico has given the country n influential company of sympathetic friends scattered all over America.

THE UNCHLOROFORMED.

Robert Dodenhoff of Freidburg-on-the-Elbe, oldest rifleman of Germany, has just celebrated his one hundred and fourth birthday. He received a letter and a gold watch from the Kaiser. Until two years ago he regularly took part in target practice.

Robert K. Brazer, age 88, of Norway, Me., is the last surviving delegate of those who attended the first Republican convention held in Maine, in 1854, at Paris Hill. He lives alone, doing his own work and attending to his business as a shoemaker, which trade he has followed for the last seventy years.

Mrs. Lucy Miller of Franklin county, Ga., 71 years old, never saw a railroad train till last week, when her son took her on a motor trip to Toccoa. She said she always supposed the train ran in a groove and not on steel tracks.

Gen. John R. Brooke of Lenox, Mass., celebrated his seventy-eighth anniversary last week by playing nine holes of golf at the Country Club of Pittsfield, having a card of 60, against William C. Humstone of Brooklyn. Gen. Brooke later was a contestant in a putting match and he and Mrs. Brooke attended the dance in the evening at the hotel.

THE HELPING HAND.

"How far that little candle throws his beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughty world."

A home for white crippled female children is provided for in the will of Margaret H. W. Watson, widow of David T. Watson, a famous international lawyer. The will, after providing for bequests totalling $100,000 to friends, relatives and servants, gives the estate, valued at $2,500,000, and including a half million dollar art collection to maintain the home, named after Mr. Watson, to be established at his late country residence, "Sunny Hill," near Leetsdale, Pa. Useful trades and a "common sense education" for those who are taken into the home are specific instructions in the will.

The National Board of the Young Women's Christian Association of the United States and the Teachers' College of New York City each receive $500,000, and the Young Women's Christian Association of New York City $200,000 by the will of Miss Grace Hoadley Dodge, who recently died in New York.

Sergeant Albert J. Smith of the police force of Pottsville, Pa., was the man for the occasion the other day when he killed a ten-foot python that crawled from the porch of a house. The snake was crawling toward a number of little girls at play when Sergt. Smith saw it. He pulled off a fence paling and dealt the big reptile a death blow on the head. The python escaped from a carnival show and is believed to have become emboldened by hunger.

To aid in the control of the epidemic of infantile paralysis that has been particularly deadly in New York and vicinity, and has made its appearance elsewhere, the Rockefeller Foundation recently donated $50,000.

The directors of the Mount Sinai Hospital, at Fifth avenue and One Hundredth street, New York, have announced that the five sons of the late Mr. and Mrs. Meyer Guggenheim have presented to the hospital an additional $165,000 for the erection of a large building as a memorial to their father and mother.

This sum supplements gifts of more than $500,000 by the Messrs. Guggenheim during the last year for the erection of a large pavilion for patients on the property south of the main hospital building, running from Ninety-ninth to One Hundredth street, facing on Fifth avenue.

The original building was to have consisted of eighty-eight rooms, but the demand for more rooms was so insistent that the directors notified the Messrs. Guggenheim and the additional amount was given. The revised plans will call for a building seven stories high, with the main entrance from Fifth avenue. There will be 122 rooms in the pavilion, making it the largest of its kind in New York. A feature will be balconies on the Fifth avenue side, overlooking Central Park. Each floor will have seven of these balconies.

Dr. J. William White, eminent surgeon and trustee of the University of Pennsylvania, left the bulk of his estate to continue the work of healing, to which he gave the greater part of his life. The bequests total more than $400,000. The largest of these is a gift of $150,000 to endow the "J. William White professorship of surgical research," in the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania. Indirectly, the University shares in still larger [illegible] from the residuary estate, [illegible] which is to go to the University of Pennsylvania for maintenance of beds in a special ward for [illegible] tion of physical education and athletics at the university. The sum of $5000 is left in trust, the income to be expended by Dr. Josiah C. McCracken for the use of the [illegible] connected with the University Medical School at Canton, O.

Frederick Dietz, for twenty [illegible] president of the R. E. Dietz Company of New York, manufacturers of lamps and lanterns, left many bequests to employees, friends and business associates. Under his will the following bequests to employees were made: $5000 to [illegible] Salmon, manager of the [illegible] factory; $5000 each to [illegible] Betts and Ernest E. Everett, employed in New York factory; [illegible] each to twenty-four, $400 [illegible] eighteen, $300 to twenty-five [illegible] to eighty-six and $25 each [illegible] employees, the bequests being according to term of service.

He gave $20,000 in trust to [illegible] Rev. Antonio Mangano of [illegible] Hill; $1000 to Allen Schiller, "a little orphan boy at the Sisters' [illegible] Hempstead, L. I.;" $1000 to [illegible] each to a number of friends and employees, and $5000 to Mrs. [illegible] Pollock.

JUDGE HUGHES'S FRIEND

Sense of Duty Superior to Any Personal Obligation.

[Chicago Herald:] As an evidence of Justice Hughes's [illegible] regard not only of the [illegible] of politicians, but also of the obligations of personal friendship, supporters of the justice are telling the following story:

When Mr. Hughes was making his campaign for the New York Governorship one of his constant companions was Job Hedges, the New York City Republican [illegible]. They traveled together and [illegible] slept together. No two men [illegible] have been in closer companionship for weeks.

After the election Hedges went to Hughes and said:

"Governor, there are some [illegible] who will sneak in at the back [illegible] or up the rear stairs and [illegible] that they might be induced to [illegible] such and such a job. I'd like a [illegible] on the utilities commission."

"Hedges," said the Governor, "you would be a superb man for the place. There is no man in the [illegible] better qualified than you. If the whole commission averages to [illegible] 50 per cent. of your ability it will be a splendid body. But I cannot appoint you."

"Why?" asked Hedges.

"Because," said Hughes, "you are my personal friend."

"Well," retorted Hedges, "I'll relieve you of that embarrassment right now."

At which he took his hat and his departure.

And the embarrassment has never been renewed.

AVALANCHE OF TWINS.

A Bale of Cotton Held Responsible for Several Pairs.

[Commerce and Finance:] It has been a moot question for years as to the whyness of twins. All sorts of theories have been advanced by men of more or less scientific knowledge, but so far as known cotton never was held to be particeps criminis until Mr. Lumpkin wrote the following which has been dug out of the archives of a southern railroad:

CHESTER, S. C., ..., 1912.

Dear Sir: The day that I received this cotton from the C. & L. road my wife had twins, and in the [illegible] sightment and blustering around this bale got into another lot of cotton marked Asha, and that night my watchman's wife had twins, and the next morning [illegible] billing clerk's wife had one—only [illegible] and all of our mothers-in-law [illegible] among us, and when we got [illegible] working with the children, I [illegible] not find this bale of cotton [illegible] my life. I do hope we are not [illegible] ing to have another storm of children any more during cotton season. Tell Mr. Wooley not to be hard on us—boath of my children was [illegible] and I am afraid I am going to have a hard time supporting them. [illegible] him to take the bale; the price [illegible] go up in a few days and he [illegible] make money on it, but if he don't want his wife to have twins don't [illegible] send the bale back this way [illegible] more. Yours, &c.,

BILL'S BACHELOR LETTER.

Dear Claude:
In Boston, it appears, the artist trade is slack,
To little old Los Angeles you'll soon be hiking back.
At least to that conclusion your long letter seems to point—
You miss the old Bohemian life in this more genial joint;
You'd like to sell some sketches, too—at least that's what I gather,
Now, Claude, don't let indignant foam your Vandyke whiskers lather,
If in reply to what you ask I am compelled to say,
I fear too many artist chaps are headed now this way.
We've painters, poets, singers, actors, dramatists galore,
Our surplus native talent and picked remnants from the war,
Celebrities of world renown with whom we love to neighbor,
We're almost swamped in genius, but we've not enough skilled labor;
And so the highbrow market in a most infernal tangle is,
The talent of the world has got designs upon Los Angeles.
Don't think I've lost the social touch for these cold business ventures,
I'd rather help to drink your health than have to sell your pictures.
There's Artist Joe, you used to know; the critics couldn't speak
In high enough pitched praises of his pictures. Well, last week
He tried in vain—and think what pain his gentle soul must feel—
To trade a four-foot canvas for a cafeteria meal;
And Herr von Stein, that sculptor fine, is also busted flat,
He models sand beach pictures now for pennies in a hat.
To chaps like you the "movies," too, some "super" jobs are giving
But, oh! that a Bohemian soul should stoop to earn a living!
And then Progressive politics bring chances light and breezy
To fellows with fastidious tastes who want to take life easy.
For when financial troubles press they offer ways to end 'em
With signatures at ten cents each for some fool referendum.
Now, Claude, were you a stevedore with surplus brawn and muscle,
And not averse, as things grow worse, with heavy toil to tussle,
Or thought it luck to wheel a truck (without a union collar)
At Port San Pedro you might catch the swift, elusive dollar.
But that might lead to clubs and bricks and hot encounters [illegible]
And I'm too fat for work like that and you are too artistic.
Yet all the same, before the labor situation cleared,
To be a special constable this chappie volunteered.
Now, Claude, old man, though this may seem a rather [illegible] letter,
I say, come West, and do your best your present luck to better.
There's fruit and wine and joys divine and bright days cool and sunny—
There's everything the soul could wish, though some are short of money.
And then a little goes so far and brings so much. At that,
Don't spend your last cent on the train and come here minus [illegible]
Such clumsy truths in Boston brains I know it's hard to drill;
But come—the glad hand waits you, from OLD CALIFORNIA BILL.

SOCIETY.

A DEBUTANTE'S LETTER

LOS ANGELES, July 28.

Marcella dearest: Although you are not exactly in seclusion on account of interesting coming events, but that you might find some of my babble interesting.

Did you know Admiral and Mrs. [illegible]? You know the dear admiral retires on the 29th, so everybody has been smothering them in attentions down at San Diego, where they are much beloved. The Hotel del Coronado simply outdid itself. A [illegible] dinner party on Wednesday with a radiant J. J. Hernan as host and society flutterful to the explosive point. A sumptuous dance Thursday night, which was ap[illegible] attended by the whole creme de la creme of the State—it would not be a retiring admiral with six beautiful, bountiful babies, who is paid the tribute of so sumptuous a parting sigh. It was a regular social tornado, fanned by the [illegible] of a gallant naval breeze. And a garden party on Friday, given by the Bogerts, was a delightful affair.

There really is just something about the navy and aviation that is [illegible] becoming to masculinity. Lillian Rand says that gilt buttons leave her cold, but Lillian has such wonderful self control! Personally, not anything in the navy or the aviation corps can wrap me in the tentacles of a soulful romance. And [illegible] such a beautiful, painless [illegible]—one doesn't expect them to [illegible] one forever, or anything irksome like that.

[illegible] Ross Butler's baby at Saticoy made the mistake of being a girl, but with true heroism mama and papa have decided to make the best of it. Lloyd flew into town on Wednesday and announced to a [illegible] grandpapa that baby's name is to be Mary Sheila Lloyd Butler, Sheila being Irish for Ida, and [illegible] being essential to sentiment and romance these days. Amen!

We managed to crowd in an ex[illegible] domino party at Del Mar to which such Los Angeles celebrities as Lillian Goldsmith, Helen Morgan, Miss Prendegast, et al., managed to [illegible]. Miss Prendegast, in a ravishing gypsy costume with piquant veil, told some fortunes de [illegible] which were radiantly convincing, and after an impressive visit to the Stratford open-air theater, where we all tried our histrionic powers, we returned to Stratford Inn for a [illegible] evening of dancing and merriment.

Isn't the stocking problem difficile, dearie? We were all bathing at [illegible] Pier one morning recently—you know what a rendezvous that is for smart bathing, and that [illegible] Rogers boy started making remarks about feminine stockings. Some of us wore them and some of us didn't. "What worries me," said he, "is that if the feet and legs that are exposed are so imperfect, what must those be that are shrouded in [illegible]?" That made us furious, as you can well guess—truly virtue is its own meager reward. But if he hoped to irritate us all into taking them off, he was disappointed. Those of us who could afford to remain scornful, and those of us who couldn't, were specializing masterly [illegible].

The theatrical rendezvous at Constance Crawley's every week is a highly interesting item on the social programme. She has made her dream house on West Adams and Orchard an artistic sort of salon where those celebrities who consider themselves as "arriven" do foregather with such self-satisfaction. The Herbert Standings are perhaps the chief attraction, papa an amazingly charming elderly gentleman of the old school, and still more amazingly proud of his six sons and two daughters, all making their mark in the world. One has to be pretty quick to remember which son is who, because Herbert insists upon alluding to "the fine work of my fourth son," "the genius of the second son," "the unquestioned ability of my fifth son," "you don't mean to say you never saw my third son in New York," "of course my eldest boy is in a class by himself"—and so on. As the evening wore on, we were all exponents of intelligent listening. He really is rather a darling. I could almost find it in my heart to yearn to be his second daughter. Constance Crawley is a distinct personality. When she isn't acting she is playwriting, with eminent success. She dresses in a style all her own, and has that comfortable way of assuming that sensible guests will entertain themselves, which is quite charming. Doesn't it fuss one to have a hostess everlastingly on one's trail, making sure that one is not being neglected?

Have you acquired the girdle epidemic yet? We must positively all be girdled. A chaste white gown of [illegible] simplicity and girdles galore seems to be the imperative mode of the moment. Some of us were born with waists and some of us acquire them through suffering and perseverance. But either way, they must be girdled. There is no limit to the possibilities of the subtle girdle. Girdled we stand, ungirdled we fall. With proper maneuvering, a girdle can be made to shoulder the whole responsibility of avoirdupois. Have you noticed it? It can also entirely surround a deficity of hips, enhance a nonexistent undulation of bosom. You know, W. L. George loves to liken landscapes to the gentle undulations of a woman's bosom, but these girdles can liken a flat chest to the gentle undulations of the Altadena foothills.

We are all so interested in Grace [illegible]'s engagement to the gentleman with the horny name. You know, he has a weakness for Central American revolutions and has taken part in several. He was in the thick of it at Venezuela, besides several others, and is never so happy as when there is a first-class rebellion on. They haven't seen each other for five years and Grace says it's all to the good. Absence makes the heart grow fonder. Whatever else he turns out to be, he is not likely to be a bore. Grace is a thoroughly delightful girl, as charming as she is good looking. Don't you admire that auburn-headed, fresh-complexioned type, especially when they are as merry and good-natured as our dear Grace. She ought to make a first-class queen of a turbulent Central American republic—we have always suspected [illegible] of yearning to be the king of one.

While such a lot of people are leaving town for their vacations, just as many are arriving. Pretty Mrs. Kate Vaughan Bury arrived on Friday from Del Mar, and vivacious Miss Gladys Marriott, who made such a hit at the naval ball last week, has come to town with mama, on a good time bent. Oh, the shopping she has been reveling in. She goes to Stanford University next year and mama is making a supreme effort to keep Gladys duly subdued and indifferent to social affairs. Ahem!

Well, cherie, we are all thinking about you, praying for you, loving you. What a proud and joyous mama you will be in September.

Your irrepressible

BETTY.

Long Beach Attracts.

Everyone is courting the Nereids, these midsummer days.

And beautiful Long Beach is attracting her share of those who come and go.

Wednesday Mrs. J. Kingsley Macomber entertained most informally the tennis set in the old English room of Hotel Virginia in honor of Mrs. Samuel Brown Thomas (Grace Mellus,) the fiancee of Charles C. Bull of New York and South America. Mrs. Thomas, Mrs. Harry Coburn Turner, Mrs. Henry S. McKee, Miss Louise G. Burke, Mrs. Jefferson P. Chandler, Mrs. Leo St. Clair Chandler, Mrs. Bri Kelly, Miss Elizabeth Richards of San Diego, Mrs. Roy Seeley, Mrs. Marshall Wellborn, Mrs. Charles Rivers Drake, Mrs. Hugh Stewart and Mrs. Green motored down to the beach in the morning, joining Mrs. Macomber and Mrs. Harry Pattee of Riverside, who is a popular summer guest of the hotel, and many enjoyed a "splash" in the surf while others played tennis. Following the luncheon, which was served at one oval table done in Tacoma vine nd cornflowers, auction bridge was played in the comfy solarium.

With the annual tournament (tennis) for the championship of Southern California in progress, the Virginia will be gayer than ever the present week, with no end of brilliant playing and pleasant sociability. Already there is an interesting group of people there from Southern California cities and from afar. Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Hellman are spending the summer under this inviting roof and their popular daughter, Mrs. Alvin Frank, finds a double incentive in running down for the day or week end.

Harry Pattee, the polo player, has his interesting wife and son, Burley, at the hotel, and they have guests from Riverside nearly every week. Mrs. Gordon B. Pattee, aristocratic little mother of the polo star, has lived each summer in Long Beach.

One of Mrs. Gordon Pattee's daughters married the Hon. Charles Berkeley Powell, ex-member of Parliament and a powerful Conservative, who has been a warm friend to the Duke of Connaught. The other daughter is the wife of the Hon. Sir John Carling, at one time Postmaster-General of Canada.

Mr. Pattee has been in Monterey with "the boys," but is coming back at the end of the week. Mrs. E. H. Daly came over from Riverside for today with Mrs. Pattee, Jr.

The hotel has always been known as the "home for children," but this year it seems to be more truly so than usual. There are the Kruttschnitt youngsters, including young "Ted," Jr., blond and fat, who importunes his old southern "Mammy" to carry him because he is "so fat and sweet," the son of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Herman Kruttschnitt, and his little cousin, Julius III, who is the image of his father, who has run up from Arizona to spend a few days with his family and is devoted to not only his son, but also to the two little daughters, Marie Louise and Barbara.

The pet of the hotel is young Francis Duenas, 12-year-old son of Senora Dona Duenas, who looks like a young Greek god in his bathing suit.

To Mrs. Frances Bebhart, the story teller, all the kiddies are devoted and during story-telling hour they congregate in a corner of the ballroom and listen with rapt attention to the tales she unfolds.

A very interesting group are the Atmans from Kansas City. Miss Marie is very vivacious and has a wonderful voice, which is occasionally heard in the drawing-room. Both she and her sister, Miss Annette, are devoted to ocean bathing and may be seen in the water nearly every day.

Miss Frankie Shepherd, the daughter of Mrs. B. F. Shepherd of Fresno, and Miss Eleanor Mitchell have been nicknamed the "Heavenly Twins." The days seem too short for all they desire to do. Bathing in the morning, motoring or matinee in the afternoon, dancing or doing the Pike—the day is over before they know it.

Mrs. Shepherd, the mother of the vivacious Frankie, is sustaining her reputation of being not only one of the most beautiful, but also one of the best-dressed women in California. She is especially attractive in a white crepe trimmed with iridescent beads, which she wore at a recent Saturday evening ball.

Senora Dona Duenas is another women to whom evening dress is especially becoming, particularly if it happens to be black. With her intense coloring she reminds one of the beautiful, vivid flowers of her country, Salvador.

From El Paso come the charming Stewart family, consisting of Mrs. Sewart and her three daughters, one of whom is a bride of not many months.

The De Ojedas of San Francisco, Mrs. Francisco de Ojeda and her two daughters, Misses Nadine and Ivonne, are in the same party as the Duenas, and in their bright sport clothes are a pleasing sight in the corridors, or in the swings or on the lawns. Recently they enjoyed an extended visit to Yosemite with a party of friends.

To be Gay for Them.

When Mrs. Albert Sherman Hoyt, social leader of Pasadena and Los Angeles, returned from New York City Monday, accompanied by her daughters, Misses Ruth and Blossom Hoyt, a charming eastern girl, Miss Myra Morgan of Washington, D. C., came with them for a visit of several weeks. Miss Morgan is, like the Misses Hoyt, a Dobbs Ferry girl, whose father is a celebrated physician of the national capital, and she will be made the motif for one continuation of courtesies.

Mrs. Lucretia R. Garfield of Buena Vista and Meridian streets, Pasadena, widow of the late President of the United States, has been entertaining her grand-daughter and grandson, Miss Lucretia and Stanton Garfield of Williamstown, Mass., the past three weeks, and since the arrival of the Hoyts the young people have been almost constantly in company, with informal dinners at the Hoyts or some other of Pasadena's beautiful homes almost every night. Miss Lucretia Garfield is just graduated from Bryn Mawr, while her brother is a senior at Williams College, where his father, Dr. Harry A. Garfield, son of the martyred executive, is president.

Dr. Garfield is also in the city with his son and daughter. Much to the regret of all the younger set, they are to return to their eastern home Tuesday. Capt. and Mrs. Rudolph, the latter Mrs. Garfield's daughter, are, of course, an important part of the Pasadena Garfield household.

Some additional guests are to arrive from the East shortly to visit in the Hoyt home during the coming weeks. The swimming pool, tennis courts and spacious grounds offer a magnet for any manner of entertainments, and Mrs. Hoyt is at her best when dispensing gracious hospitality, especially for the debutant and college set.

For Dr. Garfield.

Typical of California was the luncheon given by Dr. Walter Lindley at the Los Angeles Country Club Friday, honoring Dr. Harry A. Garfield, president of Williams College, Williamstown, Mass., for the guests were seated out of doors, where a broad vista of the valley, the Beverly Hills and the mountains delighted the company and pleased none more than the guest of honor. At table were Dr. Garfield, Rt. Rev. Joseph H. Johnson, Dr. George F. Bovard, Rev. Robert B. Gooden, Gen. M. H. Sherman, Dr. E. J. Cook, Harry Chandler, Dr. M. L. Moore, Lee Allen Phillips, W. D. Woolwine, Guy Barham, Dr. John R. Haynes, E. P. Clark, Harley Brundage, Dr. West Hughes, Hon. J. W. McKinley, Henry W. O'Melveny, Dr. Norman Bridge, Edward Laurence Doheny, M. F. Ihmsen, William May Garland, Dr. George L. Cole, S. F. Bothwell, John J. Byrne, Reginald Johnson and the genial host.

The speakers were Dr. Garfield and Bishop Johnson.

Historic Williams College was founded at Williamstown, at the foot of the highest of the Berkshire Mountains, in 1755, by a fund left by Ephraim Williams.

President Garfield's father, the martyred President, was a graduate of the splendid institution. Bishop Johnson and his son, Reginald, the Pasadena architect, are alumni of Williams, and many of America's greatest citizens graduated from the grand old college.

MacMonnies Entertained.

While Chevalier Frederick MacMonnies of the Legion of Honor and his charming wife, formerly Alice Jones, came to California from their Paris home to quietly visit the latter's mother, Mrs. John Percival Jones, and members of the family, and desired no formal entertaining in their honor, they find it quite impossible to resist many invitations to such pleasurable events as that they enjoyed the past week when Mrs. Hugh Livingston Macneil motored with them out to her ranch home with a party of friends, or an affair held most informally at Bolsa Chica for their pleasure. Outdoors in Southern California at this time of the year is compelling. The brightly vivid flower gardens, the blossoming hedges and wide-spreading oaks festooned in roses and honeysuckle offer such an exquisite setting for summer fashions that one inately feels a sense of gratitude in being asked to such a social happening.

At Midwick Country Club Wednesday evening Mr. and Mrs. Godfrey Holterhoff, Jr., complimented the noted sculptor and Mrs. MacMonnies with a smart dinner, to which were bidden Mrs. John Percival Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Robert D. Farquhar, Mrs. Frederick Reynolds, who, en route from her former home in Honolulu to the East, stopped for a fortnight's visit with her mother, Mrs. Emeline H. Childs; Mr. and Mrs. Frank S. Hicks, Mr. and Mrs. Lucien N. Brunswig, Dr. and Mrs. William A. Edwards, Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. O'Melveny, Mr. and Mrs. William May Garland, Mrs. Dan McFarland, Mrs. Jaro von Schmidt, Mr. and Mrs. James Calhoun Drake, Mrs. Mary Wilcox Longstreet, Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. McKee, Mr. and Mrs. Allan C. Balch, Miss Holterhoff and Alfred Wilcox.

Later Miss Leila Holterhoff, whose peculiar pensive charm endears her in singular fashion to her hearers, presented a series of artistically selected numbers. Her rendering of the Jewel Song from "Faust" and the brilliant aria from Charpentier's "Louise" were given with that well-rounded style that is hers, and her work was fascinating to a high degree in those wistful bits like "The Fairy Pipers," by Brewer; "Romance," Debussy; Grieg selections, Harriet Ware's "The Boat Song," etc. She also gave Gounod's famed Serenade and Richard Strauss's "Zueignung" among her other numbers.

This sweet California songbird has a career marked out that is considered enviable for one so young. This winter she will appear throughout the East in concert, having a flattering contract. But for the war her tour would undoubtedly have included European presentations.

Mr. MacMonnies is not sure that he will attend the San Francisco Bohemian Club's annual jinks on the Russian River in August, though they will return to New York at the end of the month. They will stay at Santa Monica with Mrs. Jones, motoring to Santa Barbara again (they were north for a few days last week,) and then go to San Francisco on their way East.

Any inclination for entertaining, even for these celebrated and much-loved visitors, has been checked by the cloud which has saddened all Los Angeles in the death of Mrs. William E. Ramsay Thursday.

To Meet a Londoner.

The palatial home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Laurence Doheny in Chester place was the scene Wednesday evening of a brilliant dinner, followed by a "movie" show and exhibition dancing, the event honoring Andrew Wier of London, Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree and daughter, Miss Iris Tree; Mrs. Hugh Livingston Macneil, Dr. and Mrs. Bertnard Smith, Dr. and Mrs. Norman Bridge, W. A. McClelland of London, an associate of Mr. Wier; Mr. and Mrs. Mark Requa of Oakland, Mrs. Herbert G. Wylie, Capt. and Mrs. Randolph Huntington Miner and one or two others.

Down the entire length of the glistening board were exquisite Tipperary roses and billowy pink tulle.

Miss Agnes Faulkner, the well-known danseuse, captivated all with her interpretations of esthetic dances, and a comic film and a view of one of the host's own private holdings completed the evening's pleasures.

A unique dinner dance was given by James T. Currie of London at the Beverly Hills Hotel Friday night, also for these two distinguished visitors from London who are spending a fortnight in Los Angeles—Mr. Weir and Mr. McClelland. As a number of the other guests, as well as the guests of honor, are Scotch, the table decorations were an interesting blending of the Scotch and American flags, with the Scotch colors carried out in red and yellow dahlias, with place cards to match. Those asked to meet Mr. Wier and Mr. McClelland are: Mr. and Mrs. Burton Green, Mr. and Mrs. Guy Barham, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Laurence Doheny, Mr. and Mrs. Roland P. Bishop, Capt. and Mrs. Randolph Huntington Miner, Mr. and Mrs. William W. Mines, Dr. and Mrs. Norman Bridge, Sir Herbert Beerhohm Tree, Miss Iris Tree, Mr. and Mrs. E. K. Wood, Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Stewart, Miss Windham, Miss Beecher and Mrs. F. E. Wilbur.

Butterflies Everywhere.

Gay-winged butterflies of all sizes and colorings vied with sweet young girls for supremacy as the dominant note at a merry dancing party which Mr. and Mrs. Will C. Heffelfinger gave at the Altadena Country Club Friday evening, in compliment to their young daughter, Miss Maurece, a coming debutante who enjoys many rosebud festivities and frequently contributes enjoyable parties to her friends, while waiting for her "official coming-out."

The decorations were very elaborate, in purple and gold. From the center of the ballroom was suspended a huge purple butterfly with gold-spotted, gauzy wings, and driving with yellowy-golden ribbon reins six smaller butterflies. Frosted electric bulbs were placed back of a latticed, fern-embowered arbor to give the effect of unbeams, which attracted a throng of the gay-winged, fluttering counterparts of the king butterfly who ruled over the realm, his domain suggested by ropes of fern on which perked his graceful subjects. A profusion of purple asters was employed with artistry, and vine-covered trellises were placed equidistant for mural panels. Purple-colored punch was served from a quaint rustic booth and the ices, cakes and confections were frosted to accentuate the rich color scheme, furthered in the favors of diminutive purple-and-gold butterflies and the dance programmes—ingenious water colors of couples dancing, the girl in purple, pantaletted frock and gold shoes and the boy in sport clothes.

The drive leading up to the porte cochere was outlined in purple-and-gold Japanese lanterns.

Dancing was enjoyed both indoors and out on the roomy verandas. Bidden were: Misses Marjorie Churchill, Marymae Cattern, Frances Knowlton, Dorothy Jacobs, Frances Fouchaux, Frances Pardridge, Ada Applegate, Helen Staats, Celia McDonald, Loretta Kelly, Lucia Schramn, Anita Hindry, Mariette Stair, Katherine Hubbard, Florence McBride, Dorothy Crew, Norris Johnson, Helen Kern, Helen Lockwood and Julienne Heffelfinger; Messrs. Francis Sedgard, Edward Culbertson, Dick Kern, Howard Edgecomb, Leon Edgecomb, Tom Talmadge, Lawrence Platt, Jack Vanrosco, Paul McElwain, Newton Cattern, Raymond Hartman, Russel Barnes, Charleton Brooks, Howard Verbeck, Loyd Sesson, Adrian Cammeron, Lowell McAdam, Elsworth Slaught, Ray McDonald and Donald McDonald.

Monterey a Magnet.

Society may again count on its dinner dances and society affairs where the men are absolute necessities, for the boys are to return from Monterey Saturday or Sunday.

The exodus of Angelenos who went to the military training camp left a void that could not be ignored—their absence made things more than a bit dull—but now the social lions and beaux, transformed into full-fledged "rookies," are coming home, and things are to be gay, as a result.

Mrs. David H. McCartney and her brother's bride, Mrs. Owen Porter Churchill, motored up to Del Monte Friday to stay until the last bugle call. Mr. Churchill and his brother-in-law, Francis Pierpont Davis, have been among the Angelenos answering reveille. Mrs. Owen Porter Churchill, by the way, plans to spend most of the summer at La Jolla, and will take different members of her family down before her son, Owen, returns to Palo Alto for his second year at Stanford. The latter and his pretty bride are to take a bungalow there until the completion of his college course.

Just now the entire family is completely wrapped up in the new baby which came to the Francis Pierpont Davises three weeks ago—Gabrielle Althea Churchill Davis, near 3, is "importanter" than ever as a big brother.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Laurence Doheny, Mr. and Mrs. Roy D. Bayly, James Rathwell Page, Mrs. A. H. Busch, Miss Amy Busch and A. Hays Busch, Mrs. Guy Cochran, Mrs. Sylvester Weaver, Mr. and Mrs. John Mitchell, Miss Banning, and scores of other prominent society folk have been to Del Monte and Monterey the past week, enjoying reunions with kinsfolk or friends temporarily there, either at camp or at the golf tournament.

At Montecito.

Mrs. James Nelson Burnes, at whose beautiful residence on Oak Knoll, Pasadena, have been staged some of the smartest social events of the year, but who is now at Montecito for the season, is to receive at the latter place this afternoon in honor of Sydney Francis Hoben, who is spending the month in Santa Barbara after a trip to San Francisco.

Mr. Hoben, well-known pianist of Australia and New Zealand, who has given opera recitals in the most fashionable Crown City homes for several years, is to appear in a series of four like affairs at Montecito on Thursdays in August, beginning the 10th. The compositions selected for presentation there are, with one exception, of the modern school, including "The Jewels of the Madonna," Massenet's "Thais" and "Don Quixote" of the French school, and Wagner's "The Flying Dutchman" with Liszt's piano arrangement.

Mrs. William Miller Graham of Bellosguardo, Mrs. Oliver Dwight Norton, Mrs. William Griffith Henshaw and Mrs. Burnes are to offer their beautiful homes for the musically-interpreted lectures.

Mr. Hoben is a personal friend of Mrs. A. D. Ireland and her mother, Mrs. A. J. Davis of Rome, Italy, who have spent most of their time recently in Southern California, where they have hosts of friends.

Reverting to Mrs. Burnes, the Earl V. Armstrongs of Pasadena and Los Angeles, Miss Betty Carey and her guest, Miss Sarah Chambers, and Lionel Armstrong arrived at the Burnes Montecito home Tuesday night from the north, where they went a week or two ago, the men of the party cruising up in the Armstrong yacht, the ladies proceeding by train and joining them at San Francisco. The entire party cruised down the coast to Del Monte, where the wayfarers attended the big golf tournament.

Garden Party.

A long, shady pergola literally embowered in a mass of tender foliage and colorful flowers, including the favorite old-fashioned blossoms of grandmother's time, together with rarer, more delicate varieties, and a velvety lawn shaded in a gay-striped canopy, offered a pretty setting for a lovely garden party Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Cole of No. 4418 North Griffin avenue, when more than 200 guests enjoyed cards, and later in the evening canvas was stretched for dancing in the open. The garage, transformed with its elaborate decorations, served as a refreshment booth. The illumination in the evening was especially effective, and the soft music of stringed instruments fitted in admirably with the tinkle of water from the fountains.

Three-month Tour.

Accompanied by their mother, Mrs. W. E. Rollins, wife of the artist, Miss Ruth Rollins and her elder sister, Ramona Rollins Wylie, will leave today for a trip through New Mexico and Arizona which will keep them away three months. The two clever Angelenos have a skit for the stage, Miss Ruth in esthetic dancing and character songs and her sister in classic musical numbers. They are to return to begin their rehearsals in the fall. Miss Ruth made her big hit as "Carrots" (Ethel Barrymore's erstwhile success) in local theatricals, and both are unusually talented.

Mr. Rollins is on the desert, getting fresh inspiration for pictures, and will not return to his San Gabriel studio until autumn.

Plan Outing.

Dr. and Mrs. Garrett L. Hogan of West Adams street, with their interesting family of three sons and a daughter, are planning to spend most of their summer at La Jolla—a spot they have found attractive for the past several years and where they are always surrounded by many Los Angeles friends.

From Eastern Metropolis.

Mrs. Neil S. B. Drake of Erie, Pa., and Miss Lou O'Connor of New York City are summer visitors in the city, the guests of their sisters, Mrs. H. L. Giesler of No. 624 Van Ness avenue and Mrs. Billy Van Schoick of the Chamouny apartments on West Eleventh street. Miss O'Connor will share her time with New York friends now at Coronado before returning East.

Ready to Enter School.

Mrs. James Westpheling and daughter Mary Elizabeth departed Friday for Berkeley, where Miss Westpheling is to enter school. They will be absent from Los Angeles at least a year, though they Personages of note in the social world.

Mrs. J. Kingsley Macomber was hostess at a pretty function at the Hotel Virginia last week, in honor of Mrs. Samuel Brown Thomas (Grace Mellus,) the fiancee of Charles C. Bull of New York and South America. Mrs. Roy Seeley was one of those present. Miss Merle Hanna, beautiful young society girl, who was much entertained while a guest at the Virginia, before joining the parental O. P. Hannas in Modesto. Miss Ruth Rollins, with her sister, Ramona Rollins-Wylie, is leaving today to tour New Mexico and Arizona, chaperoned by their mother, Mrs. W. E. Rollins, wife of the celebrated painter-artist. Miss M. Jacqueline Butler is spending the summer with her mother in Colorado Springs. Miss Maurece Heffelfinger, whose butterfly dancing party at the Altadena Country Club was one of the gayest events of the week for the younger set.

To Arrive Shortly.

Mr. and Mrs. Shirley Dodge, Jr., of Philadelphia will arrive in Los Angeles this week. They are touring the Coast and will be accompanied by Mrs. W. Kenneth Mace of Pasadena on their trip to Lake Tahoe and northern points.

Vacationing in Colorado.

Miss M. Jacqueline Butler, B.A., M.A., who is to teach French at the Redondo Beach High School the coming year, has gone to Colorado Springs to enjoy her vacation with her mother. Miss Butler lived in South Pasadena last year. She received her collegiate training in Colorado and California.

Meet Visitor at Dance.

Honoring Miss Mary Ellesworth Andrews of Boulder, Colo., Mrs. Mary L. Ogden entertained with a dancing party at the Ogden home, No. 1727 Norton avenue, Hollywood, last Friday evening.

A host of friends of the family, as well as of Miss Andrews, participated in the affair. Refreshments were served during the evening by the hostess.

Miss Andrews has been spending the summer with the Ogdens, and has made many friends here and met numerous old acquaintances from Colorado.

Smart Luncheon.

Mrs. J. A. Armstrong and her daughter, Miss Melchen Armstrong, were joint hostesses at a smart luncheon at the Beverly Hills Hotel Tuesday. The matrons who were Mrs. Armstrong's guests were at one table, while Miss Armstrong's guests, invited to meet her house guest, Miss Katherine Leathers of Louisville, Ky., occupied another table. At each was a huge gold basket filled with choice roses. Mrs. Armstrong's coterie numbered Mrs. William J. Chichester, Mrs. Sumner P. Hunt, Mrs. Charles Peyton of West Virginia, Mrs. C. Q. Stanton, Mrs. Charles C. Carpenter, Mrs. Deli Pusey, Mrs. West Hughes, Mrs. William Rice, Mrs. William Thompson, Mrs. Paton, Mrs. Will Wilshire and Mrs. Bell. Broadening Out.

The outstanding event in the affairs of the Los Angeles Athletic Club this week is a proposal to establish a country home for the exclusive use of club members. It was outlined in a communication sent by the directors of the club's entire membership, and the plan already has gained wide popularity in the ranks of the organization. The proposed country home would be in the mountains near Los Angeles, where members and their families could enjoy golf, tennis, trout fishing, bathing and camping.

The idea originated about two years ago with a group of the club's leading members, but the time was not then considered propitious, and it was deferred until recently. Now it is proposed by the directors to take it up vigorously and put it through to a successful conclusion, providing it meets with general approval. A site in the mountains within easy motoring distance has been considered tentatively, and plans for the necessary improvements are in course of preparation. Between now and fall some definite action will be taken by the club. Meantime it has been proposed that the club close its membership list and establish a waiting list.

Entertainments, which included large and small luncheons and dinners, kept the clubhouse delightfully busy with social affairs during the past week. The week's largest stag affair was the unusually interesting dinner given Wednesday evening by the Uplifters in the ladies' annex. Dr. Albert Solland was in charge of the entertainment, which included music, songs, stories and speeches.

Two luncheons of special interest were given Monday by the Los Angeles Underwriters and Motor Car Dealers' Association, the former in the red room and the latter in the English room. A. H. Muller was host at an elaborate dinner Thursday evening, eight friends being invited.

Among the entertainers in the ladies' annex were Mrs. H. M. Leib, her luncheon of Monday being in compliment to Miss Helene Maxwell, Miss Bernice R. Corkey of San Jose and Miss Elsie McCarthy of San Francisco, and on Saturday Mrs. W. W. Homan, who entertained at luncheon for Mrs. Grantland Seaton Long, Mrs. C. S. Fish, Mrs. B. F. Perkins, Miss Martha Candler and Miss Helen Fenner.

Other entertaining friends in the annex were Frank W. Miller, Mrs. A. L. Gude, C. H. Elmendorf, Mrs. E. L. Hine, Miss Regina Herbert, C. M. Shannon, Frederick K. Rindge, Mrs. E. J. Miley, Mrs. George H. Kress, Mrs. E. J. Bowes, Mrs. Willis H. Booth, Mrs. W. H. Hammel, Mrs. W. H. Brooks, Miss Annie Alexander, Frederick S. Lyon, Mrs. L. P. Kaull, Miss Dorothy Morphy, Mrs. F. S. Chapman, Mrs. Lloyd Ingraham, Mrs. Robert Farquhar, Champ S. Vance, R. S. Chambers, Mrs. John McPeak, Mrs. John Birkholz, Miss Frances A. McVay and Mrs. J. B. Knox.

For a Year.

Leaving Thursday for a year's absence, Mrs. M. A. Knabel and her sister, Mrs. E. Elliott, started over the Canadian Pacific for Lake Louise, Banff, Winnipeg, Toronto, the Thousand Islands and Montreal. Later they will go to Boston, their ultimate destination, though they plan to be at Atlantic City and Orchard Beach, Me., before the season closes. A brother of the ladies, C. A. Portman, lives in Boston, and will take the visitors on a long motoring trip. The winter will probably be spent at Palm Beach, Fla.

Eight Buds Lunch.

Honoring Mrs. Emerson Gee's house guest, Miss Alsa Sweeney of Phoenix, eight young girls were luncheon guests of Mrs. Gee and Mme. Elizabeth Richards Thursday at the Pig'n Whistle, with a matinee party following at the Orpheum. Invited were the Misses Marjorie Smith, Grace H. Adams, Mary MacMillan, Josefa Darling, Mary Carson, Helen Van Wranken and Helen Ingalsbe. In keeping with the pretty young guests, pink predominated decoratively, with sweet peas centering the luncheon board and favors in the delicate shade.

Southern Girl the Motif.

Miss Florence Halsey has just come from Pensacola, Fla., to visit in the household of Mrs. Norton D. Whitley of No. 917 South Burlington avenue. In honor of the stunning southern girl Miss Sammie Harris, a sister of Mrs. Whitley, entertained at dinner Wednesday evening, when nine guests were seated at a table massed in rose pink dahlias, accentuated with rose pink nut cups. Later dancing was enjoyed. Miss Halsey spent a few days at San Diego, returning Friday. Her stay in this city will terminate with the departure of Mrs. Whitley and her family for the South, en route to New York. Miss Dorothy Whitley, a graduate of the Girls' Collegiate School, will enter Wellesley.

In the Hills.

Smart out-of-town-vacation haunts are indeed quite popular now that the warm midsummer weather, with its fagging tendency, has set in. Mr. and Mrs. I. L. Tally and Mr. and Mrs. S. Tally have gone to Arrowhead Springs to seek rest and quietude in the shady copses of the numerous canyons.

Glad to be far removed from war scenes, Mrs. L. W. Ferrier, who makes Paris, France, her home, is enjoying the mountain atmosphere of the same resort and will extend her visit there indefinitely. She intends to remain in the United States many months, probably until the war ends.

Dr. and Mrs. C. W. Davis of Pasadena are sojourning at Arrowhead, taking the mineral baths.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank N. Warren of the Crown City are also there to enjoy the famous waters.

Al Fresco.

The members of the Cecilian Club enjoyed a picnic and swimming party at Brookside, Monday, an event which honored Miss Lois Baker.

In Highland Park.

At her home in Abbott place, Highland Park, Mrs. J. R. Hunt entertained at luncheon, Thursday, with places marked for Miss Katherine McClurg, Miss Mary Gillies, Miss Frances Gooding, Miss Louise Boal, Mrs. Charles McDowell and Mrs. Max Hayward, all members of Alpha Sorority. During the afternoon the party motored to the home of Miss Ruth Rogers in Eagle Rock, where the Alphas were receiving.

At the Beach.

Mrs. Charles Peyton, for whom so many recent happenings have been chronicled, furnished the inspiration for a luncheon with Mrs. W. D. Woolwine hostess, Friday. The guests motored to Hermosa Beach, where the Woolwines and their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Weeks Banks, are passing the summer.

Returning to the Orient.

Her many friends will learn with regret that Dr. Lulu Ellis is to sail August 1 for the Orient, in company with Bishop and Mrs. Bashford of Pekin, whose house guest she will be the coming year. The well-known woman has been extended many farewell courtesies. Mrs. Walter Durgin of Alvarado terrace entertained for her Monday, and others have contributed during the past fortnight numerous affairs. Dr. Bashford, distinguished in the Orient, has just published an exhaustive book on China. The trio came to America last fall.

Ante-Nuptial.

Miss Edna Bovard, the attractive daughter of President and Mrs. George F. Bovard of the University of Southern California, who is to become the bride of John Malcom August 8, was made honoree for a tea with Miss Mildred Wellborn hostess yesterday afternoon, at the new Christopher's—just one of many pre-nuptial courtesies which are being showered upon this popular young lady. A musical programme was given during the afternoon by Miss Virgie Lee Moore. Bidden were the Misses Edna Bovard, Katherine Adkinson, Evelyn Dayman, Delia Maisch, Rowland McCorkle, Pearl McClosky, Virgie Lee Moore, Florence Parmelee, Mary Poggi, Ethel Proctor, Grace Louden, Elsie Thorne, Maida Wellborn, Mrs. Thomas Loynaban, Mrs. A. Much Feted.

Announcement of the intended departure of Mr. and Mrs. Willitts J. Hole for a six-week outing to be spent in Oregon with the L. V. W. Brown family of Riverside, was followed by many pleasant little farewells the past week.

OUT-OF-TOWN SOCIETY

Pasadena.

THE social gaieties continue to keep up, in spite of the fact that it is midsummer and that a good many of the smart set have hied themselves away for longer or shorter stays. However, more than the usual number of the Crown City society maids and matrons are this year leaving only for week ends or short visits to the beaches and Monterey where the military encampment claims attention and the round of local events continues unbroken.

Tests Show Ivory Rollers Grind Finest Complexion Powder

Prof. John H. Austin, the Well-known Beauty Specialist, Proves This in His Chicago Laboratory!

—After many months of experimenting with various pulverizing machines, having rollers made of different metals, and of ivory—the last-named proved to be the best. In fact, Prof. Austin discovered that with rollers made of this extremely-hard, close-grained substance a powder could be produced that would be finer and more hygienic than any heretofore manufactured. At a great expense Prof. Austin had a large machine made, equipped with ivory rollers, and is now manufacturing this high-grade powder in great quantities, so that he may sell it at a popular price. He has named it "Ivor" Complexion Powder.

Prof. John H. Austin
IVOR
Complexion
Powder
CHICAGO U.S.A.

—"Ivor" Complexion Powder is unusually fine in texture, and very delicately perfumed—a powder that blends in with nature's own beauty tints, and cannot be detected even at close range.

—Read what Olive Gray of The Times says about "Ivor" Complexion Powder:

"Complexion Atmosphere

When all is said, and whatever cream, paste or other foundation you may use upon the complexion, you will need a dash of powder to complete the effect. For, I hold that as "atmosphere" is to the painting, softening every detail, powder is to the perfection of the complexion. And there is no doubt that the kind of powder used is of as great importance as anything appertaining to the appearance of the well-dressed woman. Not only the appearance, but the permanent good of the skin, depends upon this seemingly small detail. More frequently than any other question asked by the woman who cares, is the one as to a pure face powder. Not new or untried, but new in Los Angeles, is that powder bearing a resemblance in name and in effect to ivory. Pure, fine and absolutely harmless, this is, so far, as I have observed, the best of powders for the creation of that last touch—that so-needed complexion 'atmosphere.'"

—You'll find "Ivor" Complexion Powder equal to any dollar powder made—on sale tomorrow, 50c box—Hamburger's, Second Floor—or mail orders sent postage paid.

YELLOW and white appointments marked the informal dinner party of Friday evening arranged by Mrs. R. L. Riley in compliment to the birthday anniversary being celebrated by her husband, a member of the County Board of Supervisors. SOCIETY.

urday evening, the participants in the gay affair being members of a house party who are enjoying the pleasures of the beach during the summer months. Large hampers and baskets full of good things to eat were packed to a cosy nook near Eleventh avenue on the Ocean Front, and a bonfire kindled, around which the picnickers gathered and told stories while brewing the coffee. The guests of Mr. and Mrs. Andrews included Mrs. E. Comstock and daughter, Aileen, of Tuscon, Ariz.; Mrs. L. B. Woods and daughters Nan and Alice, of Tuscon; Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Todd and daughter Mable, of Glendale; Miss Lucy Boland of Tuscon, Miss Lela Wagoner of Ontario, and Miss Bell, Miss Lucas and Miss Eloise Andrews of Hermosa.

Mrs. John Webster of Marine avenue had as her house guest during the week Miss Jean Fulton of Long Beach. Miss Fulton left on Saturday for her home after having spent a pleasant week here.

The Arthur H. Priors of Fifth avenue, who have spent the past year in this city, left on Friday of this week for Guatemala, Central America. Mr. Prior, who is a mining engineer, has interests in the Guatemala mines, and the popular Manhattan Beach couple will spend a year in Central America.

The Rixon cottage near Marine avenue has been leased by Judge and Mrs. Hawkins of Prescott, Ariz., who will remain here indefinitely for the benefit of the judge's health. They are accompanied by their two charming children, who will no doubt entertain their many friends in Southern California while here in an informal way.

One of the prettiest birthday parties of the season was given on Wednesday afternoon by Mrs. Irene White in honor of her small daughter's birthday. Miss Lucille Claire was the recipient of many pretty gifts from her friends and a programme full of surprises and happiness had been previously planned by Mrs. White. At 4 o'clock a delicious birthday dinner was served to the guests, the piece par excellence of the occasion being a large birthday cake, set in the middle of the table, aglow with pink and white candles. Those who enjoyed the merry affair were Margaret Carroll, Kathryn Eilers, Lucille Claire White, Frances Baker, Ruth Franklin, Becky Jeffries, Frank Baker, John Baker, Otto Eilers and Junior Orgibet.

Among the recent arrivals from Los Angeles who will spend the summer here are Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Harvey Miles and their youngest daughter, Miss Edna. Tustin.

UNDER the shade of a wide-spreading walnut tree on the lawn at the home of Mrs. E. E. Smith, the ladies of the Coreopsis Club enjoyed a delightful day in the middle of the week at their annual picnic. The tree is a real wonder with its far-reaching branches and heavy leafage, and the mild zephyrs that kept the day at a most grateful temperature made the passing hours a time of real joy. Easy chairs were arranged invitingly in full sight of the tennis court and nearby was spread a long table loaded with all the delicacies of the season. The picnic dinner was preceded by a wienie-bake at a bonfire nearby. The ladies were accompanied by their children and the young members of the club engaged in tennis and other games, later joining the other ladies in the usual fascinating needlework. The ladies present included: Mrs. L. M. Brazee as a guest of the club, Mrs. Claude Norton, Mrs. Fenlon Matthews, Mrs. Charles Lambert, Mrs. Alton Alderman, Mrs. John King, Mrs. Ann Swartz, Mrs. H. E. Matthews, Mrs. S. M. Hart, Mrs. Ed Smith, Miss Avis Smith and Miss Bernice King.

Mrs. John Holt on Thursday afternoon most delightfully entertained several of her Rebekah Lodge friends. She had adorned her home most beautifully with decorations of Lady Washington geraniums and the delicate plumosis ferns. Later delicious refreshments were served to Mrs. Holt's guests, who were: Mrs. Della Anderson of Garden Grove, Mrs. Mary Hubbard and Mrs. Hattie Peters of Santa Ana, and Mrs. Eliza Sharpe of Cane Hill, Ark. Mrs. Sharpe is a house guest and aunt of Mrs. Peters and is making her first visit to California. She was charmed with the beauty of Tustin, as well as the rest of Southern California which she has thus far seen. Mrs. Holt is an admirable hostess and made the afternoon one that will be long and pleasantly remembered by those enjoying her hospitality.

The Alethes Club was charmingly entertained on a recent Friday afternoon at the attractive home of Mrs. Roy I. Smith. The hostess grows many beautiful roses and from her choice variety had culled many lovely specimen of the floral beauties which were used in the decoration of the house. Whist was the diversion of the afternoon and a number of tables of players engaged in that pastime. The game resulted in the award of first prize to Miss Myra Martin of Santa Ana, and the consolation to Mrs. Albert Saline of the same city. Delectable refreshments were served on the small tables after prizes had been awarded.

Welcome guests in the city are Rev. and Mrs. R. B. Shannon, formerly engaged in pastoral and church work in Tustin. Their friends are making the time pass very delightfully for them here, they having come to Tustin immediately from Nooksack, Wash., where they have spent the last year. The Shannons are equally pleased to greet their old friends and will carry pleasant memories of the visit with them to their new home in Oklahoma.

Another delightful out-of-door affair on the afternoon of the same day was one where Miss Norma Wingood was hostess, the home of her aunt, Mrs. W. G. Gould, furnishing an ideal place for such a gathering. The fragrance of orange blossoms and roses vied with each other and the thirty lovely girls who were the guests of Miss Wingood enjoyed the delightful afternoon function to the fullest measure. Their summer gowns made a charming color note in the pretty setting. After hours of merry diversions dainty ices and cakes were served on small tables. Miss Wingood is a Pomona College girl and the affair was given in honor of her house guest, Miss Irene Hall, also of Pomona College. The majority of the other guests were college mates of the charming young hostess.

One of the prettiest of church weddings occuring recently in the First Methodist Church of this city was that of Miss Valentine A. Heil, daughter of Mrs. S. R. Heil, and George Amos Harding, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Harding of Bolsa. Rev. E. J. Inwood read the impressive marriage service, using the double ring ceremony. The bride looked charming in a gown of rich cream brocaded silk worn by her grandmother sixty-five years ago at a similar nuptial event. The skirt was draped with cream lace overdress caught with orange blossoms; and real lace worn by the bride's mother, at her wedding forty years ago, adorned the quaint low neck and short sleeved bodice. A bridal veil with Dutch cap affect caught with orange blossoms, and a pearl necklace, also part of the grandmother's bridal trousseau, completed the lovely costume. The bridesmaid, Miss Ethel Heil, sister of the bride, was gowned in pale blue crepe de chine lace-trimmed and wore a white felt picture hat. The groom's best man was his brother, Will Harding, and Mrs. W. B. Snow played the wedding march.

The church was decorated profusely with Shasta daisies and ferns, and as the bridal party left, the bridal bouquet of pink lillies and ferns was caught by Miss Ethel Wright. The bride's traveling costume was of King's blue silk Jersey and a hat of white felt adorned with blue and white birds. The honeymoon trip to San Diego was made by automobile, the happy couple leaving amidst showers of rice and good wishes.

Visiting Mrs. Joseph Yoch, who is spending the summer at Laguna Beach, a number of her old friends spent Sunday with that lady at the seaside. The company had been expected and long tables had been arranged in the large dining-room of the Yoch Hotel where all sorts of good things to eat were spread in inviting array. Mrs. Yoch's charming daughters, Miss Josephine Yoch and Mrs. Redmond Barnett, assisted in serving. Those in the company at the table besides the Yoch family were: Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bevis, Miss Ruth Bevis, Mrs. C. M. Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Horace Fine, Charlotte and Cleora Fine, Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Robinson, Walter and Miss Anne Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Young, Helen, Wilbur and Margaret Young, Mrs. Olive Lopez, Alonzo and Isabel Lopez, Mrs. Louise Waite, Mr. and Mrs. John Rudolph, Misses Elizabeth, Agnes and Marie Rudolph and Mrs. Anna Owens.

Tropico.

A WEDDING of more than usual interest was solemnized Monday morning, when Miss Hazel Anderson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Anderson and Mr. A. Vaulet, a popular young business man of this city were quietly united in marriage at the home of the bride's parents. The bride was attended by Miss Nuna L. Lambermont as maid of honor and the groom by Mr. Louis L. Lambermont. At the conclusion of the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Vaulet left on a honeymoon trip at the conclusion of which the happy young couple will reside in Ross Court, in this city.

Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Glenn of Ashland, Or., who are spending the summer in Southern California, entertained with a delightful dinner party at their home, Friday, when their guests, including former friends and neighbors from North Vernon, Ind., bathed in the sunlight of long ago. When Mr. and Mrs. Glenn resided in the Hoosier State this gracious host and hostess were actively engaged in Sabbath school work in the First Methodist Episcopal Church of North Vernon and several of their guests of Friday included former pupils of their Sabbath school, Mrs. Jennie Berkshire Wiggam, Mrs. Adelaide Hickman Imler, Miss Margaret Bowers and Miss Cora Hickman; also Miss Winifred Wiggam and Miss Marjorie Imler. Mrs. Wiggam and daughter, who are residents of Emporia, Kan., are spending a few weeks as the guests of Miss Bowers of Los Angeles.

Complimenting her house guest, Miss Alice Teague of Santa Paula, Miss Ione Virden entertained with a pretty dancing party at her home on Mira Loma, Monday evening. Pink and white were most effectively combined in the pretty decorations that lent an added charm to the delightful event that was the motif for a number of Tropico and Glendale's young society folks to assemble as the guests of Miss Virden to thus meet Miss Teague. Vacation time and the absence of many others from the city prevented a number from attending who were anxious to meet the charming visitor; however, those who were present included Miss Carol Willisford, Miss Edith Ewens, Miss Aldine Norton, Miss Katherine Green, Miss Marjorie Zander, Miss Josephine Beckleye and Miss Winifred Cauch, Messrs. Benjamin Small, Robert Koltz, Milton Brown, Thomas Phillips, Edwin Heacock, William Renshaw, Ralph Paine, Edward Radcliffe.

SELECTING the seventieth anniversary of the wedding of her grandmother, Mrs. Nancy A. Daley, for her own nuptials, and in the same home where her own mother was married, Miss Bess Bryant became the wife of John C. Ralphs, Jr., assistant cashier of the San Bernardino County Savings Bank, at a beautiful ceremony Monday at the Daley home No. 795 Arrowhead avenue.

The decorative arrangement was very beautiful and effective, the bridal party standing in a bower of greenery and pink phlox, from which a huge white wedding bell was hung, with small bells at either side, tied with long loops of white tulle. Lovely Canterbury bells and fragrant tuberoses arranged in baskets added to the beautiful design. The bride was attended by Miss Maude Illingsworth, while the groom was supported by George H. Johnson. Rev. H. B. Mowbray of the First Congregational Church read the service. The bride wore a smart serge traveling suit for the ceremony.

The wedding dinner was served immediately after the ceremony and then the bride and groom disappeared. They will honeymoon at San Diego and San Francisco, and on their return occupy a beautiful new home which the groom has just completed on Twentieth street.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Kate Bryant and a member of a pioneer family, while her husband is the son of former Sheriff John C. Ralphs, likewise an old family in the San Bernardino Valley. He is a well-known lodge man, being an Elk, Mason and Knight Templar.

The party was a Zeppelin luncheon arranged very cleverly by the hostesses. A sign had been hung in the fireplace, announcing to the guests that at 3:30 there would be a Zeppelin raid. At the hour stated brilliantly colored balloons were floated about the room, each guest obtaining one of the "Zeppelins," each little balloon being accompanied by a bomb, the bomb being notes containing funny anecdotes. Following the Zeppelin raid, the guests were favored by several musical selections by the guests. Luncheon was then served in the beautifully decorated dining-room. The guests were Mmes. Plummer Van Sant, Andrew Wightman, Edward Kendall, David Bennett, Salo Desky, George Daniels, John Lyons, E. Purser, T. Capell, L. E. Hopkins in the fall, was given Tuesday afternoon by Mrs. James Luther Flint at her home, No. 142 South Central avenue. Conventional combinations of pink, blue, nile green and white formed the house decorations. Flowers were used abundantly, Duchess roses and blue hydrangeas forming one very effective combination. AMONG the numerous charming social affairs that have been contributing to the pleasantness of the visit of Miss Veta Blanche Lear of Kansas City, and Mrs. Karl H. McClure of St Louis, who are the summer guests of Mrs. Robert Carl Poor, was the luncheon given Tuesday afternoon at the Poor residence on East Fourteenth street. The afternoon was spent with needles and a social chat, being concluded with a collation served at a table centered with an old ivory sheperdess basket filled with pink sweet peas, over which floated fluffy bows of tulle. Favors were pink and green baskets, filled with pink and green mints. Those sharing the favor of the afternoon were Miss Veta Blanche Lear, Mrs. Karl H. McClure, Mrs. William Holz, Mrs. Robert Carl Poor, Mrs. Frank Leke, Mrs. Irvin Holloway, Mrs. Raphael Wertz, Mrs. H. R. Maltby and the Misses Marion Holz and Frances Leke and Master Holz McClure.

Pink and blue was the color scheme chosen by Miss Ruth Adams, of No. 319 Daisy avenue, for a bridge party Tuesday afternoon which had an attractive decorative arrangement. Blue tulle tied baskets held pink sweet peas. These were arranged at vantage points in all the rooms. Tally cards were pink and blue, with Dresden figure designs. Garden Grove.

A WEDDING of much interest to Garden Grove and vicinity took place in Santa Ana on Tuesday week at high noon, with Justice Cox presiding at the civil ceremony. The principals were Miss Nellie Nelson and Nate Dunsdon, both of Garden Grove. The happy couple were accompanied to the County Courthouse by Mr. and Mrs. B. M. Todd, Mrs. Todd being the bride's sister. The bride and groom returned to Garden Grove after the ceremony, and in the evening were treated to a serenade by the young people of the place, and responded to the courtesy most hospitably with delicious eatables. The honeymoon trip will take Mr. and Mrs. Dunsdon to San Diego, where they will visit the Panama-California International Exposition, later going to a gold-mining property owned by Mr. Dunsdon near Camp Baldy. Mr. Dunsdon expects to spend much time looking after his mining interests, but the newly wedded couple will probably reside in Garden Grove, where they have a large circle of friends whose good wishes follow them on their honeymoon journey.

Originality in their social affairs is the slogan of the Lambda Phi's, one of their most unique and lively times was enjoyed on a recent Friday night, when they left Garden Grove about 7:30 o'clock, a "penny walk" occupying the first hours of the evening. Following all the turns and twists in the dusty road the young women arrived at the Alamitos schoolhouse, which was one of the intermediate points to be reached during the evening. At the schoolhouse a surprise luncheon was the order of the day, the menu being enjoyed from paper bags contained sandwiches, stuffed olives, pickles, macaroons, plums, cheese, potato chips, and all-day suckers. After this sumptuous repast the girls resumed their hike, reaching their final objective, the Arkley home, at 10 o'clock. The rest of the evening and far into the wee sma' hours was spent in the playing of rook and the enjoyment of other amusements, with a final treat of luscious watermelon. Then the tired but cheerful Lambda Phi's retired, but not to sleep, the rest of the night being made lively with pranks of various sorts, and while little sleep blessed the eyelids of the club girls, each one of them highly enjoyed the lark, and hope to repeat it at some future time.

Riverside.

MRS. EUGENE BEST of Denton street entertained with a delightful luncheon Wednesday in honor of Miss Rena Phelps, whose marriage to Ward Wooldridge will take place in August. The luncheon was also a courtesy to Miss Marie Chamblin, a cousin of Miss Phelps, who has been pursuing a musical education in Chicago. The linen chest of the bride-to-be received further tribute from the guests of Mrs. Best, the afternoon being occupied with the fringing of a set of table napkins for breakfast use.

Miss Phelps was complimented again on Tuesday afternoon, when Miss Ray Farr played the hostess at a thimble party and surprise kitchen shower at her home, No. 309 Lemon street. Just before the refreshments were served an entrancing living "kewpie" in the person of little Edward Welles, Jr., made his appearance, drawing behind him a large round basket, which he presented to Miss Phelps. The receptacle proved to be filled to the brim with useful kitchen articles, which the bride-to-be removed from their wrappings. Miss Farr was assisted in the serving of refreshments by her mother, Mrs. William Farr, and the Misses Agnes Farr and Wanda Turner.

Mrs. Stanley Richardson, who is visiting Mrs. Alice Richardson at the Mission Inn, was hostess on Tuesday at a prettily-appointed luncheon in honor of Dr. Margaret McNaught, member of the State Board of Education. AN UNUSUAL pleasure was afforded members of the A.N.C. Club who met at Mrs. F. D. Coltrin's Tuesday for an afternoon of fancy needlework. Her attractive residence is hung with a large and choice collection of paintings brought from her former home in Washington, D. C., that number many examples of the Morans and other noted modern artists, as well as two or three old masters. The collection is a family heirloom, and some of the paintings have graced important exhibitions in the East. The hostess provided music and served a dainty luncheon during the afternoon.

Mrs. N. H. Carey and her nephew, Raymond Mettler of Pomona, who is spending the week at the Carey home, picnicked in one of the Los Angeles parks Wednesday. The occasion was the annual outing of the Friends Church of Whittier.

House guests entertained at the Charles Varney home the latter part of the week were Miss Lena Fritz of Los Angeles and Mr. W. L. Fritz and daughter, Adaline.

At the Methodist parsonage Thursday evening members of Miss Cynthia Bradshaw's Sunday-school class entertained with a farewell party in her honor, as she was leaving in a few days for the East. Mrs. G. W. Beck and children were among the twenty-five guests at a birthday party and family reunion in honor of her mother, Mrs. Eliza Fisher, in Los Angeles early in the week. Miss Alice Beck provided the birthday cake with suitable decorations and an abundance of homemade candies. After the sumptuous luncheon, which was served in buffet style, the floors were cleared and the younger ones enjoyed an hour of dancing.

Azusa.

LITTLE tots everywhere, and what a happy, carefree little life of happiness they do live. For nothing can be so charming as a beautiful group of the little ones and such was truly manifested last Thursday when Mrs. Arthur Powell entertained about twenty of the darlings with their mothers, in honor of the third birthday of her daughter, little Miss Margaret Elizabeth. The little ones delighted themselves in games throughout the afternoon, following which a huge birthday cake with three wee candles was a wonder to all. Those included in the party were: the little Misses Mary Rosine Reicker, Ada Elizabeth Yoast, Bernice Gantonbeim, Barnara Hendricks, Betty Bun Tripp, Katherine Smith, Nancy Tripp, Ruth Webb, Edith May Raney, Mary Louise Smith, Elizabeth King, Jane Renaker, the Masters Kennith Reicard, Vollney Spaulding, George Basil Gordon, Jr., Thomas Leslie Smith and Richard Spaulding.

One of the most enjoyable Sunday dinner affairs was that enjoyed at the home of Mrs. Fannie E. Turner, when she was the hostess to Miss Bertha Denison of Honolulu, Mrs. D. M. Durrell and family of Florence, and Mr. and Mrs. J. Goodrich and family of Uplands.

King Cotton says "Sell all these fancy SILKS at . . . 39c"

—He must have been a wee bit jealous of these silks for surely no one would think of selling such silks as these at 39c or even double 39c.

—But whatever's the reason—they're to go at 39c—and how they will go!

—There are stripes, plaids, dots and bordered effects in a wide range of colorings. The widths range from 26 to 36 in.

—Don't be surprised if you come in the afternoon and find them all gone!

home of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Pearson, last Saturday evening, their daughter, Miss Mabel entertained about twenty friends. Encircled with Japanese lanterns of many hues the lawn made an ideal setting for a jolly summer occasion. A number of games delightfully fitting for the affair were played after which a dainty collation was served. Among those present were: Miss Blanche Morris, Miss Opal McClain, Misses Ada and Ruth Ellis, Miss Bessie Matney, Miss Corinne Darnaby, Miss Pearl Gowens, Miss Muriel Atkinson and the Messrs. Karl Rinderknecht, George Sprat, Harry Tucker, S. F. Draper, McKinley and Dewey Gowens, Roy Hummel, Stuart Streshley, William Gable, Arthur Lane, and Alba Hibsch.

Rialto.

AS ONE of the latest and greatest of surprises in local society comes the news that Miss Cora Roy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. B. Roy of North Rialto, was married on July 8 to William L. Christian of Los Angeles. The wedding took place in the Catholic Church at Las Vegas, Father O'Grady officiating. The bride was gowned in simple white for the ceremony, after which Mr. and Mrs. Christian left on their honeymoon, which will be spent touring the country by automobile. Many points of interest will be visited, including Yosemite, Yellowstone Park and Atlantic Coast resorts. On the return the new home will be in Los Angeles. Hearty congratulations and best wishes are extended by Rialto friends.

On Tuesday afternoon Mrs. B. W. Rowe entertained the members and friends of the W.C.T.U. at her pleasant home on Riverside avenue and Third street. Simple yet effective decorations added to the attractiveness of the interior, the olden time petunia blossoms being used in color scheme of red and white. An interesting address was given by County President Joris of San Bernardino, followed by a general discussion of live issues, and piano numbers by Miss Gladys Rowe were greatly enjoyed. Summer refreshments served by the hostess brought the event to conclusion.

Quite a number of our people are spending the vacation months in the Eastern States visiting old friends and "seeing our own country" as well. Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Randall are making the trip in their machine. Mrs. Thomas McKeown goes on the Salt Lake and Mr. and Mrs. John Grimes left on Wednesday for Kansas and Missouri points by way of the Pacific Electric and Southern Pacific. Mr. and Mrs. Randall will join Mrs. Randall's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Dalgleish, who left not long ago by rail, and Mrs. McKeown will, after a few weeks in the States, spend some time in Canada.

Miss Hannah Lackey spent the week-end at Mountain View, Little Bear Valley, as the guest of Miss Anna Bailey.

Moneta.

TWO enthusiastic motorists, Mrs. C. J. Wiley and Mrs. Ella C. Dawson of the Moneta school, in the latter's machine, have just accomplished a camping and sightseeing trip to the Grand Canyon, returning on Saturday after an absence of about two weeks. Besides themselves, two Los Angeles teachers, Mrs. M. Mervill and Miss Olive Ensign, and Mrs. Dawson's 3-year-old son, constituted the party. They report a most charming and comfortable trip. Water was to be had every twenty miles and Harvey eating houses were patronized once or twice daily, they following the line of the Santa Fe Railroad. As this was a vacation trip, it demanded outdoor sleeping, which was enjoyed every night but one, when the grandest kind of a thunderstorm drove them to a hotel. One night was spent on the desert, where absolutely no sound reached them; another where they built a big camp fire, and two on a point overlooking the Grand Canyon. Another trip is now planned in Mrs. Wiley's machine.

Mrs. G. B. Traveler is entertaining for a couple of weeks Miss Belle Chase of Rockwood, Ill., an old-time friend, who will remain in Southern California until fall.

Mrs. L. O. Gorham and two children, of Amsterdam, Cal., are visiting at the home of O. S. Gorham and family this week.

Mrs. Bowen of Broadacres and daughter, Miss Anna Mae Elliston, are entertaining Mrs. Shaw and Mrs. Barron, old friends from Tyler, Tex.

Grandma Adelmeyer of Broadacres, 86 years old, is doing some visiting this summer. She will spend two weeks with her son, Dr. Raymond of Los Angeles, then two weeks in Riverside, and then go to her daughter, Mrs. Cooper, in Tulare county.

Pomona.

TUESDAY evening Mrs. Della Strader and her daughter Ruth, who reside on East Holt avenue, gave a picnic dinner in Ganesha Park, complimentary to Miss Irene Telford of Cambridge, Mass., who has been a visitor at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Storrs on Jefferson street. Miss Telford left on Wednesday for her home in the East, but will later return to the Oregon Agricultural College, where she is a teacher of physical culture for girls. In the party at the park were Mr. and Mrs. Storrs and their daughters, Ruth and Isabelle; Miss Leila Caldwell, Miss Telford, and Messrs. Knight and Caldwell from San Dimas. It was an altogether enjoyable affair.

Miss Mildred Cooper gave a house party Thursday and Friday evenings of this week at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Burt L. Cooper on McKinley avenue. She entertained a party of her Pomona College friends who reside in Whittier. Her guests were the Misses Marjorie Giffin, Edith Graves, Marjorie Morse and Margaret Jones. Games and music constituted the entertainment for the guests.

More than eighty persons attended the meeting of the Star Social Club on Wednesday. Luncheon was served on long tables at noon. After the menu was enjoyed the women busied themselves with their needlework for an hour or so. Miss Elizabeth Wood was chairman of hostesses for the day. Those who assisted her were the Mmes. W. B. Todd, James Wolstencroft, H. W. Barnum, Daniels, M. Stiles, F. D. Baker, Esther Gillette, George Phillips, H. C. Ludden, J. R. Garthside, D. L. Taylor, Martha Bray, E. H. Welch, E. S. Ware, McCarty, Thomas McKinley, T. J. Moon, M. G. Manley, L. M. Harris, Fred Whyte, Bertram Fich, M. B. Lamont, Rowe, Ed Dreher, H. B. Davis, J. A. Santa Barbara.

WITH many informal parties and recitals and with various entertainments for war relief Santa Barbara and Montecito society has quite a busy time of it just now.

The war relief rummage sale at Montecito Hall Wednesday was one of the big attractions of the week among society folks. There were many handsome gowns, slippers, books and articles of household ware offered for sale. Many of the articles, too, seemed brand new—just didn't happen to suit the fancy of the owners and so were ready for the sale when it was decided upon. Mrs. Frederick Gould is president of the War Relief Society and she had many willing helpers.

Sydney Francis Hoben, pianist, and Charles Keeler, poet, dramatist and traveler, are two of the artists to be at Montecito homes this week. REEL REGISTERS.

Baseball-itis is similar to the hives, inasmuch that it keeps its victims itching to get a home run every time they come up to the plate. Baseball has struck its yearly blow at the Morosco studio, and even Herbert Standing is demanding a chance to cover second base. A team composed of actors and members of the laboratory was organized last week, and immediately issued an ultimatum to a group of nine who represented the technical force. The challenge was accepted and when the dust settled and quiet once more reigned it was found that the technical team was holding on to the big end of a 25 to 7 score. But even at that Dustin Farnum made a home run.

Pedigreed Atmosphere.

Director Paul Powell of the Triangle Fine Arts Company has started to rehearse "The Rummy," featuring Wilfred Lucas and Pauline Starke. "The Rummy" is a newspaper story, written by Lucas himself, who served several years as a newspaper reporter, later becoming a city editor. Pauline Starke's father is news editor of a San Francisco daily, so the picture promises to be steeped in atmosphere.

Filming Picture Here.

Gilbert P. Hamilton, director-general of the Century Film Corporation, with headquarters at Roundup, Mont., is paying a business visit to Los Angeles. He is accompanied by Dorothea Farley, leading woman of the company, and her mother, Mrs. Alma Farley. Mr. Hamilton has engaged one of the stages at the Christie studios at Hollywood, and also has stage room at the Pacific studios on Santa Monica avenue. He is directing the seven-reeler, "Inherited Passions," in which "Dot" Farley is supported by the following cast: William Conklin, Frank Newburg, Millard Wilson, Mrs. Alma Farley, Charles Mulhall, Beatrice Van and Mrs. Hutchinson. Five of the seven reels will be made in and around Los Angeles.

Near Fish's Home.

The Balboa press agent is responsible for this one. All set? Now hold tight.

Out on the desert it is the custom to pay for all the water you beg, borrow or steal. And rightly so. One time a desert man came down to Long Beach and camped out near the ocean that night. He took two buckets and went down to the beach to get water. The tide was high and nobody was in sight except Harry King, the Balboa star. Quoth the desert man:

"I want to buy two pails of water."

"Help yourself," said King.

"How much," asked the D. M.

"Oh, about 15 cents."

The desert man paid the money and departed.

Next morning the D. M. went again to the sea for water, and there was nobody in sight. The tide was low.

"Suffering cactus!" swore the desert man, "that fellow sure did sell a lot of water last night!"

Would Grow Up.

Webster Campbell, who has the male lead in the three-reel Vitagragh comedy-drama, "Pep's Legacy," has taken his place in the foreground. Campbell refuses to be regarded as a "juvenile," he prefers to be known as an "actor." He is demonstrating his all-round ability in this picture. Sunshine Mary Anderson has the leading feminine role and William Wolbert is the director.

From the Antopodes.

Arthur Shirley, the well-known Australian actor, has been engaged to support Bessie Barriscale, the Ince star, in the current comedy-drama by Monte M. Katterjohn, in which she is now appearing under the direction of Charles Miller.

Good Preparation.

Perhaps I would be more sympathetic with actors who try to stuff me with all manner of wild tales, if I hadn't played the villain's role so long," mused Stuart Holmes.

"The worst of it is, that the older they get, the wilder the stories. They remind me of a little dialogue I read recently," the Fox actor continued.

"Said the father: 'My, my, baby has swallowed a piece of worsted.'

"Said the mother: 'Well, that's nothing to the yarn's she'll have to swallow when she grows up to be an actress.'"

SCREEN.

FILM ROW RESPLENDENT.

BRILLIANT CLUSTER OF STARS HERE THIS WEEK.

So many brilliant favorites appear on Motion Picture Row this week that it is quite possible the picture fans will choose their amusement according to the names of their pet stars, rather than on account of the vehicles in which they appear. In some cases, however, the photoplay has a story as famous as the star appearing in it, a notable instance being the picture version of Ouida's "Under Two Flags." Among the week's sparklers are Mary Pickford, Lewis Stone, Douglas Fairbanks, William Collier, Crane Wilbur, Blanche Sweet, Bessie Barriscale, Theda Bara, May Allison and Harold Lockwood.

Clune's Auditorium.

Bessie Barriscale and William Desmond in "The Payment," written by C. Gardner Sullivan, will be the attraction at Clune's Auditorium this week, beginning tomorrow. The story is of a woman who makes a supreme sacrifice for success in a career, and the author is said to have given the theme a novel treatment.

William Collier, the famous comedian, in "Willie's Wobbly Way," will be the Keystone number.

Tally's Broadway.

Lewis Stone, the popular matinee idol of former theatrical days in Los Angeles, will return in "According to the Code" on the screen at Tally's Broadway beginning tomorrow.

The story is a picturization of Charles Michelson's drama of the Civil War and is said to be excellently reproduced on the screen. Some beautiful travelogues and whimsically-amusing cartoons are also to be shown.

Symphony.

Those film favorites, May Allison and Harold Lockwood, in a beautiful outdoor drama, "River of Romance," will appear at the Symph mencing tomorrow. scenes of this picturesq mantic drama were stag around the famous Thousand situated in the St. Lawren The celebrated castle George D. —"The earnestness with which Bullock's devotes every energy to the building up of regular stocks, to the creation of Service and the avoidance of exaggerated radicalism in merchandising should enhance the meaning of the words 'Sale' and 'Clearance' when Bullock's vouches for them."

"The One Sale of the Year"

—The sale that is as different as it is supreme—The sale that appreciates the importance of its name—

—The sale that has won a myriad friends through its genuineness, its sincerity and its personality so that today and yesterday and for many days, probably thousands (and we do not believe this to be exaggerated) have been watching and waiting for this announcement—

—To these the mere word would be sufficient. But undoubtedly there are other thousands who have come to make Los Angeles their home within the last year. And there are other thousands who are visitors to our city, and while the news has spread, Bullock's wants everyone to know—

—So these 8 pages of exploitation supplementing every window of the store filled with values —For every section of the store participates and every section of the store knows the values that are compulsory.

—It is not as though Bullock's held a general sale every week, every month, or every six months—Bullock's Clearance is "The One Sale of the Year"— —And as such it is regarded with seriousness and earnestness—and concentrated upon with every energy—

—No half-way measures are tolerated. No half-way opportunities are permitted.

—The importance of the happening is emphasized by the fact that

New Balboa Serial.

Ruth Roland and Frank Mayo, of Balboa are beginning work on a new serial by Will M. Ritchie, entitled "Who Wins?" Reeves Gleason is directing.

Her Artistic Temperament.

Little Mary Sunshine, the 4-year-old star at Balboa, is a dead game sport. She was working under the direction of Henry King, the other day, in a story by D. F. Whitcomb which called for a scene in which the youngster waded out in a lily pond. She slipped and fell. The whole company rushed to the rescue, but little Mary was, both literally and figuratively, the coolest of 'em all.

"Poor little thing!" the ladies gushed.

"My dear child—" began King.

"Oh," exclaimed Mary, apparently bored to extinction by the sympathetic attitude, "oh, stop chattering and go ahead and shoot!"

Sh'sh Note.

The morgue hasn't a thing these days on the Lasky studio, when it comes to mystery. The Geraldine Farrar picture is proceeding amidst abysmal silence so far as the press department is concerned, and Ken McGaffey's specially-engaged Farrar typewriter is rusting away. A story as to the nature of the new Farrar photoplay is expected to be sprung on the waiting world some time within the next sixty days.

Sweet Marie Returns.

Marie Doro, Lasky star, than whom no film actress is more popular with the fans, has returned from a brief vacation, and is shortly to begin a new picture under the direction of James Young.

Still Terrible.

Theodore Roberts, another Lasky favorite, is still twisting ladies' arms in "Anton the Terrible," the Russian story which he has been working in for several weeks.

Superfluity Note.

A feature of Fannie Ward's picture in which she is at present appearing for the Lasky company, "Each Pearl a Tear," is a series of poses known as "society tableaux," which promise to be very effective.

Some Debts.

How much motion picture art owes to these:
The telephone.
Smile-proof policemen.
The warm water around the Bermudas.
The safety razor.
Mary Chaplin.
Charlie Pickford.
The sport shirt.
The tear-teasing onion.

Richard Comes Back.

Richard Stanton, William Fox director, who produced "The Beast" and who, immediately following the completion of that photoplay, was stricken with illness and forced to undergo an operation, will return to his directorial duties Monday.

Flesh-and-blood Hero.

Crane Wilbur will appear in person on the Garrick stage at 8:15 o'clock every night during the coming week, immediately after the showing of "The Wasted Years," the picture in which he is starring at that theater. Wilbur is scheduled to do a "vaudeville turn."

Real Bull?

Is Roy Fernandes's dog with the gold tooth a "bull" pup? The P. A. failed to inform us.

Abnegation Note.

Dick Johnson has returned to Balboa after a vacation absence of six weeks.

During his absence he angled for the wary trout of the Sierras and came back home without a single fish story, also no fish, thus breaking all records.

Chaplin's Latest.

"One O'clock A.M." is the title of the next Charlie Chaplin release which will be shown at the Garrick.

More Film Battles.

"Shell 43" is the name of a new Ince photoplay in which H. B. Warner and Enid Markey will shortly appear. It is a unique narrative of cunning used in the European war, and concerns the adventures of a young man of mystery who possesses papers which prove him to be the correspondent of a big American newspaper.

Members of the supporting cast include Margaret Thompson, Jack Gilber, George Fisher, Louise Brownell, J. P. Lockney and Charles K. French. Reginald Barker directed.

They Cry for It.

Charles Giblyn established a dangerous precedent, the other day, when he purchased $75 worth of champagne for the extras in a cafe scene of an Ince feature, when said extras failed to show the requisite amount of "pep."

Lenore Ulrich,

Stage star of "Bird of Paradise" fame, who has lately returned to work with the Morosco Pallas Photoplay company. She has just finished starring in a new feature.

BIG BALLET COMING.

Diaghileff Dancers to Grace the Approaching Season Here.

The Serge de Diaghileff Ballet Russe, with Waslav Nijinsky at its head, will visit the city next season.

This famous group of dancers and mimes will produce in this city a repertoire of ballets and mimodramas exactly as they have been produced in Paris, London and the leading cities of Europe. M. de Diaghileff has reassembled his company in full ranks. The ballets are set in the scenery and clothed in the costumes originally or newly designed for them by Leon Bakst and other European colorists.

A complete symphony orchestra will accompany the dancers.

Recreation.

PREPAREDNESS IN BATTLING HEAT.

METHODS OF KEEPING COOL SHOWN ON SCREEN.

Latest Society Fad in New York, Aquaplaning, a Feature—"The Times" - Universal Animated Weekly Also Records Many Events of Varied Interest.

How to keep cool is a question that has been agitating a large part of the country during the past week. Several novel methods are suggested during the course of the unreeling of the Los Angeles Times-Universal Animated Weekly current issue. New York society girls are shown off-setting the heat waves by the new pastime known as aquaplaning, that will prove of much interest to seaside fans in this locality. The way the Fourth Maryland Infantry, en route to the border, took advantage of an opportunity to cool off, while at North Bend, Ind., is also featured. The joys of aquatic sports are visualized in the pictures of the swimming contest for national championship that lately occurred at San Francisco.

The water front of Mobile, Ala., after the passing of the hurricane which damaged the city to the extent of $5,000,000 is shown. This hurricane was responsible for the death of thirty people as it swept the Gulf of Mexico. Human destruction is shown in the wrecking of the buildings at Dublin, which were injured by shell fire in the recent uprising there.

Other features are the christening of Uncle Sam's latest submarine by the wife of Ambassador Riano of Spain; the review of Great Britain's volunteer corps by Field Marshal Sir John French at Hyde Park, London; the presentation of a loving cup to Capt. Paul Koenig of the German submarine Deutschland by Mme. Christine Langenham at Baltimore, Md., and the departure of the citizen sailors of New York City for their naval training cruise.

The regeneration of the historic American Derby, which was recently run in Chicago for the first time in eleven years, as presented by the weekly, is very interesting, also the encampment of the Boy Scouts of America at Coney Island.

TRAINS FOR PHOTOPLAY.

Lillian Gish Leads Strenuous Life To Prepare for Demands of Pugilistic Episodes in "Diana of the Follies" Production.

Lillian Gish has adopted a course of training as strenuous as a professional pugilist in order to get into the best possible condition for her "rough-house" work in the Triangle Fine Arts production, "Diana of the Follies." Miss Gish has several free-for-all fights in the picture, including one at her husband's house and another on the stage of the operahouse in which several chorus girls mix in. She says she's delighted to quit the sob-sister stuff.

Some time before the production was started Miss Gish began swimming, playing handball, basketball and working with the Indian clubs. As a result of her physical training the fight scenes are perhaps the most realistic ever filmed in so far as the feminine participants are concerned.

In the theater scene one of the chorus girls emerged with a black eye as the result of coming in too close contact with demure Miss Gish's fist.

PICTURES REAL EVENTS.

Big Reel Feature Tells of Romantic History of Southland.

Notable events in the Southland's romantic history and all the thrills that occurred in the days of '46 and '47 will be authentically depicted, it is stated, in Winfield Hogaboom's ten-reel historic photodrama of Southern California, "The Daughter of the Don," which will have its premiere at the Majestic Theater on August 13.

The inhabitants of Whittier will be especially interested in the picture by reason of the fact that a number of important scenes in the film occur in that vicinity. It was in that section that the Mexican forces were gathered by Gen. Pico, preceding his defeat by the American forces at the ford on the San Gabriel River.

"WHAT IS COMING?"

H. G. Wells Seeks to Increase the Impression that He is an Accurate Observer of World Affairs and Something of a Prophet.

For some reason Mr. Wells enjoys quite extensively the reputation for being a profound thinker as well as an entertaining novelist; and by solicitously encouraging the conception has caused numbers of people to look upon him as something of a prophet, as a remarkably perspicacious observer whose keen eyes pierce the opaque mists.

Didn't he write stories about men flying long before aeroplanes were invented! Indeed he did. Shades of Jules Verne!

It is true that Mr. Wells does not make himself so conspicuously inept as does Arnold Bennett, for instance, when writing argumentatively or speaking with the voice of authority on current subjects. But then, in the length and breadth of his fiction, Mr. Bennett hasn't a line of philosophy that might not reasonably have been conceived and expressed by a child. Mr. Bennett fully exemplifies the folly by which Mr. Wells benefits of believing that because a man writes popular, or even creditable, or even fine fiction that his opinion on a current subject is worth more than that of a master plumber's, or a master painter's, or a diamond cutter's, or the opinion of any man engaged in work that requires a certain faculty for close observation and a certain mechanical skill of technique. The plumbers stick to their pipes, but the shoemakers will not stick to their lasts. Mr. Bennett has even shambled heavily-witted into the lists to tilt with G.B.S.! And as for that, Mr. Wells has hidden, or pretended to hide, behind a nom de plume to mock at his contemporaries; though, sometimes to his confusion, he uses his own name when "observing" and "prophesying."

Mr. Wells's novels are heavy. As far as brain exercise goes, any one of them is as a gymnasium to a nursery compared to Mr. Bennett's old wives' tales; though for art of narrative, at his best, Mr. Bennett has a technique that Mr. Wells has never approached, and perhaps never cared to approach, and there are few discerning readers who would care to have him approach it.

Photographs and Prophecies.

But as a profound thinker on political subjects—the gravity of Mr. Wells's style, accompanied by the sad, melancholy, studiously contemplative photograph of the author served to reviewers with each book and frequently served by them to the public, together with his imposing reputation as a novelist, succeed in giving his "prophetic" and "argumentative" books more prestige than he could ever gain by the sheer ideas set forth within them.

Take his name off "What is Coming?" and it would remain a curious, well-written book, entertaining perhaps, but unimpressive—for there is so little in it that a reputable thinker would try to claim credit for having thought worth while to offer the public as original, even with the twists and turns of phrase that are given.

But that "H. G. Wells" and the opening chapter in which he relates with emphatic and calculating modesty something of how discerning he has been in the past, what wonderful predictions he has made in other books, how penetrating have been his obversations will likely enough send the inexperienced reader into ecstacy of admiring credulity.

His Modest Claims.

We mean one inexperienced in reading the essays and prophecies of H. G. Wells. His "Social Forces in England and America," "Anticipations," particularly the sophomoric "The War That Will End War," show him as one who has tried to hit prophecies for the most part with shrapnel; and when he has made definite, well-defined forecasts he has practically invariably gone wide the mark. In his introduction to "What is Coming?" Mr. Wells seeks to get a little honor in his own country as a prophet by pointing out that in "The World Set Free" he declared that the "big war" would be started in the Balkans—as though the Balkans hadn't been the troubled caldron of Europe for years without number; and he claims that he made a prophetic hit by naming Belgium as the battleground in the "coming struggle"—as though Belgium, before Mr. Wells was heard of, had not been called the cockpit of Europe.

Mr. Wells is a writer, a novelist, a maker of fiction, a fellow trained to be interesting and novel; and as such he is among the most distinguished of living Englishmen. But when it comes to economics he expounds the obvious; and in prophecies he expounds the absurd—if it is a prophecy—and at such times he is cautiously vague, speaking in generalities, though he does say with a kind of hesitating positiveness that the war will end by arbitration late in 1916—thereby repeating what many who claim no robes of prophecy have said before him.

His Perspicacious Prophecies.

Mr. Wells recants a recent prophecy and comes to the conclusion that the allies will not be able completely to smash Germany; and predicts that the allied nations may form a federation, eventually to be a world government, to hold the balance of power against the central powers—or, in other words, stated plainly, he means that the Triple Entente and the Triple Alliance will continue to exist in some modified form perhaps, as they have existed in the past. A most brilliant prophecy, indeed.

He expounds with gravity the theory that a nation cannot go bankrupt like an individual; and that after the war there will be a great political and industrial reorganization in England and elsewhere; and that unless the situation is wisely met there may be much distress; that Socialism will be very strong throughout the allied nations, only it will take the form of collectivism, much the same as in Germany, for the purpose of destroying individualistic monopoly. He thinks women will be quieter and have much better manners than the suffragettes were displaying when attempting to horsewhip Asquith, because they will have exhausted their sexual exuberance by work incident to warfare.

Reads Yankee Papers.

Oh yes, we are informed by this profoundly astute observer, and prophet, that the United States has suddenly discovered that the republic of the Western Hemisphere cannot remain completely aloof from European affairs, and that expressions to this effect may be detected by other astute observers in the newspapers of the United States.

Mr. Wells prophesies cautiously that the French may build up an empire among the Arabs, that the Italians may do likewise, and that Germany may lose many of her foreign possessions. He suggests that phonetic books for the study of one another's language be compiled so that Englishmen may learn to speak French and Russian, and the other way around.

In closing, we propose to give a bit of evidence to disclose just how much of a prophet and just how much of a close observer H. G. Wells is. He is posing as the man who foresaw the war, who warned people about it. He damns Germany with all the adjectives at his command, and pretends that he has long known the German heart. But in "Social Forces in England and America," published less than three years ago, or just before the war, Mr. Wells wrote that one must learn the German language "if one would be abreast of scientific knowledge and philosophical thought, or see many good plays or understand the contemporary."

Did He Once Perceive the Truth?

We hold no brief for Germany, but it is wearisome to watch this heavy-minded Englishman posing as a prophet, and so we propose to quote a little further from Mr. Wells, as he wrote some few months before war was declared: "We in Great Britain are now intensely jealous of Germany. We are jealous of Germany not only because the Germans outnumber us, and have a much larger and more diversified country than ours, and lie in the very heart and body of Europe, but because in the last hundred years while we have fed on platitudes and vanity, they have had the energy and humility to develop a splendid system of education, to toil at science and art and literature, to develop social organization, to master and better our methods of business and industry, and to clamber above us in the scale of civilization. This has humiliated and irritated rather than chastened us."

That paragraph—others could be cited, too—seems sufficient to burn a big hole in the seat of his prophet's robe.

"THE HIDDEN SPRING."

Prefatorially we are told by Clarence B. Kelland in "The Hidden Spring" (Harper & Brothers) that "in every man there is a hidden spring. Some men find it and press it themselves; in others it is touched by chance or circumstance; in still others the fingers of hardship or adversity fumble until they fall upon it."

When Donald G. Keeth, fresh from college and with his dog Mirabeau, arrives in Owasco and hangs out his shingle as a man of law, he has no particular ambition. But about the same time he discovers the beautiful Miss Erickson, he also finds that Quartus Hembly is the octopus owning the lumber mills, the courts, the very lives of many people, and the "hidden spring" is touched.

He takes the case of the village drunkard against Hembly and proves that the largest of the millionaire's holdings belong to Kersten—who fights hard and wins freedom from booze. The death-bed confession of Miss Erickson's father knocks the last prop from under the feet of Hembly, and he is not only beaten but becomes half insane.

"The Hidden Spring" is written along the conventional lines of the hero fighting and crushing the lawless millionaire, and being encouraged to it by the beautiful maiden; and it's not much better than the usual story of its kind, though Keeth himself is a much more likable and attractive young man than the average hero.

"THOSE GILLESPIES."

"Those Gillespies" (Houghton Mifflin Company,) by William John Hopkins, is a novel of indifferent quality, built about a super-child who, after the traditional manner of precocious children on the stage and in fiction, doesn't neglect to reunite affectionately his estranged parents.

The illustrations by Lester G. Hornby are artistic and attractive—but neither add interest to nor illuminate the story.

"Those Gillespies" dawdles through situations that have become commonplace in fiction. A young playwright meets a beautiful girl and shortly afterward gets a commission from the eccentric producer. For some reason or other producers of plays are always presented as fat and freakish. Barcarole is no exception.

Mrs. Gillespie plans to run off with a Frenchified American, but the super-child sportively follows her to the train and her nobler instincts rise up and say, "Home, James"—only in this case the chauffeur's name is Perrine. The important thing is that she changes her mind and loves her husband, and both worship the child, Rudolph. All of which, like most things that are self-consciously moral, is very trite.

BOOKS AND AUTHORS

Concerning Plagiarism.

The New York Nation says, "To give company to the monthly (The Atlantic) which published a short story 'lifted' from Frank Norris, a New York newspaper has discovered in a weekly (Collier's) another that, with a Mexican setting, is a replica of Maupassant's 'Boule de Suif.' It has always been thought half-legitimate to levy on foreign genius. Older readers may remember the lady who used to make it a regular business to adapt French novels under her own name. Disraeli's taking of a funeral oration from Theirs, the eulogy by J. J. Ingalls which was discovered to have been appropriated from Massillon, will always be famous. It is not so often that a Kitchener is accused of borrowing from a Curzon. But that two such borrowings should have slipped into well-edited periodicals provokes wonder how far plagiarism might be carried on undetected. The world's fund of fiction is so vast, so small a fraction can be known to any one man, that if it were attempted on a wide scale editors would pay for one piece of stolen goods after another. Doubtless there is much undiscovered stealing—it was the merest accident that convicted Charles Reade of poaching on a Frenchwoman's preserve, and the noise led to the discovery that two other Englishmen and a German had helped themselves to the same story."

The Shop Girl and Kitchener.

It is an interesting fact that the death of Lord Kitchener has made American editorial writers think of a shop girl—a shop girl, however, who, doubtless, many would claim is as deathless as the memory of K. of K., that is Dulcie, child of the brain of O. Henry, and heroine of "An Unfinished Story." Dulcie, it will be recalled, got a wage of $6 a week. On her bedroom wall was a portrait of Kitchener. He was Dulcie's ideal of a gallant knight. Gen. Kitchener was her only friend—watching her with such beautiful, stern eyes, the only one there was to approve or condemn what she did. "He looked as if he might have a secret sorrow, and his wonderful moustache was a dream, and she was a little afraid of that stern yet tender look in his eyes."

More than once when the longing for ease, a temptation to supplement her earnings as some of her less particular friends were doing, had almost overcome Dulcie a look at that uncompromising face turned the tide and the invitations of a certain over-friendly "Piggy" were again refused.

Fascination of Mexico.

Edith O'Shaughnessy, author of the recently published book, "A Diplomat's Wife in Mexico," which is creating much discussion, declares that "the history of Mexico is without exception the most fascinating, the most romantic, and the most improbable in the world; and the seed of Spanish civilization implanted in this marvelous land has produced a florescence so magnetic, so magical, that the dullest feel its charm. All that has been done for Mexico the Spaniards did, despite their cruelties, their greeds, and their passions. We, of the north, have used it only as a quarry, leaving no monuments to God nor testaments to man in place of the treasure that we have piled on departing ship or train."

Knows One American.

A. S. Neill, author of "A Dominie's Log," which was published in the spring by Robert M. McBride & Co., has never visited America. He says: "I have always longed to see America and will cross whenever I have the opportunity. I think it was O'Neill Latham's drawings of American girls that made me long to see the States, but I suppose that every girl over there isn't Helen of Troy in reality. I have met only one American—a man. He was my boss in a magazine office in London, and he was continually rushing about. He said to me one day: 'Neill, you're the slowest man I ever seen.' He was no doubt quite right, but I replied: 'Well, you see, you hustle about all the time while I sit here and smoke. I'm thinking out ideas for the magazine while you are waltzing around the room looking for your pen.'"

German War Diaries.

The French Ministry of War has thrown open to Arthur Gleason, whose recent book, "Golden Lads," contains the only American eyewitness report of German atrocities in Belgium, its collection of original diaries taken from German dead and German prisoners. A thousand or more of these diaries, written in pencil day by day on march, tell, Mr. Gleason reports, of the shooting of old men, women, and children and the pillaging and burning of houses of noncombatants. Mr. Gleason calls them a complete human record of the war and a dramatic indictment of Germany. Certain of the soldiers express themselves as shocked by their orders to commit "frightfulness." "We are behaving like vandals," records a Saxon officer, on three different dates, in his little black-covered notebook.

The "Wandering" Author.

Having only recently returned from a journey of several years through Mexico and the South American countries, Harry A. Franck, author of "A Vagabond Journey Around the World," wrote his new book, "Tramping Through Mexico, Guatemala, and Honduras," which the Century Co. is shortly to issue; then he enlisted in Troop C, First Cavalry, Brooklyn, and is already on his way back to the Mexican border. Following his customary plan Mr. Franck, before he put a word on paper about Mexico, spent months walking over it, stopping in various localities and working long enough to get the feel of the different sections. Knowing Mexico thoroughly, and speaking the language, the author may be of more than ordinary use to his regiment, especially if the First Cavalry goes across the border.

Pacifistic Campaign Book.

Frederic C. Howe's "Why War" (Charles Scribner's Sons.) reads like the enlargement of a Henry Ford advertisement against war. Munition interests, Mr. Howe enlightens the nation, are behind the unseemly agitation for preparedness; it is they who seek to have the battleships "scrapped" and the armaments discarded for others more expensive; and Mr. Howe would have us contemplate the serenity of Woodrow Wilson, and then imagine what terrible things would happen to the country if we had a big army and navy and a less composed, reasonable, intelligent President were in office! Which is quite the normal attitude for a Federal job holder at the present time to take, and Mr. Howe, in dedicating his book to Mr. Wilson, very frankly takes it.

"Why War" has in it a lot of information, some of which is more reliable than others, but Mr. Howe's ability to reason is on a par with that of the platitudinous Walter Lippmann, whose plan for universal peace (by no means original with Mr. Lippmann) Mr. Howe presents with commendation.

Pulitzer's Review.

Volume I, number I, of Pulitzer's Review, a monthly founded and edited by Walter Pulitzer, published in New York, appeared July 1st. Its chief interests seem to be in things financial and political, and it declares for preparedness and lots of it, Republican principles, a change of Mexican policy, and devotes a page to theatrical and one to literary subjects.

Unique Work Unfinished.

At the time of her death Jean Webster (Mrs. McKinney) was attempting to work out, in the story upon which she was engaged, a somewhat unusual method. It was her intention to write both a novel and a play on the same theme, without in the ordinary way producing the novel first and then dramatizing it, or vice versa. Her idea was to complete the novel and then as far as possible putting out of her mind the details of the story, work it out on entirely fresh lines as a play. Mrs. McKinney had actually finished about two-thirds of the novel before her death.

New Publications.

Harper & Brothers published on July 20 the following books: "The Thirteenth Commandment," a new novel by Rupert Hughes; "Expert Auction," by R. V. Shepard; and "Retail Selling," by James W. Fisk.

"Shakespeare's Theater."

"Shakespeare's Theater," by Ashley H. Thorndike, presents all the available information in regard to the theater of Shakespeare's time, its organization, regulation, actual stage arrangement and relation to contemporary life. The author has consulted all the discovered documentary evidence, which, though it has long engaged the attention of specialists, has never before been collected and studied as a whole, and has reconstructed a vivid and accurate picture of the English stage at the time when Shakespeare's plays were first presented before an audience.

The theater of Shakespeare's time, Prof. Thorndike points out, was a public institution, protected by the court and regulated by the City Council; it exerted its influence on every phase of popular life and in turn reflected the culture, intelligence and temper of the times. London was little more than a mediaeval walled city, with palaces and hovels almost side by side on its avenues and back lanes, and its places of amusement crowded into the fields beyond the gates, where the sport of bear baiting competed with "Hamlet" for popular favor.

The construction of the theater and the actual arrangement of the stage itself are fully discussed, the materials being drawn from the evidence of old drawings, contemporary descriptions, and stage directions; the Elizabethan producer's use of scenery and properties, the question of the stage curtain, entrances and exits, actors and acting—these are topics to which Prof. Thorndike has devoted exhaustive study, but with imaginative interpretation unhampered by over-exact literalness. Several chapters are devoted to the public and social aspects of the stage; the court theaters, government regulation, the censorship and the actors' companies. A chapter is devoted to the position and condition of the dramatists, and also to the audience, whose taste and education were the determining factors in the development of English drama.

The book is illustrated with thirty reproductions of old prints, plans, and playbills, which help to discover the Shakespearean stage in any of its aspects. (The Macmillan Company.)

WILLIAM BUTLER YEATS.

REVERIES OVER CHILDHOOD AND YOUTH. By William Butler Yeats. The Macmillan Company, New York.

Mr. Yeats tells of those first impressions in childhood that he remembers, tells of his thoughts and moods, relatives and friends, particularly of his father, and of his reflections and schooling and various experiences.

As a child he was saturated with Irish folklore and mysticism, and he calls attention to instances where some experience or tale appeared in or affected some later poem or story. In early youth he wrote much poetry and was assiduous in pursuing dramatic themes and form because this style appealed most to his father.

"I persuaded myself that I had a passion for the dawn, and this passion, though mainly histrionic like child's play, an ambitious game, had moments of sincerity. Years afterwards when I had finished 'The Wanderings of Oisin,' dissatisfied with its yellow and its dull green, with all that overcharged colour inherited from the romantic movement, I deliberately reshaped my style, deliberately sought out an expression as of cold light and tumbling clouds. I cast off traditional metaphors and loosened my rhythm and . . . became as emotional as possible, but with an emotion which I described to myself as cold."

The "reveries" or reminiscences are put together without order, and only recurrently does one find the theme of interest to most people: the influences bearing upon, and the outcropping of the literary impulse. He says that as a student the only lessons he ever learned were those his father taught him, "for he terrified me by description of my moral degradation;" the first poetry to move him after "the stable-boy's Orange Rhymes" were "The Lays of Ancient Rome."

His father had not interest in poetry "where there was generalization or abstraction however impassioned," and read aloud the first speeches of "Prometheus Unbound," but never the "ecstatic lyricism" of the fourth act.

Mr. Yeats says: "I had begun to write poetry in imitation of Shelley and of Edmund Spenser, play after play—and I invented fantastic and incoherent plots. My lines seldom scanned for I could not understand the prosody in books, although there were many lines that taken by themselves had music."

The last of the book is taken up largely with comment on investigation of things "psychic" and acquaintanceships with politicians.

A REAL WAR POEM.

A SONG OF THE GUNS. By Gilbert Frankau. Houghton Mifflin Company, Boston.

A note explains that: "'A Song of the Guns' was written under what are probably the most remarkable conditions in which a poem has ever been composed. The author, who is now serving in Flanders, was present at the battle of Loos, and during a lull in the fighting—when the gunners, who had been sleepless for five nights, were resting like tired dogs under their guns—he jotted down the main theme of his poem. After the battle the artillery brigade to which he was attached was ordered to Ypres, and it was during the long trench warfare in this district, within sight of the ruined tower of Ypres Cathedral, that the poem was finally completed. The last three stanzas were written at midnight in brigade headquarters with the German shells screaming into the ruined town."

The English don't seem able to write good poetry unless they are at their ease; and the war verse has for the most part been wretched. The Americans, outside of Lincoln Colcord, have also been more noisy than attractive with their martial versifying. A prosy lot, the whole of them, substituting agitation for fervor and herding calamitous words out of a thesaurus to convey the emotions they feel they ought to feel.

Capt. Frankau has written with Kiplingesque phrase and intensity, too Kiplingesque for his own credit perhaps, but at least the lines leap out with the emotional stress of a man who feels, and knows of what he writes.

"The Voice of the Slaves" is one of, if not the best, of short sequence making up "A Song of the Guns:"

"Ours are the hands that unleash
The blind gods that raven by night
The lords of terror at dawn
When the landmarks are blotted from sight
By the thick curdled churnings of smoke,
When the lost trenches crumble and spout
Into the roaring fountains of flame;
Till, their prison walls down, with a shout
And a cheer, ordered line after line,
Black specks on the barrage of gray
That we lift—as they leap—to the clock,
Our infantry storm to the fray.

"These are our masters, the slim,
Grim muzzles that irk in the pit;
That chafe for the rushing of wheels,
For the teams plunging madly to bit
As the gunners swing down to unkey,
For the trails sweeping half-circle-right,
For the six breech locks clashing as one
To a target viewed clear on the sight—
Gray masses the shells search and tear
Into fragments that bunch as they run—
For the hour of the red battle-harvest,
The dream of the slaves of the gun!

"We have bartered our souls to the guns;
Every fiber of body and brain
Have we trained to them, chained to them. Serfs?
Aye! But proud of the weight of our chains,
Of our backs that are bowed to their workings,
To hide them and guard and disguise,
Of our ears that are deafened with service,
Of hands that are scarred, and of eyes
Grown hawklike with marking their prey,
Of wings that are slashed as with swords
When we hover, the turn of a blade
From the death that is sweet to our lords."

Those are lines that make one feel the man is writing of war as it is fought on the fields of Belgium and France—not in a moving-picture theater.

"Ammunition Column," "Eyes in the Air" and "Gun-Teams" are other graphic poems singing phases of the campaign and battle.

THEME OF THE HOUR.

AMERICANISM: What It Is. By David Jayne Hill. D. Appleton & Co., New York.

David Jayne Hill has brilliantly presented the problems and needs of Americanism in his latest book; which is written for people who think, rather than for those who think they think. He shows something of the difficulty in attaining the ideal citizenship between the two extremes of democracy and imperialism, but lays it down that the palladium of the republic is in the perpetuation of the "rights of the individual citizen as guaranteed by the Constitution."

He points out that America has long considered herself as a world power without reckoning as to whether or not she had a world potency; and that we are not only unprepared in a military sense, but unprepared commercially for the titanic economic struggle that will indubitably follow the close of the war. But while he favors energetic action on the part of the government along the lines of military and commercial preparedness, he opposes the socialistic and imperial idea of allowing the state to dominate the individual, and sums up his attitude thus:

"The whole conception of life is based upon the significance of the individual; but the latest, if not the prevailing fashion of thought, is to speak slightingly of the individual—of his rights, of his capacities, and of his responsibilities. We are at present seeking progress, not through development of the individual, but through what society as a whole can do for itself; forgetting that society is a purely abstract idea, possessing no inherent power either of initiative or of achievement. Yet it has become almost a reproach to stand for the rights of the individual, who is the only motive power that society possesses."

David Jayne Hill, it may be explained for those unfamiliar with his work, is a historian of distinction, a student of government who has weight to his words, and a diplomat of wide experience.

"BLOW THE MAN DOWN."

Holman Day has written some good stories, but none that we think so well of as "Blow the Man Down" (Harper & Brothers,) a novel of some 500 closely-printed pages, romantic and thrilling and written with care.

Big steamship interests are at war in the background, "high finance" is played, unscrupulous work done and tragedies wrought, and in the foreground of the story is the casual and unconsidered effect of that war on the pawns—pawns only by force of circumstances which dominate the narrative, for Capt. Mayo is no weakling though he is time and time again beaten down by luck and design.

Ill luck besets him from the hour when, as captain of Marston's yacht, he throws his arms around lovely Alma Marston—whose father is trying to put a fence around the sea.

Mayo is thrust from one adventure into another, he rises and falls as a sea captain and rises again; he is tricked and hoodwinked; and not his least disappointment comes from the girl he loves, for Alma is flighty and desperate, and when she elopes with a $75-a-week clerk, she takes passage on the same coaling ship where Mayo works as a deckhand.

The cranky reader may be inclined to think there are too many shipwrecks—but the best possible defense may be given in the reply that, while there are "quite a few," none of them are uninteresting or commonplace. All in all, "Blow the Man Down" is an extremely rare novel of love and adventure, satisfying but not sentimental, bringing the hero out on top with the best woman in the book loving him, but not doing it the way the reader expects.

The characterization of Mr. Day's old sea captains, Capt. Candage, Capt. Downs, Capt. Wass, the handling of Alma's variegated character, the poise and sweetness of Polly, who makes an exquisite and artistic foil for the impulsive, less generous heiress, are all put into the story with the skill that makes it a pleasure to read slowly and re-read in parts. As a novel of entertainment, built on a complex, romantic, dramatic plot, "Blow the Man Down" is among the very choicest of the season's fiction.

"THE PRISONER."

Alice Brown in "The Prisoner" (The MacMillan Company) has dawdled exquisitely through 100,000 words of refined and palpable social uplift, retouched a clap-trap plot with a little of her well-known delicacy, painted a few lilies, gilded an embezzler and written a perfectly conventional and dull, tedious, parochial argument to show that all men who go to prison are not bad.

It is meant to be a heavyweight novel; one of those that appeal to the intellectuals. Intellectual affectation sticks out all over it. But it is just soggy; with its characters all good and all bad, and Jeff Blake the embezzler being posed as a martyr who misused funds so as to redeem a diamond necklace his wife stole and pretended to lose.

Madame Beattie, aunt of Esther Blake, wife of Jeff, is a worn out opera singer with a string of phoney diamonds which she represents were given her in Europe by a royal personage. Esther steals these paste gems and falsely says she dropped them overboard one night while taking a cruise; so Jeff has to get money to reimburse the Madame for the loss—or for what she claims as the loss.

Jeff goes to prison and makes a name for himself. He reforms the prison paper and excites national interest through the letters he writes for the prisoners to read. From what the reader is permitted to know of the substance in these letters he will likely conclude that Jeff is sophomoric as a June graduate; and that Miss Brown doesn't know much about convicts if she thinks that is the sort of sociological aesthetics that would appeal to them.

Jess has two step-sisters. Beautiful, lovely girls. Perfect. Everybody, as we said, is good or bad with Miss Brown; saint or angel—never human. And they are very indignant that Esther considers Jeff unfit to be her husband after he has in a way gone to prison for her, and takes no further interest in him. As a matter of fact, Esther is interested in a rich young bachelor, and finally elopes with him, thereby clearing the way so Jeff can honorably love his step-sister, who, having found the diamond necklace in Esther's possession, steals it from her.

Miss Brown's "The Prisoner" is a surprising book to follow "My Love and I," or even her prize play, "Children of Earth." But "The Prisoner"—it is heavy, stale, flat and unprofitable.

ESTABLISHING THE SOUL.

THE PHYSICAL THEORY OF THE SOUL. By H. LaV. Twining. Published by the Author, Westgate, Cal.

Prof. Twining is a spiritualist who seeks to make "a presentation of psychic phenomena from the physical standpoint in order to form a real basis upon which to build a logical and probable theory of constitution of the soul and a real scientific explanation of its phenomena."

He is obviously honest and ingenious, but not, especially at crucial points, convincing; basing his belief in immortality on spiritualistic phenomena and seeking to explain it by physics and chemistry.

The sole merit or fault that books of this nature have depends on whether or not they are convincing. There is quite certainly no such thing as proof. And though Prof. Twining bewilderingly invokes the "fourth dimension," describes almost intimately the "astral world," has a firm belief in spirits that not only communicate with mortals but draw energy from them and materialize, he rejects the theory of "reincarnation" with amusing dogmatism, saying: "There is really no evidence of the existence of the reincarnation of individuals. What seems to be evidence is not. . . . Furthermore there is no necessity for reincarnation. Those who die in infancy will grow to maturity in the astral world, where every experience (except eating and working for money) can be had."

MRS. MASSON,

the noted palmist, of London, England, may be consulted at 322 SOUTH SPRING ST., by those desiring CAREFUL, CONSCIENTIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC HAND READINGS, FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.

The earnest student and thinker will soon learn in his investigations along psychological lines that that which pertains to occult phenomena proper can readily be distinguished from crude and oft-exposed SLEIGHT-OF-HAND TRICKS, the most common of which is the telling of the subject's name, age, etc., AFTER HE HIMSELF HAS WRITTEN THAT information.

PALMISTRY HONESTLY PRACTICED WILL NOT tell your name, but it WILL give you information of considerable greater value in every-day life.

Your vocation, your present line of work, matters of health and domestic life, financial conditions and ways and means of climbing out of a rut of ill luck into wide paths of success and prosperity, can all be told you through scientific palmistry. WITHOUT A SINGLE QUESTION, WRITTEN OR VERBAL.

MRS. MASSON DOES NOT APPEAL TO IGNORANT SUPERSTITION, BUT TO THE FINEST INTELLIGENCE.

"I certainly wish I were back at 'the place like home,'" writes a permanent guest of the Belmont, who is now enjoying (?) a visit in the East. "It is simply broiling here, and many times every day I wish I were back in my nice, cool, comfortable apartment at the Belmont. Am going to cut my visit as short as I decently can and get back HOME."

Another guest, detained in San Francisco by business, writes: "Hope we will be through in the next few days, and then we can hurry HOME to the dear old Belmont, and we will be mighty glad to get there."

That's the way our guests feel about our houses, and it's the result of our methods and policies. The Belmont and the Belcamp are not merely places for one to stay—we do our utmost to make them HOMES for our guests.

Does that mean anything to YOU?

If it does call and talk the situation over with us.

PURCHASERS, ATTENTION—
You are reading these columns today and wondering whether it is better to buy a low-priced new car or a high grade used car at a low price. In the first instance you cannot dodge the excessive depreciation and the fact that you are driving a cheap car. In the second, you are afraid that you may not get a good used car. Anyone would rather have a good used car than a cheap new one, but you feel that the [illegible] is against you. The only used cars I offer for sale are those traded in on the new Chandler Six. Some of the cars traded in are poor, but the majority are good as new. We will not trade in a poor car knowingly as we are [illegible] the business without it. The used cars in poor condition are not offered for sale at our sales room. We have other channels to dispose of them. The good cars are sold by us with a positive written guarantee behind them. Many people trade in excellent cars because they want something new and can afford to stand the loss. This is your gain and it is a positive gain. It costs nothing to investigate. Open Sundays 11 to 4 p.m. or any evening by phone appointment. Used Car Department of the Chandler Six, 1136 S. OLIVE ST. Phones, 60895, Main 3459.

FOR SALE AT A SACRIFICE—YOU WANT to buy a car this way if you can. You want to buy one from a person who is down and out, who must sell because he needs the money. This may be right, but did you ever stop to think that you would have no recourse if things were not as represented? Isn't it better to buy from a company whose business is not second-hand cars, but who are forced to sell second-hand cars because they must take them in trade on new cars, and from persons whose cars are in perfect condition, but desire to keep up to the minute and therefore trade their car in on a new one. A company who sees in every purchaser of a used car a possibility of a new car sale later on and who therefore finds it good business to really take care of such a purchaser after as well as before they purchase—a company that is one of the strongest financially in this city and one that never makes a statement but those which it is willing to sign in writing and guarantee to be the truth, and whose used car department is managed by a man who has been eight years in the automobile business in this city and one who knows that what the purchaser wants is to know exactly the truth, and is willing to learn if the car is not perfect, and willing to purchase that car if he knows that he has been told all the bad things about it, and can bank on those statements? We say that you can absolutely depend on us. Come in, talk to us, and we believe you will be satisfied. Open Sunday, 11 to 4 p.m. Any evening by phone appointment. Used car department of the Chandler Six, 1136 SOUTH OLIVE STREET. Phones: Home 60895—Main 3459.

WANTED—MINING MONEY—MR. MINING INvestor or Stockbuyer, if you had had a chance two years ago to buy a good interest in six of the best groups of claims on the strike in the Oatman district you would be a very rich man today. I have that opportunity to offer today in a district that is tremendously rich and has intentionally been kept from the public to avoid a rush. I have the cream of the district (owner) lots of work done and being done. I can show some exceedingly rich ore and carefully taken samples, that will run better than $100. In taking samples I have been careful not to fool myself. I want money to back me and keep the development going while I raise a vast amount for extensive development. I am a fairly good money-getter. If you have $1000 or $5000, let me hear from you and you will make money from the start with me. This has never been advertised or offered before. Address F, box 258, TIMES OFFICE.

XXXVTH YEAR. SUNDAY MORNING, JULY 30, 1916. THE MART Transactions in Houses and Lots Bargains in Blocks and Squares

FACT AND COMMENT.

One of the sanest and most practical pieces of legislation urged in a long time in this community is that designed to bring about the consolidation of the offices of the county and city assessors, taken up with earnestness by the Los Angeles Realty Board. Thoughtful observers have long advocated this move to do away with the useless duplication of effort and expense upon the part of two assessment bodies covering the same ground year after year, but it has remained for the organized realty men to take decisive action. That the present state of affairs will be remedied almost goes without saying, for there is no good argument against the change that is suggested.

Los Angeles long voiced its impatience over a system of taxation and assessment that resulted in widely varying values being placed annually on the same properties by the city and county assessors. It was largely with the view to correcting this defect in the assessment plan that the so-called Joint Bureau of Appraisal was organized and the 100,000 expense saddled upon the public for that extra department incurred. The two regular assessors and the bureau among them finally managed to agree upon uniform valuations for all properties assessed in Los Angeles for this year's taxes. Although there has been a storm of protest against the appraisals arrived at and the methods employed, it can at least be said that the assessments distributed, such as they are, at least have the virtue of being uniform.

The triple assessment of this year has served to illustrate as nothing before it the uselessness of the annual duplication of work by the regular assessors. It has reduced the whole scheme of assessments as hitherto carried on in Los Angeles to an absurdity to have three separate sets of figures. People are asking why it should be necessary to spend the extra public funds required to get more than one assessment made of Los Angeles property when only one set of valuations is needed. Why, they are asking, shouldn't the whole thing be done by one department every year? It takes inefficiency run riot sometimes to convince the public of the vital importance of efficient business methods in governmental affairs.

The Advantages.

Roughly speaking, it has been costing the city and the county 0,000 each year to assess property and collect taxes in Los Angeles city. It is estimated by men eminently competent to judge that 0,000 a year could be saved to the city of Los Angeles if the assessment and collection in the city in behalf of both the municipality and the county were to be done by the County Assessor's and Tax Collector's offices alone and the offices of City Assessor and City Tax Collector abolished. If this plan were to be put in operation, it is declared, it would cost the city only about $10,000 a year instead of $100,000, as at present, to have Los Angeles property assessed and Los Angeles taxes collected.

Nor is the saving of expense the only advantage. Under the plan property owners would receive only one tax bill instead of two. There would be only one place to pay taxes, saving shoe leather, car fare and postage for those who at present have to look after two sets of bills. Adjustments could all be made with a single board of equalization, an advantage that is bound to be appreciated by any complainant who has ever had to appear before two such boards. The change would moreover do away with the confusion incidental to present methods.

There is nothing experimental about the plan, some sixteen incorporated cities in Los Angeles county already having turned over their assessment work to the County Assessor and their collections to the County Tax Collector. These places include Claremont, South Pasadena, Glendora, Tropico, Sierra Madre and Burbank, as well as smaller communities, all of which are said to have found the method most satisfactory. Outside of the county some of the larger cities of the State, including Oakland, Fresno, Riverside, Redlands and San Bernardino, have tried the plan and found it practical as well as economical.

The movement to do away with useless duplication of assessments, in fact, was sufficiently wide spread a year ago to lead to the passage of a State enabling act to facilitate the consolidation of the city and county assessors' offices in such cities as desired it. This law provides that when a city wishes to turn its assessment work over to a county it shall pay for the county's service 1 per cent. on the first $25,000 of its taxes collected and one-fourth of 1 per cent. on all over that amount. Had the plan been in operation in Los Angeles last year, it would have cost this city comething over $9000 to have had its assessment and collection work done on this basis.

Getting at It.

The Los Angeles Realty Board has a committee composed of Herbert L. Cornish W. I. Hollingsworth and Richard J. Schweppe at work on the movement at this time. The efforts of these gentlemen has thus far been confined almost entirely to getting information of value in a campaign for the plan. The thing will have to be voted upon by the people of the city in order that the charter may be amended to cover the proposed changes, and, following that, the amendments themselves will have to be ratified by the legislature. If all this is done quickly enough, there is no reason why the plan should not be in operation next year, saving the taxpayers $90,000 in 1917.

Just at present those working for the consolidation are waiting to see whether the agitation for cafe dancing is going to be carried to the point of a special election. If it is, they expect to get their proposition onto the same ballot. If not, they are considering asking the Council to declare a special election for the submission of the plan to the voters. The important thing, they explain, is to get the charter amendment made so that it can be ratified in the coming January by the Legislature.

Special elections are to be discouraged as a general thing, having piled enormous and useless burdens on the taxpaying public, but if ever one was justified, this one would seem to be. The $30,000 which this special election would cost would result in the saving of $90,000 to the taxpayers next year and on that basis is worth considering.

SOLD FOR CASH.

Robert Marsh & Co. report having sold to W. K. Murphy, for a local client, two lots in the Gramercy Park tract, consisting of a frontage of 110 feet on Twenty-fourth street east of Gramercy place, by a depth of 139 feet. The consideration is given at $9600 cash. To S. M. Folsom, the same firm has sold 114 feet on Gramercy place by 110 feet on Twenty-fourth street, for a given price of $9400 cash.

IN NEW LOCATION.

The H. Raphael Company, formerly at No. 643 South Main street, has moved to larger quarters at the southwest corner of Eighth and Los Angeles streets, occupying a new two-story brick building. The entire lower floor will be devoted to window and plate glass, opalite and mirrors, while the upper floor will be given over to Murphy oscillating and wall beds manufactured by the Southern California Hardwood and Manufacturing Company.

"North Beach."

PIER HERALDS NEW ACTIVITY.

LOOFF PROJECT FORERUNNER OF DEVELOPMENT.

Valuable Shore Holding Facing Santa Monica's Gigantic New Amusement Wharf is Subdivided for Market—Local Firm Given the Agency.

The building of the great Looff pier at Santa Monica, marking, as it does, an epoch in the annals of the North Beach district, has been the signal for the launching of several other important development projects both of a public and private character in this ever-popular shore resort. Probably the most important of these is represented in the announcement of the subdivision for the market of the property now owned jointly by E. P. Benjamin and B. N. Moss of Hollywood and which is known all over Southern California as the "old Southern Pacific air line terminal." The holding, which is directly across Ocean promenade from the new pier, is to be handled by W. I. Hollingsworth & Co., as sole agents.

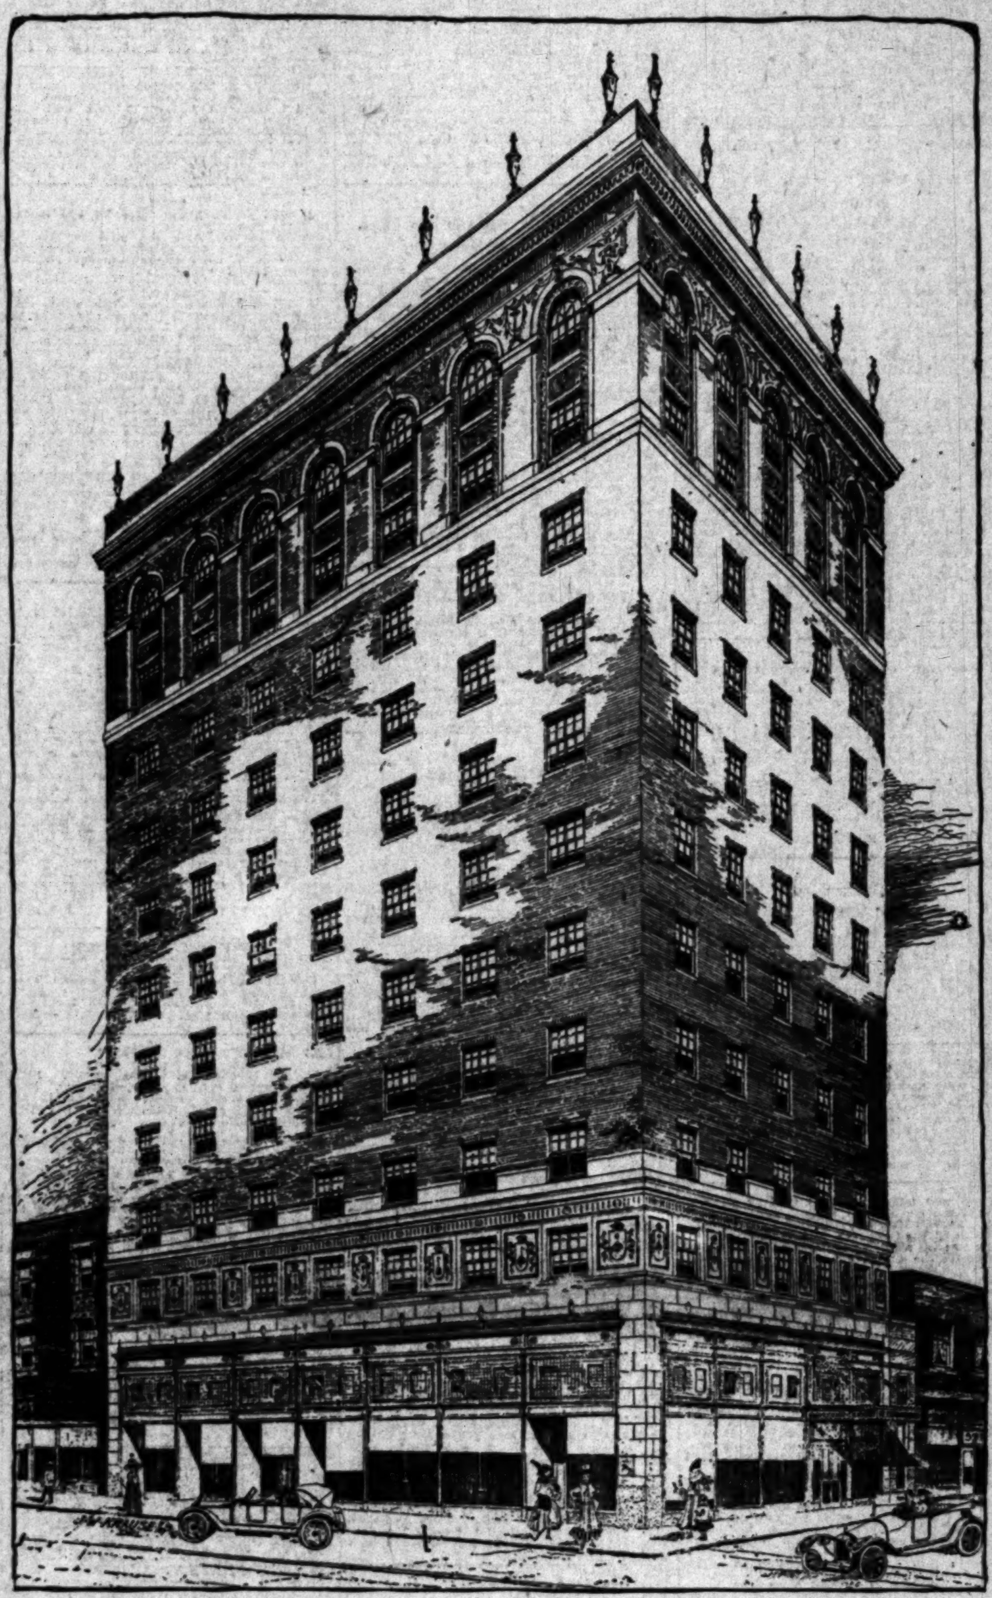
The land is bounded on the north by Colorado avenue and the approach to the Santa Monica municipal pier, on the east by Ocean avenue and on the south by Seaside Terrace. The sand frontage from which the Looff pier extends seaward was formerly a part of the property, having been purchased from Mr. Benjamin and Mr. Moss by the interests back of the big amusement project. There are thirty-two lots in all in the holding, adapted to business, hotel and apartment-house purposes. Property all around the former terminal site has already been put to these uses.

The owners of the property have already made extensive improvements. Appian way, which formerly stopped at Seaside Terrace, has been carried northward through the middle of the property as a forty-six-foot street to Colorado avenue, where it connects with the new highway that is being built along the foot of the Palisades northward to Santa Monica Canyon and a connection with the Topanga Canyon route and the State highway. With the completion of the link of roadway north of Colorado, Appian way will become a part of an automobile drive extending along the shore line from Santa Monica Canyon to Playa del Rey, and which is expected to become one of the most traveled highways in the section.

Another significant improvement carried out by the owners was the recent extension of the roadbed of the Pacific Electric air line, which was made by the electrizing of the old Southern Pacific steam line, under the Ocean-avenue viaduct and along the northern edge of the property to Ocean Front promenade. The route is declared to be the only one on the coast taking passengers directly to the surf, a factor largely instrumental in causing the great pleasure wharf to be placed where it is and which is expected to play an important part in still further popularizing and building up this part of the shore district.

The Looff pier is one of the marvels of the Southland coast, although as yet several weeks from completion. The pier, it is declared, will be the largest in point of actual floor area in the United States. It will extend out to sea from Ocean Front promenade for a distance of 1055 feet and will be, with the municipal pier, which it will adjoin, and with which it will be connected, over 300 feet in width. One of the huge buildings to be constructed on its deck is now practically completed and others are under way. A roller coaster going far out over the water and which will be one of the features of the project is also nearly finished.

Metropolitan Project for West Sixth.



Modern fireproof hotel to be built by Frank Simpson.

Plans for this, the most important downtown improvement announced in several months, have just been completed by the architectural firm of Morgan, Walls & Morgan, and the excavation contract has been let.

Skyscraper.

ADAPTED FROM THE COLONIAL.

New Downtown Hotel to Have Imposing Design.

Will go to Full Height Set by Ordinance.

May be Doubled in Size in Next Few Years.

The most important downtown building projected in months, the eleven-story fireproof hotel to be erected by Frank Simpson at the northwest corner of West Sixth street and Grand avenue, is to be started at once according to the architects, Morgan, Walls & Morgan, who report having let the contract for the excavations to J. A. Hill of this city during the past week. Announcement of the project itself was made exclusively in The Times several weeks ago.

The big hostelry will be a distinct addition to the impressive list of metropolitan improvements in Los Angeles and will contribute much to the skyline of the "hotel zone" on West Sixth. Its street fronts will be unusually imposing, being adapted from the colonial and being carried out in red ruffled brick and terra cotta. The ornamentation will be rich, especially on the two upper stories and roof line. A row of beautiful electroliers set above the cornice will make the new caravansary a landmark by night.

The site owned by Mr. Simpson has a frontage of eighty feet on Sixth by 120 feet on Grand, but the structure planned by the architects will cover only the south half of this lot, being eighty feet by sixty feet in ground area. Eventually it is the intention of the owner to double the size of the building by extending it to cover the entire property.

The building will be of reinforced concrete construction and will go to the height limit allowed by ordinance in this class of structures. It will contain 150 guest rooms, each with private bath, and all finished in mahogany. There will be a large lobby finished in marble and mahogany and floored with tile, and having on its mezzanine floor, reception rooms and parlors for ladies. Entrances will be provided from both streets. The plans call for a buffet and three well appointed stores on the Sixth street side.

The improvement will represent with its site a total investment of approximately $400,000. Work will be started at once and it is declared that the hotel will be ready for occupancy next spring.

The location is considered by realty men and hotel brokers, one of the most desirable in Los Angeles for a high class hostelry, being but three blocks from the heart of the downtown district at Sixth and Broadway, a block from the new shopping section on West Seventh street and a like distance from Central Park.

FOR INVESTMENT.

The McCarthy Company reports having sold to Frank Hoover a lot on the east side of Fedora street, between West Eighth and West Ninth streets. The site is 50x135 feet in size and was purchased as an investment.

IN THE FOOTHILLS.

A landscaping project notable for its magnitude is now being carried out at the head of Miller's Canyon in Hollywood Park by Dr. Ross Harris, a recent purchaser in this foothill subdivision at the edge of Hollywood. Dr. Harris has ten acres of ground and all of it is now being laid out preparatory to the planting of semi-tropical shrubs and fruits. Grace Cunard is now completing an attractive place near the crest of Inspiration Point in the same vicinity, while Otis Turner has just finished a seven-room bungalow in the district. The contract was let last week for a six-room bungalow to be built by Mrs. Laura Jones in the same hill section.

TRADES FOR LOTS.

A leaseholding at Nos. 701 to 709 West Third street, covering a two-story brick building, 100x110 feet in ground area, was transferred during the past week by Capt. Wilbert Melville to a local investor. The consideration is reported to have consisted of fifty-five lotes in Highway square, a subdivision in the city of Monrovia.

NEW RESIDENCES.

Permits Issued and Contracts Let for Many Homes During Week.

Among the permits for new buildings issued during the past week was one for a ten-room residence to be built by R. H. Moulton at No. 543 South Wilton place. Another was for a residence of similar size projected by Richard Ryse at No. 723 South Serrano street. Work is to be started this week on a ten-room house for Oswald Olivet in La Fayette Square. J. F. Stanford is about to start a ten-room house at No. 1744 Virginia road in the same subdivision. Hervey M. Porter has had plans drawn for a nine-room residence, which he will start at once on Westchester place, between Ninth and Tenth. Plans have been completed for an eight-room residence to be built by Neil S. McCarthy in Hollywood. The contract has been let for a seven-room house to be built by Louis F. Wolfskill at No. 851 Windsor avenue.

Following are some of the new bungalows for which plans have just been completed or contracts let: Seven-room bungalow for J. W. Whitten on Mariposa avenue, near West First street; seven-room bungalow for R. E. Imhoff at No. 533 North Avenue Fifty-four; four six-room bungalows for Mrs. F. K. Smailes, on North Mariposa avenue; six-room bungalow for William G. Haller at No. 2322 West boulevard; six-room bungalow for J. A. Deelaney at No. 3602 Eighth avenue, and three five-room bungalows for W. C. Shanks at Nos. 722-726-732 Wilcox avenue.

ADDS TO HOLDINGS.

An important transaction in Antelope Valley acreage was concluded during the past week when George S. Marygold, of the Southern California Music Company of this city, acquired 320 acres about nine miles northwest of Lancaster at Five Points. The consideration is given by Edwin J. Bowes, Jr., president of the Bowes Realty Company, which handled the deal, at $16,000. By the purchase Mr. Marygold has increased his holdings in the valley to about 2800 acres. The land just secured is in the immediate vicinity of a 1000-acre tract owned by Frank Hart, of the Southern California Music Company, and is not far from a 640-acre tract that is now being put into alfalfa by San Francisco interests.

"CLEAN-UP" SALES.

The Los Angeles Investment Company reports many recent sales as the result of its campaign for the "cleaning up" of scattered properties. Sales of houses at the following locations are announced: No. 1210 West Sixty-ninth street; No. 1014 West Seventy-fifth street; No. 1223 West Seventy-fifth street; No. 1223 West Seventy-sixth street; No. 1025 West Seventieth street; No. 1101 West Sixty-ninth street; No. 1034 West Sixty-ninth street; No. 4915 First avenue; No. 1716 West Fiftieth street; No. 6307 Meridian street, and No. 1575 East Jefferson street.

INCOME STRUCTURES.

New Apartment and Flat Projects Reported by Local Builders.

A two-story frame apartment house with plastered exterior walls and a marble entrance is to be started this week by Robert H. Hunstock on the north side of San Marino street near Hoover. Plans have been drawn and the contract let. Neil O. Nelson will this week start a twenty-room apartment house at Nos. 1801 to 1803 Normandie avenue.

Anton Kravchyk has had plans prepared for a twenty-room frame and plaster flat building to be erected on Third avenue near Twenty-third street. F. W. Murphy is about to start a flat containing two five-room suites and two four-room suites at Wilton place and West Forty-eighth street. Plans are now being drawn for a sixteen-room flat projected by Mrs. S. D. Parker at No. 1145 Lake street.

IN AUTO SECTION.

Another modern automobile building is to be added to the list already started in Los Angeles this year when Hal A. Curtis begins the construction of a two-story brick structure, which has been leased from him for a term of years by the Hartwell Motor Company. The building will occupy a site at No. 1224 South Flower street and will cover a ground area of 50x155 feet. It will be attractively faced with enameled brick, tile insets and molded cement trim being for ornamentation. Frank L. Stiff is the architect.

"North Beach." Pier heralds new activity.

The carrying out of this gigantic amusement project has been the signal for important development activities along the "North Beach," the most notable being the placing on market by W. I. Hollingsworth & Co., of the valuable Benjamin-Moss holdings, directly facing the pier.

THE CUYAMA RANCHO.
The property of the Perkins Land Company, 20,000 acres lying in the southeast corner of San Luis Obispo county, about 8000 acres, and balance in northeast corner of Santa Barbara county, all level and very rich soil, elevation about 2300 feet, and very perfect climate, soil all virgin, the place being vacated as a cattle ranch, surveyed, maps filed, and now ready to be sold in lots to suit. Water plentiful at from 50 to 100 feet, where wells have been bored. New town of Cuyama has been laid out and new boarding-house being completed and will soon be ready for the public, as also a postoffice has been applied for. A new well at the boarding-house will be started about July 1, same already arranged for. Telephone line will also be extended from Maricopa, Kern county, Cal., about 20 miles; this valley is exceptionally rich, and will be rapidly settled, reached by rail to Maricopa, thence by team or auto. We will try to fit terms to each individual need. The cities of Ventura, Santa Barbara and Santa Maria on the coast are all pushing for roads into this new territory, realizing it will soon be settled. It is not often settlers have the opportunity of buying direct from the original owner instead of the property having first passed through the hands of various exploiting promoters and agents. Until postoffice is established address PERKINS LAND COMPANY, Maricopa, Cal. F. C. Cherry, Manager.

BEAUTIFUL OF SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA FARM HOMES
IS WITHIN YOUR REACH.
We have a new plan, which makes it possible for a man with only a small amount of capital ($1500 upward) to own an orange or lemon grove property worth from $10,000 to $15,000, in one of the most favored sections of Southern California—on the Foothill Boulevard, on the electric line, with pure mountain water, gravity system, abundant supply at low cost, good soil, perfect drainage.
Our plan gives a family a decent living from the start, with good water, high improvements, good schools and neighbors—all with a less amount of capital than is required to make a start in one of the remote, rough, heated interior valleys.

WITH POULTRY.
Don't think of buying a poultry ranch or starting in the poultry business on a commercial scale until you have investigated the FONTANA POULTRY PLAN.
You cannot only start in the poultry business with less initial outlay, at Fontana, but you can also be building up valuable orange or lemon grove, and get the full value of the manure from your flock.
The Fontana Poultry Association shows how to build, helps get you hens or baby chicks, buys your feed for you at wholesale, ships and sells your eggs. Ideal conditions for poultry—high, dry, abundant sunshine. Investigate.

SCHOOL COMPLETED.

New Ramona Acres Enjoys Educational Advantages Second to None.

The residents of New Ramona Acres in the San Gabriel Valley are rejoicing over the completion of the new Garvey grammar school planned to serve their subdivision and other adjoining territory. The school is of brick construction and contains eight class-rooms, together with a large auditorium. It cost about $45,000.

Sales of suburban homes at New Ramona Acres are reported by the Janss Investment Company, which is handling the subdivision, to the following: C. E. Johnson, a former real estate operator of Oregon, one acre, $1500; G. W. Childs, recently from Texas, small plot improved with three-room house, $1350; Henry C. Kellett of Los Angeles, one and one-tenth acres of walnut orchard, $1400, and L. C. Camp, formerly of Oregon, one acre improved with four-room house, $2000. Mr. Kellett, it is understood, will improve his purchase with a five-room bungalow.

RUSSIAN NAVY EXPLOITS SINCE OUTBREAK OF WAR

Prowess of Muscovite Fleet Proved a Painful Surprise to Teutons.

BY CAPT. YVAN ANDREEVITCH
Of the Russian Navy.

SINCE the outbreak of the war in Europe very little has been printed in the press of America regarding the Russian navy and its many exploits both in the Baltic and the Black Sea. The following article from the pen of a Russian captain gives a highly-stirring account of what the Moskovite navies have accomplished in the war. It is the first time in the history of European naval history that an officer in active service has been permitted to write a signed article during the course of a war.

Among all the surprises that this war had reserved for the Germans there is one, and not the least, which has been particularly painful. It is to see the Russian navy, which the Teutons considered so negligible, face them, and even resist them with energy, and inflict on them very severe losses.

For twenty years the German navy was preparing itself for an offensive war in the Baltic. During this long period she has bent all her efforts towards a rapid war, considering it would be merely child's play to destroy the Russian fleet and to make herself mistress of that sea.

There, as elsewhere, she has been able to obtain a semblance of success, but there also she has had to reckon, and she will have to reckon more and more with the "will" of her enemies.

IMITATE TEUTON TACTICS.

But, you will say, if the Russian navy has obtained such an important success, why have they kept this secret so jealously? Why this excess of modesty? It is because the modern war on the sea is of special nature, secret war, par excellence, in which the conqueror, himself, should know how to conceal this success in such a way as to carry it further. It is a sullen and silent war, which is repugnant to the open and chivalrous character of the allies. It is a war of moles under the earth. A war of mines and submarines under the sea. The Germans have imposed it on us. And it has been necessary for us to imitate the example set for us by the Teutons.

ADMIT RUSSIAN SUCCESS.

The Russians, however, are past masters of this war of mines. It is regrettable that the same silence that is imposed on us for our own interest forbids the telling of our exploits. It is sufficient to cite the testimony of the Germans, little suspected of favoring their enemies: "The Russians have sunk their mines with great art at the entrance of the gulf, near the Strait of Irben." In the German style of communication this statement means, "We have received a hard blow at the hands of the Russian Riga fleet." Indeed, it was severe, this blow on the Riga, since, on that day, the operations of that kind turned against them and, as after the Marne, the advance of the Germans was definitely halted. But we will not anticipate the story of these events, and will take up in detail the operation of the Baltic fleet and the fleet of the Black Sea since the outbreak of hostilities. These results that I will enumerate will be more eloquent than all the arguments we might offer.

SMALL NAVY.

In August, 1914, our two fleets when reduced to their most simple terms, were: In the north four armed ships, already old, some armed cruisers, several torpedo boats and some few submarines; in the Black Sea, several old ships which had been barely sufficient to hold the respect of the Turks. But all our new fleet, numerous and powerful, was under construction. Thanks to the energy, intelligence and activity of the Minister of the Navy, Admiral Grigorovitch, this new fleet is, little by little, entering into service.

In just one year, 1915, they launched four great superdreadnaught ships of 33,000 tons of the Navarian type, the greatest in the world. In addition to these an imposing number of new units, composed of armships, cruisers, torpedo boats and submarines, are being added regularly to the list of the Russian fleet. If I may number roughly the powerful navy of Russia, without endangering any military secret, I would not exaggerate in saying that it has been doubled since the beginning of the war and that it will increase every day.

ADMIRER OF FRANCE.

One of the most brilliant assistants of Admiral Grigorovitch in preparing for the war has been Admiral Roussine, who has been given the office of head of the staff of general officers of Prince Lieven. Admiral Roussine is a great friend of France. Paris, where he has gone twice—the first time some weeks before the war and more recently in the midst of the struggle—gave him on his last trip such a welcome as they reserve, in these trying times, for old and faithful friends of those former days of peace and happiness. The admiral has been profoundly impressed by the steadfastness of the French people, the spirit of discipline and of self-abnegation which reigns in all classes of society, the unanimous desire to carry out the war until the day of victory, of which no one has any doubt, and the resolution to make everything work towards attaining that end. He carried away the conviction that a nation that understands so clearly their military duty is an invincible nation.

Therefore, there was at the beginning of the war a navy of considerable power on the side of the Germans, very weak on the side of Russia. In spite of that the Germans are not yet masters of the Baltic.

WARSHIP CAPTURED.

On that first day of the war, the fourth of August, a German squadron bombarded Libau and started to sink mines on the Russian coast. A cruiser, the Madgebourg, separating from the squadron, went timidly to take a look at the Gulf of Finland. But misfortune overtook her. The Odensholm Rock presented itself to her. She ran onto it. The Russian cruisers, informed of the disaster, arrived quickly on the scene. Several well-aimed shots made the Teutons surrender. This German cruiser of 4500 tons was the first victim of the Russian fleet.

CAPT. HORTON'S EXPLOITS.

Capt. Horton holds the record, I think, for ships sunk by a submarine. He alone, up to the present time, has succeeded in destroying or damaging two protected cruisers, the Hela and the Gazelle, the armed cruiser Prince Adalbert, four torpedo boats, two transports, not to mention a large number of contraband cargoes being carried between Sweden and Germany. These exploits of the great English captain created a spirit of emulation among his comrades, so much so that since the month of June to the end of the year the success of the Russian and the English has been wonderful. The last of June an armed vessel of the type of Wittlesbach was struck by a torpedo from a Russian submarine and was compelled to beach herself at Kurichshafen rather than sink.

In July, east of Gottland, the German cruiser Roon, several light cruisers and torpedo boats were encountered by the Rurick and the Russian cruisers. A naval battle followed. The German cruiser and the mine layer Albatross, almost destroyed by the Russian shells, had to lower her flag and beach herself on the Swedish coast. The Roon and the light cruiser Augsbourg went back to Kiel in a pitiful state, their guns reduced to splinters. Then the Germans were again sadly cast down by the humiliating surprise that the armed ship Pommern was hit by a torpedo from a submarine. Naturally the Wolf agency has denied the fact and declares that they have only lost an old cruiser. But the news of the loss of the Pommern has been announced by the English Prime Minister in Parliament. Between the word of an English minister and the ravings of the Wolf agency our readers can choose without hesitation.

NAVAL BATTLE OF RIGA.

Now we come to the glorious operation in the Gulf of Riga that we can compare by the results with the battle of the Marne. Naturally the Germans have denied their failure in the Riga, as they have denied every other defeat. The results, alone, are enough for us. We know that they wanted to go into the Gulf of Riga and stay there. They came, but they did not stay. The conclusion is easy. A long enough time has not elapsed to pass judgment on this naval battle, and it would not be wise to say too much, in view of our further operations.

In order to give an idea of the importance that the Germans attach to this operation on the Riga, I will just say that they had sent to the eastern part of the Baltic twelve large ships, of which many were dreadnaughts, some light cruisers, a score of torpedo boats and a veritable fleet of transports. All had been prepared with the care of minuteness that our enemies carry out in all their actions. Special maps of many colors had been prepared for this occasion in order to facilitate for the commanders the passage of the difficult and dangerous places; numerous vessels of the Albatross type plowed the gulf in every direction, trying to count the enemy's forces. Briefly, everything had been made ready for the conquest of the Gulf of Riga that they had coveted since the month of April and which would be of the highest importance for their future operation.

But the Russians were watching. The Strait of Irben, which forms the entrance to the gulf on the west, was sown with mines, sunk with the consummate art acknowledged even by the Germans, and behind the mines all the Russian naval forces waited ready to fight, ready to sink their last ship before they would surrender.

The torpedo boat Novick and the gunboat Sivoutch covered themselves with glory. Listen to the story of the officer of the Novick:

"What a marvelous memory for a seaman to have been in the battle of Riga.

"Imagine this picture: The Novick, with her fleet of torpedo boats, was set to watch while the Boches (the Russians always call them Boches) with prudence and behind their mine sweepers tried vainly to clear away the mines, we shot them with our rapid-firing guns as if we were hunting. What shooting! What precision! We also were showered by a rain of shells, but they always fell either too short or too long. So without having been struck, we saw, after an hour of fighting, larger and more modern torpedo boat than our brave Novick sink in the waves, and another, who was more our own size, ran away and cast itself on the shore that it might not be destroyed."

Now Sivoutch.

The brave litle gunboat, the Sicoutch, how courageously she defended herself with her two 120-millimeter and her four 75-millimeter guns. She contended fearlessly and never stopped firing even when the water came to the gules of her guns. Almost sinking hersel, she held on and sank an enemy torpedo boat before going down in her turn. A glorious end! A sublime page worthy of figuring in the annals of Russian naval history beside that telling of the heroic conduct of the sailors of the Steregoutchy.

RUSSIA'S AERIAL FORCES.

And our aerial forces! Their brilliant record should be inscribed on the golden book of the aerial forces of our allies, so rich in glorious exploits. At Riga they took part magnificently in the defense of the gulf. One can tell of no finer act than that of Lieut. Leihin. A German aeroplane tried to bombard the Russian ships. Lieut. Leihin started to pursue it. The German aviator soared above the Russian, trying to demolish him with his guns. Not being able to hit him from the height where he had flown, he descended little by little within twenty meters of his adversary. Resting on their planes, the German pilot and the observer increased their fire on the Russians. Lieut. Leihin, seizing with his knee the loose ends of his clothes, spread himself on his back and discharged six shots from his revolver on the airship, hitting the German pilot and the observer both, who fell with their aeroplane straight down.

Such are, sketched rapidly, some of the episodes of the battle of Riga. While it went on the large warships were waiting outside for the passage to be cleared. Such imprudence! The Moltke, a warship of 23,000 tons, which was venturous enough to go to the limit of what they thought was safety, was struck by two torpedoes, and only by an unlooked for chance was carried back to port, ready to sink, and certainly was not able to move again for many months.

The torpedoing of the Moltke was a decisive stroke against the Germans. They succeeded in forcing an entrance into the Riga, but they did not dare to stay, foreseeing they would expose themselves to disaster if they persisted in remaining in the gulf.

From this day, Riga being saved, the German troops were held on the Dvina, and to this day they have not been able to cross the river. One can say that the Russian fleet, in spite of the enemy's denials, came out victorious as the result of the plan which was marvelously put together and courageously carried out. We cannot properly call it a naval victory; they were a series of brilliant operations. After this contest the Germans went back suffering heavy losses. One large warship seriously damaged, three cruisers and seven torpedo boats driven onto the coast, without counting the auxiliary vessels which, struck by mines, disappeared forever.

WORK OF BLACK SEA FLEET.

The fleet in the Black Sea had to fight an enemy less powerful than that of the Baltic. But the presence among the Turkish fleet of the cruiser Goeben of 23,000 tons and the light cruiser Breslau, more rapid than the cruisers of the Russian fleet, rendered the situation delicate.

Admiral Eberhardt acted with great courage, tempted by wise prudence. He had to keep intact at any price, the Black Sea fleet, and keep the sea free so that the Russian coast would not be exposed to the fire of the enemy, who respected nothing, not even the open villages. Admiral Eberhardt knew how to solve the difficult problem, giving his enemy hard blows without exposing his squadron inconsiderately. Very quickly the Turko-Germans realized they were in the presence of a redoubtable adversary.

FIRST BATTLE WITH TURKS.

The first encounter took place several weeks after tricky conduct of the Turko-German cruisers against the ports of the Black Sea. It was foggy, the sea almost calm. Suddenly there was a clear spot in the fog. The cruisers Goeben and Breslau were seen some 1000 meters from the Russian squadron. Boldly, and without hesitating, the admiral signaled: "Clear the decks for battle." And an instant after: "Begin to fire." Again fortune favored our audacity. The first fire from the guns on the cruiser Etstafyi struck the Goeben. During the fourteen minutes that the fight lasted it was hit twelve times. One of her turrets was demolished, about forty men were killed and 100 wounded. Very badly used, the Teuton cruiser that the Turks had renamed the Invincible went back again to the Bosphorus and let the Ottomans see to their amazement that she had been beaten by the smaller ships of the Russians in the Black Sea!

Three weeks after, the Russian cruisers encountered a fleet of Turkish transports with troops and materials of war. In a few minutes all the transports were sunk. The second success.

But as in the Baltic, it was the mines which began to produce results.

The 6th of December the Hamidiah was damaged, the 11th it was a large gunboat which sank; the 7th of January it was the turn of the Breslau, which went back to Constantinople heeling over in very alarming fashion. The 21st of January the Goeben, which was laid up for repairs since the fight of October 8, 1914, appeared for a trial trip. She struck a mine on her way and once again the "invincible" cruiser, in which the Turks had placed all their confidence, went back to the Ottoman capital with a breach eight meters wide in her side.

About that same time the torpedo boats attacked the cruiser Hamidiyeh and made her take flight, and then the Pamiat-Merkouria and the torpedo boat Gnievyi sank a large Turkish transport and seriously damaged the Medjidie, which they were convoying. Poor Medjidie, only by chance it was not sunk. They had the good fortune, owing to a little accident to the machinery of the Pamait-Merkouria, which hindered her from using all her speed in the pursuit, to be saved, this time at least. Some weeks later, pushed by a fatal destiny, and even more by a very strong current, it hit a mine before Odessa and ran aground some cable lengths from the city. Without doubt a symbolic end, because it will be thus that the Ottoman empire will sink miserably.

Two months after she ran aground, the Medjidie was floated and repaired for service against the Ottoman fleet.

The operations are continuing in the Black Sea and a blockade as strict as possible is established by the torpedo boats and the submarines, particularly in the region of the Heraclee mines.

Sixty steamers have been sunk, also more than 300 sailing vessels used for transport duty. Between times the Russian squadron bombarded Soungouldack, the Bosphorus and Varna. The torpedo boats Dersky and Gnievyi engaged in a fight with the Breslau and damaged the Turko-German warship severely without receiving on their part a serious blow. Finally, in December, three torpedo boats under the command of Prince Troubetskoi attacked two Turkish gunboats. In less than half an hour the two Turkish gunboats were completely destroyed and there was nothing on the surface of the water but the eddy that they made by the sinking of their hull in the water.

So in the Black Sea as in the Baltic, the operations of the Russian forces have been conducted with ability and warmth and crowned with success. From the highest commanders to the most humble sailor, each has brought to the hard service of war all his activity, all his courage, all his devotion.

In addition, to be just, she has been greatly aided by the submarines of the British fleet. The collaboration of the English and the Russians has been so intimate, the officers and Russian sailors have so thoroughly adopted, so to speak, their English comrades, and are profiting so well by their example, that they rival each other in energy and zeal in fighting their common enemy.

The lesson received in the Far East has borne its fruit. The young generation of Russian officers, trained in the hard school of the war, has shown today and will continue to show tomorrow to the Germans that the Russian fleet exists and they will have to be reckoned with.

His Outlook.

MAYOR DETERMINED TO HOLD HIS CHAIR

DESIRES TO RETURN TO HIS OFFICE THIS WEEK.

Says Last Twenty-four Hours Have Brought Him More Solace than for Many Weeks, but Physician Declares Physical Condition Demands Absolute Rest.

Following a peaceful night and day at the Sierra Vista home of Earl Rogers, his attorney, Mayor Sebastian, who is in a more or less critical condition as the result of an acute attack of Bright's disease, said last night he felt better than he had for weeks. He desires to return to his office early this week, but will accept the advice of his physicians in the matter.

The Mayor reiterated his determination to continue in the executive chair, notwithstanding rumors to the contrary. He said he has talked the case over from every angle with his attorney and the latter coincides with his attitude.

Dr. Lyman B. Stookey, one of the four physicians who diagnosed the Mayor's condition yesterday, said:

"Mayor Sebastian is a very sick man. He has what is commonly called Bright's disease, a chronic nephritis of the kidneys. Over a period of four years I have made frequent examinations of the patient's blood and waste. Other physicians and pathologists have also joined me in these examinations and have found a progressive and chronic nephritis.

"The loss in weight, now amounting to more than thirty-five pounds, the nervous condition, the deterioration of the blood, all point to one positive end, namely, that the patient must have absolute rest. There is no reason to say the disease will run to a fatal termination in six months or six years, provided the proper care is exhibited. On the other hand a degeneration may set in any day and lead to death.

"Mayor Sebastian has been aware of his condition for four years, to my knowledge, and has hidden from the public the verdict of his physicians. He has worked at his office while his medical advisors urged him to give up and take a long rest. His reply always remained the same, that he would do his work first and look after his health afterward. The Mayor is a very sick man and the present agitation will certainly do him no good. His road to renewed life is along a plan of simple living, away from worry or other excess."

FORTUNE FOR A FOOT.

Injured Mahout of Steam Roller Gets Ten Thousand Damages.

March 6, 1915, at the North Broadway bridge, a truck of the Los Angeles Transfer Company collided with a steam roller upon which was perched Melquades Moreno. The result to the driver was a crushed left leg. As an employee of Fairchild, Gilmore & Wilton he was insured, the policy being carried by the Commonwealth Bonding and Casualty Insurance Company. The compensation was paid by the insurance company and the latter joined Moreno in a suit for $25,000 against the transfer company, through James L. Boone, receiver for the concern.

The suit was tried before a jury in Judge Monroe's court. The transfer company set up the contributory negligence of the driver of the steam roller. The jury, out fifteen minutes, gave a verdict of $10,000 yesterday in favor of Moreno, who was represented by Attorneys George Denis and G. W. McDill. The bonding company will recover from the amount the compensation paid over to Fairchild, Gilmore & Wilton, the balance going to Mr. Moreno.

Stocks and Bonds.

VERY LITTLE ATTENTION DEVOTED TO STOCKS.

Only a Hundred Thousand Shares Change Hands. Rails are Almost Motionless—Many Standard Shares not Recorded at All—Reports Show that Railway Earnings are Improving Somewhat.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, July 29.—For all practical purposes today's session of the stock market might well have been omitted. The total dealings was barely approximately 100,000 shares. Of this amount the usual leaders like United States Steel, Mercantile Marine, Petroleum and a few equipments and industrials made up more than 50 per cent.

Many standard stocks were not recorded at all and gains of 1 to 3 points in issues of the character of New York Air Brake, American Car and more minor specialties were without the slightest influence elsewhere.

Rails were almost motionless.

In point of activity and importance international bond issues constituted the real feature of the day. Anglo-French 5s changed hands to the extent of almost $1,100,000, mostly at 95⅞, a small concession, and the new French notes were traded in to a total of almost $500,000, all at 98, the subscription price.

General news included several June statements of railway earnings, Canadian Pacific showing a net increase of slightly more than $1,000,000 and Norfolk and Western $450,000. Mercantile agencies referred optimistically to trade conditions, except in the Northwest, where some damage to crops is apprehended. Sterling and francs were unaltered, with some improvement in marks and rubles.

Local bank conditions were strengthened by a further small cash gain and increase in reserves.

Total sales of bonds, par value, were $2,450,000.

United States 3s and Panama 2s advanced ¼, Panama 3s 1½ and United States 2s declined ¼ per cent. on call during the week.

WEEKLY FINANCIAL REVIEW.

The foreign cataclysm now entering upon its third year, finds the United States at the high tide of prosperity. While Europe's powers continue their expenditures of blood and treasure in incalculable volume, financial experts point out that the wealth of the country is piling up so generally and on such solid foundation as to remove all apprehension of inflation.

Bank clearings, bountiful crops, earnings of the railroads and industrial companies, the enormous output of steel and iron, a foreign trade balance for the fiscal year of $2,136,000,000—these and countless other signs point to the unparalleled prestige of the only leading nation of the world not at war.

It is assumed also that cessation of hostilities will inaugurate a heavy repurchasing movement in our securities by foreign investors who deemed it necessary or wise to liquidate while war was raging. To what extent this country may be able to hold the foreign trade already gained and yet to be acquired seems problematical. Leaders of finance and industry hold that the cost of labor and materials will enlarge heavily in the solution of this momentous question.

The coming week is expected to bring developments of interest in the railway labor situation, industrial conditions otherwise, aside from local disbursements, are more than ordinarily encouraging.

QUIET TRADING ON LOCAL EXCHANGE.

BIG JIM RECOVERS SEVERAD POINTS.

Optimistic Reports from Oatman Regarding Development Work on its Property—Decline in Union Oil Causes Comment—Tom Reed Weaker.

Saturday's session of the Los Angeles Stock Exchange was reatureless. Big Jim recovered several points and there was a heavy demand throughout the meeting for the popular mining security at prices around the 93 mark. According to reliable reports from Oatman, work on the 400-foot level of the Big Jim has progressed rapidly of late and over 120 feet of drifting has been done. On the 485-foot level a total of 170 feet has been done. The crosscuts at these two depths entered the vein at points 115 feet apart. With this distance between the cross-cuts, and with this amount of drifting done, the length of the ore shoot at this time has been proved to be 236 feet long. The average value of all ores in the drifts on both levels is better than $20, according to a statement of the management of the company. If such is the case, Big Jim is even a greater property than has been believed and the stock seems quite a bargain at prices below par. Weakness developed in Tom Reed yesterday and the stock suffered a net decline of 4 points during the day. Union Oil was off and sales at the close were recorded at 79.62½, after the stock had opened at 80.00. No reason was advanced for the poorer showing of the oil leader and it came as rather a surprise to a great many. The remainder of the activity was of a scattered character, there being a few shares transferred in the following securities: Amalgamated Oil, Home Telephone, common, Ivanhoe, Carter and Fessenden. Los Angeles Investment sold at the lower quotation of 59.

BEARS IN WHEAT HAVE ADVANTAGE.

INCREASING RECEIPTS FROM THE WINTER SECTION.

The Chicago Market Closes Weak as a Result at from Three-quarters to a Cent and One-quarter Net Lower, with September at 121 to an Eighth.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CHICAGO, July 29.—Increasing receipts from the winter crop region, together with predictions of slightly cooler weather in the Northwest gave an advantage today to the bears in wheat. Largely in consequence, the market closed weeak, ¾ to 1¼ net lower, with September at 1.21@1.21⅛ and December at 1.24½@1.24⅝. In corn the outcome varied from 1 decline to alike advance, oats finished ⅛ to ⅜ down and provisions up 5 to 10@12½ except July pork, which showed a nominal setback of 70. Enlarged call for cars throughout the winter wheat belt tended to make the kheat bears somewhat aggressive. Although some fresh crop damage reports rallied the wheat market late in the session, the effect on values proved to be only of transient character. Scattered showers in the Southwest tended to ease the deferred options of corn. Oats were bearishly affected by reports of excellent conditions for the harvest. Provisions averaged higher with hogs. The amount of business done was small.

TRADE BELIEVES DAMAGE EXTENSIVE

BULLISH SHOWING EXPECTED IN NEXT FEDERAL REPORT.

The Appearance of Good Soaking Rains, it is Said, Would Eliminate Apprehension, but as Yet the Occurrence of Heavy Precipitation has been Absent.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 29—The trade is becoming more reconciled to the belief that since the compilation of the government conditions figures as of July 25, damage, especially east of the Mississippi River, has been rather extensive. Those of the constructive element are anticipating a bullish showing in the next conditions report scheduled for publication August 1. Recent dispatches suggest irregularity of conditions in Texas and fear is expressed that that region also has suffered a setback. In the latter territory, the appearance of good soaking rains would eliminate apprehension, but as yet the occurrence of heavy precipitation has been lacking. The carryover from last year's crop has so far proved not to have been burdensome, as is attested by the stability of spot values at or about the highest of the current season. It is expected that the immediate tendency of values in the future market will get its impetus from climatic vicissitudes.

WHEN JACKLING BRINGS THE JANNEY MILLS TO OATMAN.

Milling costs will be reduced to a minimum. Consider the cost-record of the Alaska Gold Mines where Engineer Janney worked such wonders with the installation of his marvelous grinding mills. Nearly two million tons of ore have been treated in the plant, assaying about $1.25 a ton, at a mining and milling cost of 60c a ton. Never before in the history of mining has ore been mined from underground workings, hauled underground a distance of two miles, transported again to the mill, a distance of two miles more, and put through a concentrator for a total cost of only 60c a ton. YET IT IS OFFICIALLY REPORTED THAT ALASKA GOLD HAS NOT TREATED A TON OF ORE THAT HAS NOT RETURNED A PROFIT. Engineer Jackling, of the Alaska Gold Mines, has a big interest in the United Eastern Mine in Oatman and will bring to the working of these ores all the valuable knowledge gained in the Alaskan field.

What effect will the introduction of low-cost methods have upon the Oatman field? Will not these innovations make a mine with any quantity of $10 ore look like a bonanza?

The BIG JIM has not only uncovered a mountain of PAY ore, but the latest developments on the 400 ft. level, according to messages just received from Manager Keating, bring THE AVERAGE ASSAYS ON THIS 150 FT. OF DRIFTING UP TO $46.36. What more do you want to make a bonanza mine? Yet BIG JIM has been only partially developed and only on the 400 and 485 ft. levels. Gangs of men are working in four drifts. Every round of shots increases the tonnage of pay ore and enhances the intrinsic value of the property. Nearby, the Tom Reed is extracting pay ore on the 1175 foot level, proving that gold deposits go at least to that great depth in the Oatman field. This must also be true of BIG JIM. BIG JIM stock is cheap. As the truth becomes known the stock advances. It will likely cross the dollar mark next week. Profit by your foresight—BUY YOUR STOCK TOMORROW.

Of the Four Oatman Stocks

which we suggested two weeks ago as purchases of unusual speculative value owing to their low market price as compared with their intrinsic value, three have advanced since that time as follows:

One shows a gain of 33⅓%
Another shows a gain of 25%
The other shows a gain of 20%

We have suggested for some time the purchase of the better known Oatmans while available at present bargain prices—we look for much greater advances in the stocks referred to above, information regarding which will be gladly furnished upon request.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKET.

California dried-fruit growers and shippers are discouraged over the placing of an embargo against their product by England and the harsh enforcement of the same. The embargo which was put into effect several months ago has cut off a tremendously large market for California dried fruits. The British have not only prevented the shipment of dried fruits from this State to any of their own possessions, but they have gone a step further and are confiscating shipments made to neutral countries. On March 28 the steamer San Francisco left the port it is named for with a cargo of dried apricots, peaches and prunes for Sweden. This ship was seized by the British and its cargo will, no doubt, be sold in a prize court. This is only one instance of many and is likely to prove the death knell of the dried-fruit exporting business this season. Many of the largest wholesale exporting houses of New York are refusing to handle California dried fruit in their shipments of goods to any European country. This course is bound to result in a weak and unsatisfactory condition of the dried-fruit market for the remainder of the year.

Satsuma plums were marked up yesterday to 70 cents and $1 a lug. Other varieties remained unaltered but there is a slightly stronger demand for plums. Potato prices for northern and Shima stocks will be a trifle easier Monday. Most of the local dealers intend lowering their tariff on northern spuds to $2.25 and $2.30 a sack and on Red Bag Shimas to $2.35 and $2.40. Heavier shipments is given as the reason for the lower market.

As there was no session of the Produce Exchange Saturday morning, prices for the chief staples were the same as on Friday. In San Francisco eggs advanced to 29 cents a dozen but the other commodities were unaltered. Receipts were 291 cases of eggs, 41,100 pounds of butter, 740 pounds of cheese, 3170 sacks of potatoes, 216 sacks of onions, 37 sacks of beans, 41 sacks of sweet potatoes, 726 boxes of apples, 1394 boxes of peaches, 246 crates of grapes, 398 boxes of nectarines and 46 boxes of plums.

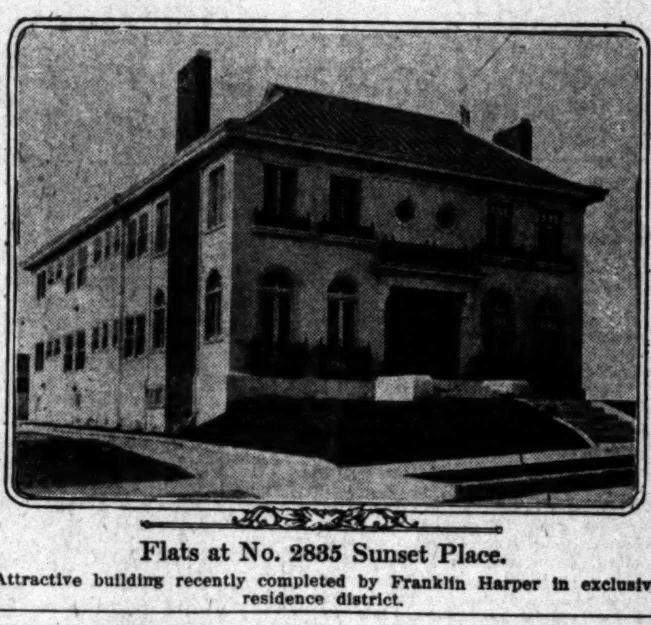
Fine Wilshire Improvement.



Flats at No. 2835 Sunset Place.

Attractive building recently completed by Franklin Harper in exclusive residence district.

NEW SEA ROUTE.

Jefferson Street May be Extended Though Culver City to Santa Monica.

One of the most important projects recently announced for southwest Los Angeles is the proposed extension of West Jefferson street directly westward through Culver City to Santa Monica. The fourth of a series of mass meetings, for the consideration of the plan was held last Tuesday evening in the rooms of the West Jefferson Improvement Association, when delegates from Santa Monica, Culver City and several improvement associations in south Los Angeles were present.

It is declared that with the construction of approximately two miles of boulevard, a direct line to the beaches can be opened up for south side residents. When West Jefferson is extended in a straight line it will parallel the Santa Monica Air Line to Washington boulevard, at the point where National boulevard, coming from Santa Monica, also intersects Washington, thus making a through route. Those advocating the plan point out that such a boulevard would also result in the upbuilding of a part of southwest Los Angeles that has lagged for want of through streets.

NEW VERMONT SQUARE.

Sales are reported for the past week in New Vermont Square to the following: Birch O'Neal to Charles L. Schroeder, seven-room bungalow, No. 1725 West Forty-first place, $4500, through agency of Laning & Rogers; D. W. McClain to Julius Oleson, vacant lot on Forty-third place between Gramercy place and Van Ness avenue, $1100, the new owner planning to erect a seven-room chalet; Dan Klein to F. O. Almer, six-room bungalow, No. 1937 West Forty-third place, $3500, through agency of Walter R. Hoff; Virginia E. Adams to Ralph L. Wilcox, lot between Gramercy place and Van Ness avenue, $1100, the new owner planning to build a seven-room bungalow; Southwest Land Company to Cora J. Glass, lot on Forty-third place between Gramercy place and Van Ness avenue, $1100; John J. Johnson to S. L. Dewey, seven-room chalet, No. 1731 West Forty-second street, $4000.

ANGELES MESA.

Development work of varied and substantial character is reported in Angeles Mesa, at the city's southwestern edge. Among the improvements nearing completion is a new school of concrete construction for the accommodation of more than 500 pupils. Contracts were recently placed for the paving of Mesa drive from Slauson avenue through the tract to West Adams, a strip of about four miles. The paving of Fifty-fourth street from Arlington to Mesa drive is now in progress. Ornamental street lamps have recently been installed along every street in the subdivision. Several new residences are now being constructed in the tract and a number of recent sales are reported by the Angeles Mesa Land Company, which is handling the property.

GAS TURNED ON.

The natural gas delivered by the Southern Counties Gas Company from the Fullerton fields to Huntington Beach was turned into the mains on Friday. Under a previous bond issue the city of Huntington Beach bought the gas-distributing system from the West Coast Gas Company and is now retailing natural gas to consumers. In the same town there has just been carried out a lot-cleaning campaign which has had wonderful results. In all, nearly 2000 separate pieces of vacant property were thus made more presentable.

Each flat contains five rooms and a dressing-room. The living-rooms and dining-rooms are finished in mahogany and the bedrooms and dressing-rooms in ivory. There is a tile bath and separate tile shower in each flat. The building is heated with steam, wall radiators being used in each of the rooms. OATMAN PROFITS

After all—it's profits we are after when we buy Oatman stocks—we want them from dividends or on market advancements.

On July 22nd and 23rd in a ... inch advertisement in the Herald, Times and Examiner we said: "BUY THIS WEEK BIG JIM AT THE MARKET." Big Jim was then selling at 74 bid—asked ... —in one week's time Big Jim has sold at 95—showing a tremendous profit to those who followed our advice.

IVANHOE—in the Herald on July 15th—Times, July 16th—Examiner, July 16th, we said: "IVANHOE AT 5c SHOULD NOT BE PASSED BY—THERE ISN'T A BETTER BUY AT 5c AMONG THE OATMAN STOCKS."

IVANHOE—On July 15th ... shares of IVANHOE sold at ... —on July 26th—11 days later—4000 shares of IVANHOE sold at 8¼c—nearly a hundred per cent profit for those who followed the advice.

BLACK RANGE — for ... months past we have been advising the purchase of BLACK RANGE mining—listed on the San Francisco Exchange and the Los Angeles Curb. On July ... BLACK RANGE was 15 bid—offered at 17. BLACK RANGE closed Friday, July 28th—... —offered 25.

NELLIE—another Black Range stock—listed on the San Francisco Exchange now 15c bid—offered at 17c is due to make the next strike in the Black Range by September first—should then sell up to 30c.

GOLD MONSTER—"The United Eastern of the Black Range," as someone has termed it—sold on the Los Angeles Curb—on July 14th at 52 bid—offered at 54. On July 28th closed at 60 bid—offered at 62—application is now being made to be listed on the San Francisco Stock Exchange and the New York Curb. C. E. James, the noted Engineer, who is reporting on this property, will complete his report for publication the first of August—the strongest pool ever organized in Los Angeles is, we believe, in the GOLD MONSTER—the following are a few of the pool members:

Frank Busch
Otto Busch
James J. Jeffries
Jack Jeffries
C. Fred Harlow
Mel. Nordlinger
Charles Wellington Rand
H. J. Arens
Barney Oldfield
C. Wm. Kolb
C. A. Stevens
Louis P. Collette
Tom Mack
J. L. Milligan
Joseph Blake
Tony Savinovich.

We predict that GOLD MONSTER will become a market leader—and with development—a big mine. Write for copy of Engineer's report, maps, and full information on the GOLD MONSTER.

The Famous Silver King Mine
Now Controlled by the Silver King of Arizona Mining Company
IS ABOUT TO BE RE-OPENED

Work was resumed July 7th. This mine is reported to have produced between $10,000,000 and $15,000,000 above the 1,000 foot level many years ago and when it was over 100 miles from a railroad. IT IS NOW WITHIN ONE MILE. The SILVER KING and the SILVER QUEEN (now MAGMA COPPER) closed down within about ten days of each other because of the decline in price of silver metal, the increase of copper values in the ore as depth was attained and the great distance to the nearest railroad.

MAGMA resumed some years ago, is now working to a depth of 1700 feet, is now paying regular quarterly dividends because of copper production and is valued on the New York Curb at around $3,000,000.

Silver King Is Within One Mile of Magma Copper

SILVER KING has been favorably reported on by Professor Wm. P. Blake, Alexander B. Downe, A. I. M. E. and others. Copies of all reports, maps, etc., are on file in the offices of C. V. KOONTZ AND COMPANY, 25 Broad street, New York City, and will be shown on request.

Professor Wm. P. Blake in his extensive report states "that the strength of the ore to the lowest level, is very encouraging for the future of the mine below, and it indicates also that the upper levels may be more extensively opened to advantage. So far there is nothing to indicate any going out of the ore at depth."

Alexander B. Downe, A. I. M. E., has stated that as soon as the SILVER KING is partially unwatered he expects to commence shipments of about 100 tons of ore carrying at least $50 to the ton weekly and that this will be increased as development progresses.

Officers include: E. Cowper-Thwaite of London and New York, F. G. Masson of New York and Alexander B. Downe, A. I. M. E., of Duarte, California. The office of the Company, 32 Broadway, New York. Registrar and Transfer Agent: Security Registrar and Transfer Company of New York.

The stock of the SILVER KING OF ARIZONA MINING COMPANY, it is expected, will be actively traded in on the New York and Boston Curbs in the near future.

The undersigned offer, subject to prior sale, the unsubscribed portion of 200,000 shares of stock in the SILVER KING OF ARIZONA MINING COMPANY at 35 cents a share. Wire reservations without delay to us or to your own broker.

NGELS DEFEAT POOR OLD BEES.

ll Piercy is on Mound for the Visitors.

ndridge Gets Wild from Weariness.

ddy Ryan Gets Only Long Hit of Day.

BY HARRY A. WILLIAMS.

Enough swatting by the Angels and not enough of the same article by the Bees gave Los Angeles yesterday's game, 5 to 2.

The home guards began accumulating runs early. Being firm advocates of preparedness they wanted to be prepared for the worst should it happen. The worst, however, was not as bad as it might have been, consisting of two runs in the sixth when Oscar Horstman walked two and permitted singles by Hannah and Quinlan. These were bracketed with Kane's sacrifice fly and a wild pitch by Horstman gave Salt Lake its total score. Up to that time the hitting of the Salt Lake people had been so small as to be hardly noticeable without a microscope. A double by B. Ryan in the fifth was the only blow secured by the Bees in eight innings, and Mr. Ryan is suffering from a severe cold. It makes one shudder to think what Ryan might have done had his system not been clogged up with a cold. Despite his affliction Buddy hit far better than his mates, whose valves are not choked. That merely goes to show what a great ball player he is when no longer weighted down with an appendix.

PETE GETS WILD.

Pete Standridge started the game and, as would be suspected from the aforesaid remarks, was not driven from the place. Rather, he succumbed to his own wildness and perversion in the seventh, when he passed two with nobody out. As he had walked three in the preceding inning, Chance decided that it would be unwise to let him wander around longer in this wild state. Oscar, who had been warming up on the griddle, then went in and fanned one and soaked another, thereby ending the sortie. Oscar remained steadfast until the ninth when the news was broken to him that he had been sold to St. Louis. Although the news was broken as gently as possible, it being delivered to him by a messenger boy wearing rubber soles, he was visibly overcome and allowed two runs.

Bill Piercy, the El Monte phenom, stuck around on his feet long enough to get hit for four runs, to-wit: Six innings. Bill then withdrew himself from his feet and sat down to let a pinch hitter bat for him. This pinch hitter fanned. In full justice to Bill let it be said that he could have done as well.

Blankenship used Hall throughout the seventh inning, in which one run was scored. He then switched to P. Dougan, the gentleman with an injury inside himself. Something mysterious happened to Dugan's interior when he was pitching here just seven weeks ago. As his interior has not been explored, the exact nature of the internal catastrophe never has been ascertained. Whatever it was, he is only just now recovering. The Angels didn't do much to him mainly because it wasn't necessary. Dougan got hit for a single and emitted a wild pitch, but nobody scored. He seemed to feel better after getting rid of this wild pitch. It may be this which has been troubling him all these weeks. Now that it is out of his system his recovery should be rapid.

SHEER WEARINESS.

Standridge grew wild through sheer weariness. Two weeks ago Pete sprained his arm while fanning a batter and has not done any work to speak of since. This continued idleness seemed to exhaust him, with the result that he could not stand the strain yesterday. Up to the moment of his collapse he had his "fork ball" breaking four different ways from the home plate and the Bees fishing for it in vain. Pete conceived the idea of throwing the "fork ball" one morning while throwing codfish balls into his face with an ordinary table fork. His control was better on that occasion than it was yesterday.

Jack Ryan had his new safety razor in his pocket yesterday and was showing it to his intimate friends. It cuts against the grain as well as the other way. Also it cuts the stubble. Jack is greatly pleased with his new acquisition and says that never again will the wind whistle through his whiskers. Hereafter the wind will slide off his face noiselessly.

PERFORMANCE.

Piercy started his performance by passing Maggert, who took second on an out by Ellis on Orr's brilliant assist. Wolter singled Maggert home, took second on the shot to the soup dish and counted when Koerner planted a double against the left-field boards. Galloway and Bassler failed to connect with effect.

Maggert was again active in the third. He reached first on a scratch single, was sacrificed by Ellis and stole third. M. Rath violently protested the decision, although a blue print of the play would show that he had to run the wrong way to get the ball on the runner. Rath kept trying to show Maggert why he was out, and Maggert made it equally clear why he was safe. Umpire Doyle was an interested listener.

TITLE TENNIS IS THIS WEEK.

Play for the Southern Titles Begins Tomorrow.

Hahn Conceded Best Chance to Win Singles.

Matches are to be Played at Long Beach.

The Southern California tennis championships will be played on the Hotel Virginia courts at Long Beach this week. The tournament begins tomorrow morning. The various events are men's singles and doubles, junior singles, women's singles and doubles and mixed doubles. Between seventy-five and 100 players will participate in this tournament.

In order to obtain possession of any of the title trophies, they must be won three times. Tom Bundy, Win Mace and Eugene Overton, each have two legs on the singles trophy. The team of Sinsabaugh and Browne and that of Duncan and Wayne each have two legs on the doubles trophies.

The main fight is to be an effort by each of these to secure a third win and a frantic effort on the part of the field to prevent the losing of the trophies.

Although Tom Bundy has two legs on the singles cup, he may not enter the tournament. Efforts are being made to induce him to play, but he says that business will interfere. The cup does not tempt him. Why should it when Mrs. May Sutton Bundy and he have a whole home full of trophies.

Herbert Hahn is conceded the best chance of winning the title in the absence of Maurice McLoughlin, Cliff Herd and Ward Dawson. The Stanford star has been playing with McLoughlin for the last month. Facing the shots of the famous one has greatly improved Hahn's game.

Hahn has expressed a fear that he will be unable to play because of the ill-health of his mother.

Among the veterans playing in the singles are Simpson Sinsabaugh and A. V. Duncan. They are apt to upset considerable dope. On the other hand such juniors as Clover are being watched with interest. Last week Clover took two practice sets away from Win Mace.

The real excitement is in the junior singles. The age limit has been raised to 20 and it is surprising how many excellent players are under that age. Among the better known are Frank Winnie, Frank Donley, Paul Kinney, Greayer Clover, Wilson Jones, Harvey Snodgrass and Gerhard Busch.

Winnie is the Southern California interscholastic champion. Grub Clover was the king pin of the preps last year and a highly rated player at Stanford this. Gerhard Busch is the Hollywood boy who eliminated Winnie on the Sunset courts. The opinion seems to be that Busch played over his head and Winnie without his in that match. The fact remains Busch won and bears watching.

There are two women singles events. They are called the ladies' open singles and the ladies' special singles. The open as the word indicates are open to all. The special are closed to those who have won previous open tournaments. What this amounts to in reality is a singles event with the Sutton sisters in and another without them.

Junior singles—Frank P. Winnie, Frank M. Donley, Paul Kinney, Kenneth Hawkes, Greayer Clover, Edward Simmons, Wilson Jones, Ralph Sindorf, Harvey Snodgrass, Robert Rager, Gerhard Busch, Robert Allen, Francis Ledyard, Miles Reinke, Roland Reinke, James Conaty, Wilson S. Jones, Charles Truitt, Dick Powers, Gardner Glassell, Don Glendenon, Frank Dunn, John Cotton, Solly Balsano, John Carleton.

Men's singles—Eugene Overton, William Horrell, Wynn Mace, Frank M. Donley, Paul Kinney, Greayer Clover, H. Blakeslee, S. M. Sinsabaugh, Leon Hopkins, Harold Huber, Paul Hardeman, Kenneth Hawkes, J. Tominago, Walter Bowers, Ralph C. Noble, Herbert Hahn, Miles Reinke, Roland Reinke, Earle Barker, Clarence Barker, Edward Simmons, Upton Sinclaire, George Gironard, Forest Cornet, Robert Rager, Ward Montgomery, Edward Howard, Perry Jones, John Cotton, Solly Baiano, Dr. Thomason, Vic Dixon, W. N. Goodwin, Harry Belden, John W. Grady, Paul W. Rebell, Frank Woodbury, A. V. Duncan, Charles Hooper.

Ladies' open singles—Florence Sutton, Mrs. Widdowson, Mrs. B. O. Bruce, Loraine Hasselo, Grace Mungen, Mrs. E. E. Ellis, Anita Schlotte, Mrs. William Henry, Jesse Grieve, Pauline Holman, Elizabeth Carruthers, Beatrice Burnham, Florence Allison, Margaret Manson, Mabel Mansur, Isabelle Anderson. Subtract the three Sutton sisters and the entries in the special singles remain.

LITTLE GIANT AN ITINERANT HOTEL.

When afflicted with irrepressible "wanderlust," F. C. Nissley of Norristown, Pa., conceived the idea of satisfying his craving and, at the same time, earning a livelihood by means of a motor truck.

He purchased a Little Giant truck, equipped it with traveling necessities and conveniences and traveled from town to town on his way West, taking photographs of places of interest, school groups, etc., which netted him a comfortable income.

Mr. Nissley's itinerant hotel was equipped with two bunks, two closets, an electric piano and a photographer's outfit. He left Philadelphia in May, traveling with one assistant. According to latest reports he has visited San Francisco and reached Omaha, Neb., on his return, having traveled more than 6000 miles without trouble of any description.

Brilliant young Stanford tennis player who is expected to make excellent showing in junior singles at Long Beach this week.

CAL EWING PRESIDENT OF OAKLAND BALL CLUB.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN FRANCISCO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 29.—J. Cal Ewing, well known to Pacific Coast fans as a factor in the game for many years, has announced his re-entry into baseball in the West by his election to the presidency of the Oakland baseball club, which carries with it representation in the league as a director.

With the active return to baseball of Ewing, which was brought about tonight at a meeting of the stockholders of the Oakland club and later of the directors, it is announced that Frank M. Ish, who was interested with Ewing in the San Francisco club until Henry Berry bought the two out, has invested in the Oakland team and will be one of the directors of that club.

Ewing issued a statement tonight to the effect that Ish and himself have taken over a half-interest in the stockholdings formerly held by Jack Cook and Frank Leavitt. Cook retains a quarter and Howard comes in for a quarter-interest, so the quartette is in control of the club. Furthermore, says Ewing, this step was taken at the request of Del Howard, who did not feel able to swing the deal in its entirety and with the full approval of Jack Cook.

Ewing's original baseball holding many years ago was the Oakland club, and it was not until 1905 that Messrs. Ewing and Ish bought into the San Francisco club. Immediately after the fire Ewing was virtually the Coast League, acting as its president and dominating the situation.

He still held control of the Oakland club, although he did not attempt to trade players between the two clubs nor did he dictate to the Oakland policy while in San Francisco. In the winter of 1912, when there came a break between Ed Walter and Ewing, former partners, the latter sold his stock to Jack Cook and Frank Leavitt, announcing when he did so that he held their notes for an unpaid balance. Later Ewing sold the Seals to Hen Berry of Los Angeles.

OAKS IN EXTRA INNING GAME.

WALLOP HAMPATS IN FIFTEEN FRAMES.

Jap Barbeau Scores All the Way from First Base on Billy Lane's Single and Breaks up Long-drawn-out Tie—Tigers Get Their Runs in First Two Innings.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN FRANCISCO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 29.—Scoring all the way from first on Billy Lane's single against the right field fence that was lost to the eye of Right-fielder Walter Doane, Jap Barbeau brought to a close a fifteen-inning game this afternoon—a stubborn battle that had been bitterly fought right up to the finish and was won by 3 to 2.

Starting with a handicap of two runs against them, Oakland battled to a tied score in the sixth inning. From that time on it was a pitcher's battle.

The Tigers gathered their two runs off Boyd right at the jump and then, of course, there came no more.

Doane walked while Gleichmann sacrificed in the opener. Risberg hit Doane to third with a drive to left and Bates's sacrifice fly to center scored the run, just ahead of Daley's grounder to Barry.

Mattick smashed against the center-field fence in the second, was wild pitched to second and finally scored from the keystone sack as Ellis Johnson swiped to the Middleton territory.

The Oaks skipped through to the fourth without doing damage. Then came results. Rube Gardner punched to center and Mel Barry laid one to left. Harwood was fanned but Berger's rap to right sent Gardner home.

Lane walked and Kenworthy doubled, Gardner fanned and Davis, who grounded to short was finally run down, after an attempt had been made to nail Kenworthy. Lane scored meanwhile and the score stood 2 all.

And that way it remained until the finale in the fifteenth. The score:

HERE'S A RECORD FOR MILEAGE.

One of the best season's records for mileage ever established is that of the Cadillac "8," owned by C. U. Wiswall of the Cananea Cattle Company. The car now is ten months old, and has averaged 3000 miles a month, the total mileage having passed the 30,000 mark. On the car's first birthday it will have traveled at least 35,000 miles, declares Mr. Wiswall.

Of the 30,000 miles already covered, about 20,000 has been through country in which there were no roads, and it has been driven across the open desert, following the compass for general direction. On the ranch the car is used in making trips to the various outposts, and in these journeys the only roads it has are the tracks it has worn by the regular trips across the open fields.

BASQUES PLAY ODD HANDBALL.

Big Match Played on Aliso-street Courts.

Ball Used is as Hard as a Baseball.

Champion to Play Joe Lacey Two Games.

BY HOWARD ANGUS.

Anybody who thinks that the Spaniard's and Mexican's taste for sport runs entirely to bull fighting, cock fighting and horse racing ought to spend an afternoon on the historic handball courts on Aliso street.

The game that is played is the Basque game as old as Spain itself, and the game has been played on the historic courts of Aliso street for seventy-five years or more, which means ever since 1850.

A big match was played on those courts yesterday in which four of the best players took part. The court was crowded with people. The Spaniard, Mexican, Italian and Basque were so thick in the courts that they were constantly interfering with the game.

Many practice games had been played before, then came the big game. Three Basques and one untidy Mexican went onto the courts. Immediately among the crowd could be heard the word, "Peso," which is the Spanish word for a dollar, and much betting was going on.

THE BIG MATCH.

On one side was George Berecochea, a Basque, and Emile Hill, the Mexican peon. Their opponents were Basques, Pierre Hiriart and Jean Predezne. Somebody informed us that Berecochea was a banker in the International Building. Hiriart was a hardware man. Predezne was a wealthy rancher, who had come in from the hills for the game. Hill was just a peon from off the railroad tracks, still dusty and dirty from his work. All of the players were in old clothes, for this handball is a strenuous game.

The ball that was used is as hard as a baseball and about one-half of the size. The ball is made in Spain. Blanchard, who has had a dry goods store on the corner of Aliso and San Pedro streets for the last thirty-seven years, has the only place the balls can be bought.

Although as hard as a baseball, the ball bounces almost as lively as a tennis ball.

The game itself it played much the same as that the school children play on the public playgrounds, only the court is about four times as large.

BAT BALL.

The players batted the ball with their bare hands just like a tennis player hits the rubber tennis ball with his racquet and the ball slapped up against the wall and came bounding back with terrific speed. If the ball had been hit with a baseball bat it could not have gone faster. It would bound 100 feet back off the wall.

Blanchard said that in Spain the champion could make the ball bound back a block and a half and that the courts there were all a block long.

One of the players showed his hand after the game. It was twice as thick as the ordinary hand and all calloused and rough. It looked as if the palm had been petrified and resembled a horn toad's scaly back.

George Berecochea, the champion, said, "It took me a year to toughen my hand. It used to hurt at the joints like a toothache every time I hit the ball."

CLEVER WORK.

The game itself was a clever piece of work, Berecochea and the Mexican Hill were matched together. At first they seemed to be hopelessly outclassed. The score was 17 to 5 against them in favor of the two Basques and 21 was the game. "Hard luck, George," sympathized everybody. "This is too easy," laughed George.

By several brilliant rallies the champion and the Mexican brought the game to 20 all. The Mexican was a wonderful back court player picking the ball off the back wall and driving it the 100 feet of the court like a cannon ball. Champion Berecochea played the fore court. He was the brains of the game, the man with the clever choppy strokes who fooled his opponents.

With the game 20 to 20, it was necessary to play until one scored 30. When the game was extended one could hear the murmuring of the word "Peso, peso," in the crowd and one knew bets were being laid.

The game went to 29 to 29. It was necessary then to extend it to 40. Again the word "Peso, peso" was murmured in the crowd. More bets were being laid, old wagers tripled. The champion and the Mexican won, 40 to 36.

FOOLING.

When it all was over one began to wonder if the champion and his Mexican friend in overalls had not been kidding somebody, just sort of fooling around until the wagers became heavy. They came up from behind so brilliantly and won so easily when they wanted to.

Every year or so these Basques and Mexicans have inter-city games between the champions of Santa Barbara, Monterey and Fresno. They say that there is much wild excitement then and wagers that run into the thousands are made.

An effort is being made to arrange a series of matches between Joe Lacey, the American champion of Southern California, and George Berecochea, the Basque champion. They will play one game with the Spanish hard ball and one with the soft American ball. That is, they will, if Joe Lacey's hand can stand the hard ball. He is going to try and find out.

Charley Hall picks Brooklyn as a sure winner in the National, with Philadelphia and Boston making it interesting all the way. He says that Wilhoit has been handicapped by illness, while Corhan has been having trouble with his arm.

CAMPI BEATS UP OLD JOHNNY COULON.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, July 28.—Eddie Campi of San Francisco was given the decision tonight in a four-round boxing bout with Johnny Coulon of Chicago, former bantam-weight champion. When the fighters weighed in, it was found that Campi weighed 120 pounds, two pounds overweight. Coulon, who weighed 110, insisted that on account of his opponent's excess weight the fight be declared a draw, whoever won. Campi had so much the best of it, however, that the referee disregarded the agreement and gave the local boy the decision.

Davenport then went to bat and hit for a double, Pratt and Marsans scoring.

Two Millions in Packard Trucks for U. S. Army

A Washington dispatch of July 8 states that the U. S. War Department has placed an order for 592 Packard Worm-Drive Motor Trucks, making a total of 716 Packards, valued at more than $2,000,000, purchased by the government since March 20, 1916.

This huge order is based solely on the performance of other Packards already in the field with the U. S. Army.

The terrific grind of border service has proved the superiority of Packard transportation for military work, just as strenuous everyday hauling in every line of trade has made the Packard supreme in the commercial world.

It is highly significant that a large proportion of the Packard trucks produced are being absorbed by repeat orders from satisfied owners of Packard equipment.

Aha!

NEW AUTO ROAD TO PASADENA.

Scenic Highway Suggested to Relieve Congestion.

Elysian Park Route Appears to be Feasible.

Los Angeles River Bridge is Stumbling Block.

Declaring that the present routes for automobiles from Los Angeles into the territory northeast of the city are inadequate and decidedly indirect, while at the same time passing through an unattractive part of the city, the board of directors of the Automobile Club of Southern California has heartily endorsed the building of a new route which would lead from the north entrance of the Broadway tunnel to a terminus at the corner of Fair Oaks avenue and Colorado street in Pasadena.

MUCH SHORTER.

This proposed new route, selected by J. B. Lippincott, well-known consulting engineer, would not only pass through scenic sections of the country, it is declared, but would materially shorten the distance between Los Angeles and Pasadena, at the same time eliminating all dangerous railway and street railway crossings, providing a safety boulevard which would be used by thousands of motorists daily.

A resolution, drafted by the automobile club directors at their last meeting, has been sent to the Board of Supervisors of Los Angeles county, stating that the club directors, together with representative citizens of Pasadena and Eagle Rock are vitally interested in this project, and askinf for an early meeting with the Supervisors in order to bring the matter to a successful conclusion.

"SAFETY ROUTE."

In the report on the "safety route" submitted to the automobile club directors by Mr. Lippincott, and which will be referred to the Board of Supervisors, are the following pertinent facts bearing upon the project:

The Los Angeles park department has been considering a route to Pasadena during the past two years, in its relation to the freer opening of Elysian Park which is now quite inaccessible to the public.

It has been found that the best route to serve this purpose would start at the corner of North Broadway and Sunset boulevard and proceed directly through Chavez ravine and the old oil fields past the Quarantine Station, the Barlow Sanatarium to the entrance of Elysian Park. (This is the most open and attractive portion of the park. No railroads or street cars and but little other traffic would be encountered until the river is passed. The grade would be very easy.)

This route leads almost to the northerly corner of Elysian Park—thence across the Los Angeles River to the point where Verdugo road joins San Fernando road—thence by way of Verdugo road and Central avenue to Colorado boulevard in Eagle Rock—thence along Colorado boulevard over the Arroyo Seco bridge at Colorado street to the city of Pasadena.

CROSSING.

There should be an overhead crossing of the Southern Pacific main line and San Fernando road which is adjacent and parallel thereto.

The drive through Elysian Park would be most attractive.

This is decidedly the best route out of the center of the city toward Pasadena because of light grades and the avoidance of traffic.

After crossing to the easterly side of the Los Angeles River for a distance of approximately a mile, the road passes along a narrow park area bordering Verdugo road. This strip of land is now being acquired by the city of Los Angeles by purchase under the assessment district plan.

The Eagle Rock Valley, the Annandale Country Club and the beautiful bridge spanning the Arroyo Seco to Colorado street in Pasadena are features which would contribute toward making this an attractive drive.

For 50 per cent. of its course between the tunnel and Elysian Park the road would use existing diagonal roads.

Beyond the entrance of Elysian Park the road is already constructed as a park drive for a distance of one and one-half miles through the park.

The Verdugo road is paved from San Fernando road to Central avenue, a distaance of one mile.

From Eagle Rock to the city of Pasadena the road is a paved highway at present.

FEASIBLE.

The above quoted features of Mr. Lippincott's report give the existing reasons why this route, which is the best suited to opening Elysian Park, is entirely feasible. In fact, after summing up all the evidence, the majority of those vitally interested in the project are inclined to believe that it is the best possible route. The matter, however, is to come before the joint meeting of the Supervisors, the automobile club directors and the citizens of Pasadena and Eagle Rock.

In its sincere effort to provide motorists of this locality with the "safety highway" to Pasadena and adjoining territory, the club has considered the following features of Mr. Lippincott's comprehensive report:

For 50 per cent. of the course between the tunnel and Elysian Park, it would be necessary to condemn rights of way across blocks that are occupied by a poor class of buildings. The value of real estate in this neighborhood is relatively low, but there would be a multitude of different holders to deal with.

A new right of way would have to be obtained across the Los Angeles River bottoms and the grade of the road should be fixed so as to pass over the main lines of the Southern Pacific on the northeast side of the river.

The distance from the Broadway tunnel to the Los Feliz (River) road is 2.8 miles, none of which is paved.

Central avenue between Verdugo road and Eagle Rock boulevard is not paved, a distance of 1.8 miles.

THE OBSTACLE.

The great obstacle to this route is the necessity for a bridge crossing the Los Angeles River bottom and the river itself.

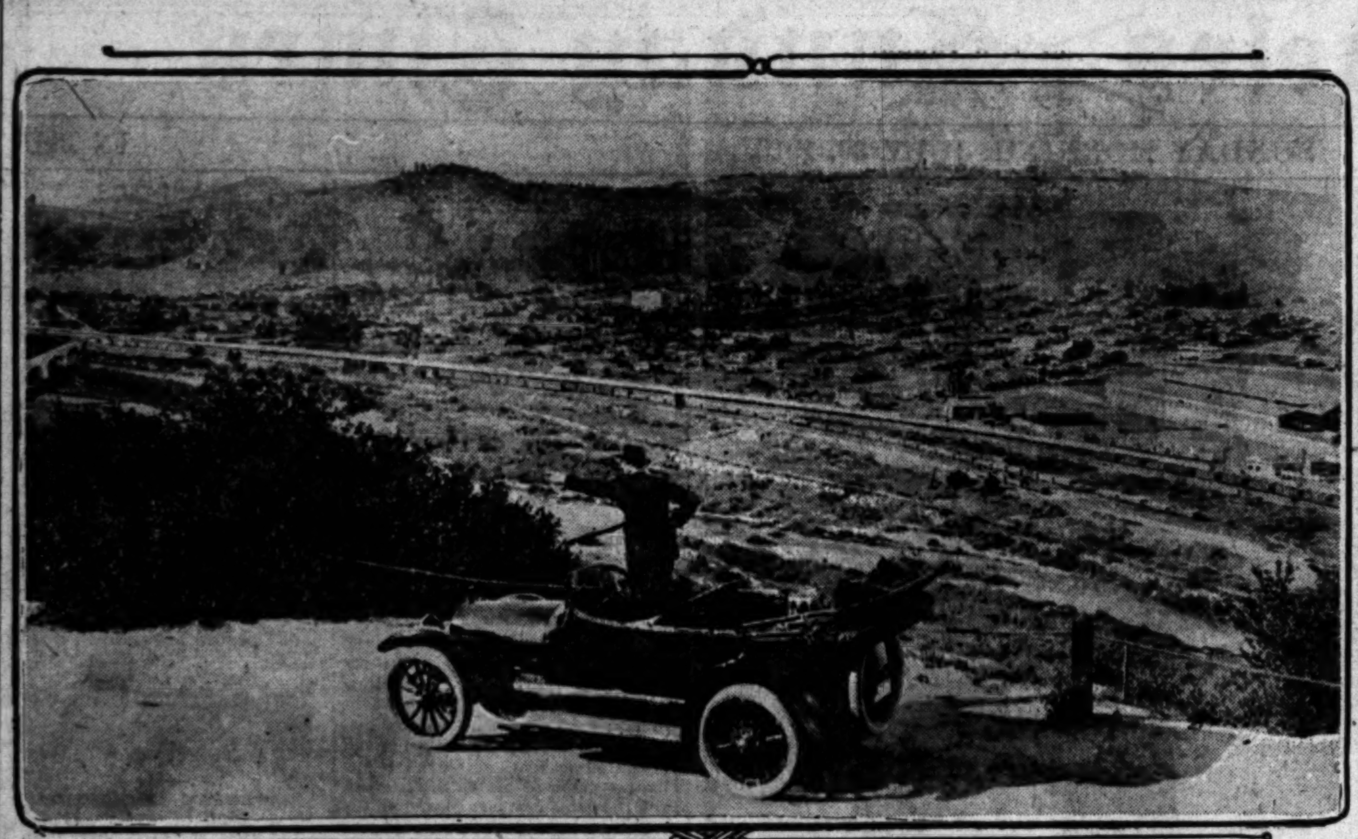
It is pointed out from this report by the automobile club officials, that the advantages of such a "safety highway" so greatly outweigh the obstacles as to make the obstacles almost negligible. In all important improvements some such difficulties must be overcome, they point out, if the improvements are important enough.

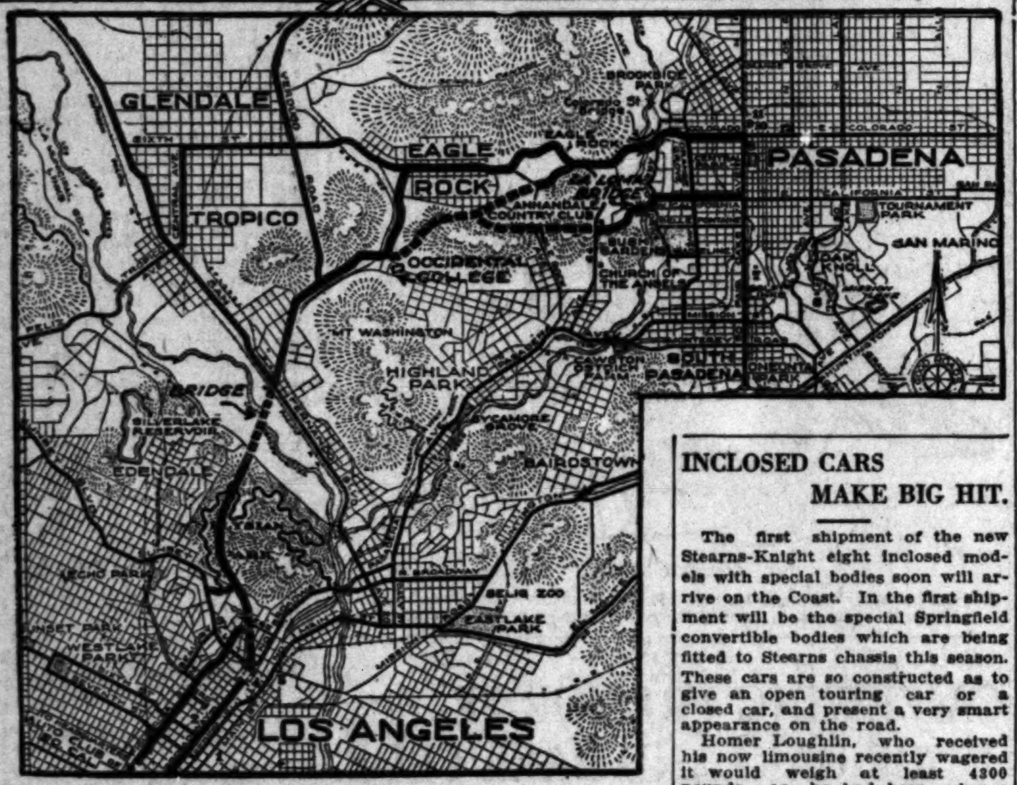
It has developed, in the course of investigation covering considerable time by the club officials and others interested in the project, that the greatest problem to be considered is the bridge required over the river. It is stated that if it can be arranged for, the other problems will adjust themselves.

Plans and estimates of such a bridge over the river as has been referred to will be asked of the county highway engineer through the Board of Supervisors by the automobile club and others interested. With these plans and estimates the question can be discussed more intelligently, it is pointed out.

Of particular importance is the fact that out of the total distance of nine and three-quarters miles to Pasadena, made possible over the new "safety highway," exactly five miles is already paved.

In summing up, the automobile club's board of directors points out that such a highway would: Assist in opening Elysian Park; would furnish necessary road communication to a large number of people living in Glendale, Tropico, Eagle Rock, as well as Pasadena; would tend to relieve the congestion on existing roads between Los Angeles and Pasadena; would provide a route of unusual scenic beauty and one of which more than half is already paved.





Los Angeles to Pasadena via Elysian Park.

A new route suggested by the engineers of the Auto Club. The Buick Light Six (above) is overlooking the proposed bridge which is the real stumbling block of the whole proposition.

Attention.

BRAKES AND TIRES ARE TOO OFTEN OVERWORKED.

"THE man who continually speeds up his car and suddenly applies the brake is rolling dollars from his purse by wearing out the tires within one-half their mileage as well as shortening the life of the brake lining and shattering the mechanism of his car in general. If car owners would only use the brake when necessary, the brake lining that comes originally with the car when new would wear as long as any other part," states Louis Lichtenberger of the Los Angeles Saddlery and Finding Company, factory distributors of the Racine Horse Shoe tire.

CAUSES.

"Long cuts in tires are usually caused by the sudden application of the brake, due to the car traveling faster than the tire proportionally revolves, and when a sharp obstacle of any description comes in contact with its surface naturally cuts the rubber in place of the tire rolling over it. Thin spots on the tread of the tire are also usually caused by applying the brake. When a rear tire wears continually in one spot the cause can be invariably traced to the brake drum having locked in the same place each time the brake is applied.

"Apply the brake cautiously and these troubles will be avoided. Of course, there are times when conditions warrant the sudden stop. However, nine times out of ten, or even more, the brake can be applied gently.

SKIDDING.

"Sharp, quick turns or fast driving at curves usually cause rear wheels to slide and skid. This not only wears off the tread rubber, but is also injurious to the fabric. It is advisable to inspect the brake device occasionally and see that it is working properly. Jack up the rear axle, clearing both wheels from the ground; then start the engine and engage the clutch. If upon applying the foot brake it is found that one wheel revolves and the other does not, or one wheel revolves faster than the other, this shows that one brake band grips tighter than the other and the tighter one will naturally put the greater strain on its tire, which will, of course, cause excessible wear on the tire and the brake as well.

"The clutch is an important member of the car and long life to the tires. It should be kept in good order at all times so that it will do its part in the right manner when the gears are engaged.

"When it is to be considered that the average motorist severely applies the brake 100 times when once will be sufficient and the gas and spark is operated five times when once is really the only time that it is necessary to be used in traveling a certain distance and other operations proportionately, one can begin to see where the cost of motoring can be greatly reduced."

Motor Truck Adopted.

AUTOCAR EFFICIENT IN RAPID RETAIL DELIVERY.

UNTIL three years ago the motor truck was considered impractical in the delivery of coal. Dealers claimed that it could not be operated efficiently, and did their retail delivery work by horse-drawn wagons. However, in the last three years practically all of them have adopted the motor truck as standard, and a great many of these are using the Autocar. One to ten Autocars are operated by 236 coal firms in the East, and the dealers declare them to be the most economical vehicles for this work, according to information received last week by the M. S. Bulkley Company, California distributors for the Autocar.

THE REASON.

The reason for this complete reversal of conditions lies deeper than the fact that business generally has come to regard the motor truck as a necessity; it lies in the development of motor trucks to meet the specific problems of retail coal delivery.

A few years back the only trucks used by coal men were the heavy three and five-ton units. These proved unsatisfactory; they were too long and unwieldy, difficult to handle in coal yards and narrow streets, and they required special scales. The first cost, fixed charges and operating expenses of the larger trucks mounted up too high, and they were too slow moving to cover the necessary ground.

SMALLER SIZE.

The Autocar two-ton coal truck was evolved to overcome the difficulties that had been an obstacle in the way of motorizing coal delivery, and the coal dealer quickly proved that he had only been awaiting the right car for his business.

The short wheel base of the Autocar (only 97 inches) made an immediate appeal; it makes it possible to manipulate the Autocar in coal yards, to use the standard coal scale, and to chute in narrow streets without blocking traffic. This same feature adds a great deal to the ground-covering ability of the Autocar; the ease with which the short, compact unit gets through traffic means many hours saved in the course of a year.

AUTOMOBILE LOCK DOES THE WORK.

An automobile lock designed to secure your automobile while it is standing on the street, or during your absence from it, is the invention of J. F. Vervoort of No. 416½ North Hill street. The lock is made of case-hardened steel and is guaranteed by its inventor to be unbreakable. Patents were recently secured by Mr. Vervoort.

The lock is fitted to the steering column just below the steering wheel and will lock the front wheels of a car in three direction, to the right, the left or straight ahead. In either position it is impossible for an auto thief to steer the car in any other than the set direction.

The lock itself is the Yale tumbler patent, the bolt of which fits into a notch cut into the collar of the steering wheel. When the lock has once been applied it is sible to take it off, unless the steering column is removed made of hard steel in order hack saws or hammers.

INCLOSED CARS MAKE BIG HIT.

The first shipment of the new Stearns-Knight eight inclosed models with special bodies soon will arrive on the Coast. In the first shipment will be the special Springfield convertible bodies which are being fitted to Stearns chassis this season. These cars are so constructed as to give an open touring car or a closed car, and present a very smart appearance on the road.

Homer Loughlin, who received his now limousine recently wagered it would weigh at least 4300 pounds, as he had been using a heavy limousine of another make, and could not conceive of an inclosed car weighing less than two tons. The Stearns, when placed on the scales, showed a weight of 3900 pounds.

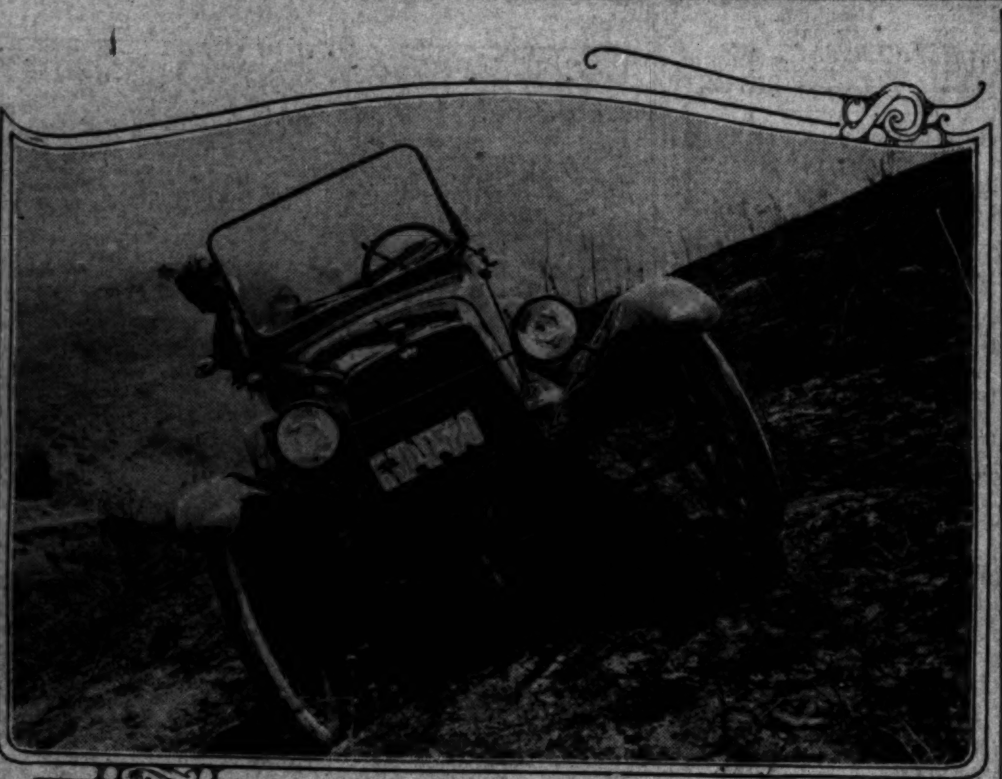
threading its way through traffic the engine would stop with the car and start again when the car was started, all with one small hand lever or foot throttle. Plainly then, fuel would only be used when the car was actually in motion and at no other time, resulting in a great saving in gasoline.

MUCH LIGHTER.

While this prophecy may seem extreme, let it be plainly understood that the chassis of the future will be very much lighter than that of the 1916 car, and probably the draw bar pull will be smaller, lighter, more efficient and, above all, more flexible. Carburetion will be greatly improved to make the future car perfect; in fact, every piece, part, detail and device will have its effect on the car as a whole. More aluminum will be used, and more hollow and tubular parts, and gasoline mileage will go up maybe as high as forty miles per gallon.

And then maybe the price of gasoline or whatever name may be had for fuel in the future may go up maybe as high as 40 cents per gallon.

Come what may, we can rest assured that, judging the future by the past, and knowing there has certainly been a 500 per cent. improvement in automobiles in the last five years, why not a 500 per cent. improvement in the next five; and that being true, surely forty miles per gallon and the ultimate car can be expected.



On a real hill—measure it.

A little Saxon four sticking on a 41 degree hill-side. The salesman, with the worried look, is holding a string with a watch on the end of it. The angle is very noticeable. The low center of gravity on the Saxon makes it an exceedingly hard car to turn over.

Not so Bad.

TRANSCONTINENTAL TRIP IS EASY PROPOSITION.

JUDGING by the experience of Miss Claire Rochester, a woman need not look upon a prospective transcontinental automobile trip with fear and trepidation. On the contrary, she should regard it in the light of an enjoyable experience and be anxious to undertake it. Miss Rochester recently arrived on the Pacific Coast after driving an Apperson Roadaplane from New York in nine days.

ENJOYABLE.

In conversation with Harris M. Hanshue, manager of the local Apperson branch at San Francisco, Miss Rochester said: "Every minute of the ride across the continent was enjoyable. Of course, this was due largely to the fact I had no mechanical trouble with my car at all, not once having to make an adjustment or repair of any kind, but aside from this fact I would advocate that every woman motorist plan to take this trip at her earliest convenience.

"There is no sense in fearing a long ride of this kind," Miss Rochester said. "The routes are well marked and although road conditions vary, it is this variation that adds spice to the journey. Different kinds of weather are to be encountered and although the sun may blister you one day and the rain sweep down on you the next, it is a grand experience and one every woman with any kind of love for the outdoors can thoroughly enjoy.

GREAT TRIP.

"The fact is I never felt so well in all my life as the day I arrived in San Francisco. The trip was a great health-giving tonic for me. I believe it would be to any woman. I would advise giving more time to the trip than I did, as nine days is pretty quick time and there is no opportunity for side trips nor inspecting carefully the scenic wonders along the route, but it is far better to make it in nine days, if necessary, than never to make it at all."

An odd instance of how fast the world moves was that in which a boy 16 years old of Claflin, Kan., was involved. The boy had never ridden on a railroad train until last week, when his father took him to Wichita, and he rode home in a motor car which the father purchased, making his first motor trip.

Fair Enough.

FORM-A-TRUCKS MAKE GOOD IN MANY LINES.

ONE of the features in connection with the recent commercial motor vehicle run to San Diego was the clutch test demonstration. The trucks were required to line up at a curb, and at a signal the driver applied the power to determine if the front wheels would ascend the curb, thereby proving that, in making the grades on the run the old ruse of slipping the clutch had not been practiced.

The Smith Form-a-Truck, driven by Harry Maisel, that participated in the run, made an impression on the spectators by the readiness with which the curb was climbed. The truck carried more than its rated capacity load, but this seemed to have no influence.

A few days ago, in making a demonstration to a prospective buyer, Leo Kelly was asked to deliver a quantity of builder's supplies that was encased in boxes. The load weighed over 2400 pounds, and to make the delivery under instructions it was necessary to drive up a curb. The Smith Form-a-Truck repeated its performance at San Diego, the curb proving no obstacle to progress at all.

SPECTACULAR.

The service rendered by Smith Form-a-Truck attachments in use by the militia on duty in Texas and Arizona has been so spectacular that the entire border country has become interested, and this section of the United States will be one of the best markets for this attachment, reports W. O. Gates of Los Angeles, western sales representative for the Chicago concern. Mr. Gates is now at El Paso in the interest of the company and incidentally making a study of the Smith performance in the hard usages to which they are being subjected.

"I have been surprised time and again to see these little Smith Form-a-Trucks at work," Gates writes. "It does not seem as if anything can stop them. They are running around down here loaded with all the paraphernalia that can be put on them and they are getting away with it. Deep sand cannot stall them, and the economy of operation is proving of interest to all the quartermaster-sergeants who have charge of the supplies."

TOURING WEEK STRONGLY BOOSTED.

Mr. A. G. Seiberling, general manager of the Haynes Automobile Company, Kokomo, Ind., endorses the widespread movement on foot to make the week of August 6 to 12 a National touring week—a sort of touring festival, one might say—the purpose being to induce motorists all over the country to take this occasion to discover one of the most pleasurable uses to which an automobile can be put.

little stunt pulled by the Smith-Form-a-Truck recently. A loaded truck was driven over an eight curb in a demonstration and it took the leap without even hesitating. The load weighed over pounds.

Nifty.

SAXON CAR IS TIP-OVER PROOF.

LOW GRAVITY CENTER MAKES IT HARD TO TURN OVER.

Forty-one-degree Angle Fails to Have Any Effect on the Little Machine—It Can be Tipped Over, but it Takes a Mighty Up-and-down Hill to do It.

It is possible to turn a Saxon "4" over, but it's mighty hard to do. Having the lowest center of gravity of any standard automobile manufactured, the little roadster is as near "tip-over proof" as they make them.

SOME ANGLE.

Salesman McClure is shown in a Saxon "4," which is sitting on a hillside at an angle of 41 deg. The camera was not tipped, as McClure will testify. He was also sitting at an angle of 41 deg., all ready to leave the Saxon if it started sliding. The watch on the end of the string held by McClure forms a perpendicular line. The edge of the paper is horizontal. The axle of the car makes the angle. Measure it with a protractor.

The low center of gravity makes the Saxon "4" practically skid proof, without a doubt it is one of the safest cars in the world to drive. But economy of operation rather than its "safety-first" feature is what makes the little Saxon a selling success.

LOW UPKEEP.

Thousands of cars in the hands of thousands of owners have actually proven that the average cost of operation does not exceed one cent per mile. Economy of operation plus the service that the car gives creates the demand which keeps the Saxon Motor Sales Company busy telegraphing for more cars; and it is almost impossible to find a second-hand Saxon "4" on the market.

STANDARDIZATION BECOMING POPULAR.

Standardization on one certain make of truck is rapidly becoming popular among many of the larger western commercial car operators. A great deal of time and money has been spent in the process of elimination, and transportation experts have been employed for the sole purpose of selecting a truck combining the greatest efficiency and economy possibilities.

Many concerns demanding the most exacting service have adopted the Moreland distillate truck. Only the past week Moreland orders were received at the local factory from the Southern Pacific Company, Wells Fargo & Co., United States government and the Union Oil Company. Other late Moreland orders include the Fullerton Union High School, L. A. Can Company, J. W. Crichashauk, William J. Mann, Harry Cohen, H. R. Boynton Company, Griffin & Anderson, Heck Bros., City Transfer Company of Redlands, A. P. Cross, Willis & Ingles, Axelson Machine Company, A. Giuffre, Royal Hawaiian Garage, P. W. Mansfield, Golden Eagle Milling Company, Mercer & Wilson, M. H. McAlmond and a number yet to receive Manager Moreland's official O.K.

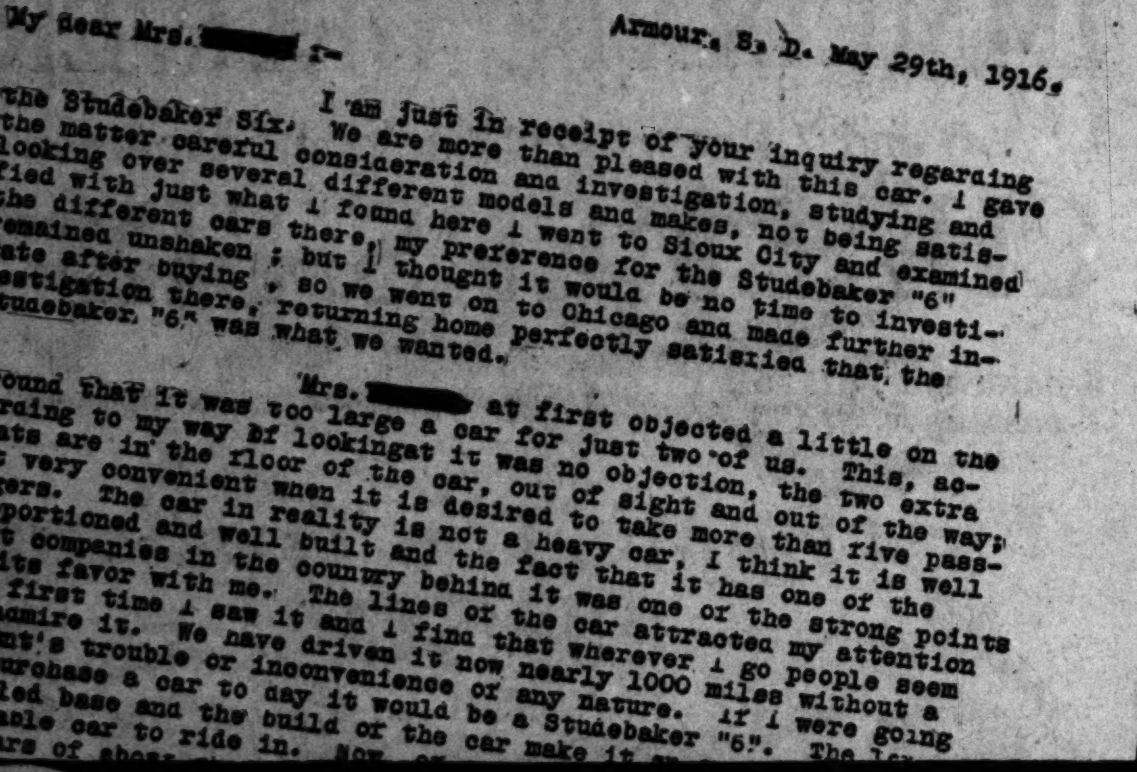
—regarding the Studebaker SIX

Wrote a lawyer to a friend



My dear Mrs.[redacted]:-

Armour, S. D. May 29th, 1916.

I am just in receipt of your inquiry regarding the Studebaker Six. We are more than pleased with this car. I gave the matter careful consideration and investigation, studying and looking over several different models and makes, not being satisfied with just what I found here I went to Sioux City and examined the different cars there, my preference for the Studebaker "6" remained unshaken; but I thought it would be no time to investigate after buying, so we went on to Chicago and made further investigation there, returning home perfectly satisfied that the Studebaker "6" was what we wanted.

Mrs.[redacted] at first objected a little on the ground that it was too large a car for just two of us. This, according to my way of lookingat it was no objection, the two extra seats are in the floor of the car, out of sight and out of the way, but very convenient when it is desired to take more than five passengers. The car in reality is not a heavy car, I think it is well proportioned and well built and the fact that it has one of the best companies in the country behind it was one of the strong points in its favor with me. The lines of the car attracted my attention the first time I saw it and I find that wherever I go people seem to admire it. We have driven it now nearly 1000 miles without a moment's trouble or inconvenience of any nature. If I were going to purchase a car to day it would be a Studebaker "6". THAT'S the way this owner bought his. (Name furnished on request.) That's the way YOU will buy yours. AFTER comparison!

Comparison is the BIG reason that Studebaker sales have more than doubled over last year's sales.

And this is why:

When you set this SERIES 17 Studebaker SIX side by side with any other 6-cylinder car on the market and make comparisons on the essentials of POWER, SIZE and basic QUALITY, you find that any other car that equals it, is priced from $250 to $400 HIGHER.

You SAVE from $250 to $400 by buying a Studebaker—and you don't have to sacrifice one iota of the activity, endurance, luxury and low cost of maintenance that you want in a car.

See the car and judge for yourself. You'll see why this letter was written.

MERCER FACTORY DOING ITS BEST.

BUT ORDERS CONTINUE TO PILE UP IN ADVANCE.

Local Distributor has Difficult Time Signing up for Enough Cars to Supply Pacific Coast Demand. New Disc Wheels Create a Tremendous Sensation.

"Getting additional shipments under way. Factory working capacity to meet increased orders coming in from every section, even including Australia and Japan."

This telegram was received at the Mercer agency last week from George R. Bentel, the Mercer distributor for the Pacific Coast, who is now in the East hurrying along the '17 models for early delivery here. Orders had piled up to such an extent that Bentel hastened to the Trenton (N. J.) plant to not only get his regular quota but additional cars.

SELLING 'EM.

"And it is well that he is getting more cars for us," said Salesmanager Jack Ruddle. "We have sold at least one car for each day that Mr. Bentel has been gone. The Merger recently sold with the disc wheels is one of the Mercer sensations of the year here and we will have all the orders that we can fill for them.

"This will be the best Mercer year in the history of the car, not only on the Coast, but throughout the United States."

NEW GRANT SIXES ARE CLASSIER THAN EVE[illegible]

THE new 1917 Grant car has arrived. The first shipment of these light sixes was received last Tuesday evening by the Bekins-Speers Motor Company, and was placed on exhibition there the following morning. The new car, in general design, is similar to that of last season, but several features have been added by which the efficiency of the motor has been greatly increased.

Through a minor change in design more power and "pep" has been added to the motor. This resulted from the lengthening of the pistons and decreasing the combustion chamber. The compression thus was increased materially. The change added to the "pick-up" and pulling power of the motor at all speeds.

MORE ACCESSIBLE.

The valves have been made more accessible for lubrication and inspection, and are much easier to remove for grinding and clean the carbon from the motor. The motor is the valve-in-the-head type, which produces the greatest power possible in a given bore and stroke, and which permits of great fuel efficiency.

The gasoline tank has been placed on the rear of the chassis instead of in the cowl, and has been made of twelve instead of ten-gallon capacity. The fuel is brought to the carburetor by means of the Stewart-Warner vacuum feed system.

The Wagner two-[illegible] built especially for the [illegible] is used for starting and [illegible] electricity for the lights, [illegible] etc. This is improvement [illegible] single-unit system of last [illegible]

The improvement in the [illegible] the car also is marked. [illegible] the new model are [illegible] the radiator to the cowl [illegible] the front doors on the [illegible] the cowl the lines dip [illegible] graceful, boat-like [illegible] the rear of the tonneau.

IMPROVEMENT.

The compartments of the [illegible] big, roomy and comfortable. [illegible] driver's compartment has [illegible] leg-room for both pilot and [illegible]ger. In the tonneau there [illegible] room for three passengers. [illegible] holstery is high-grade, [illegible] comfortable leather.

The appointments of the [illegible] up to the minute in every [illegible] and the equipment is [illegible] every way.

The new factory of the [illegible] Cleveland, which has [illegible]structed to care for the [illegible] business of the coming [illegible] be opened within the [illegible] weeks, and when it is ready [illegible]put of the Grant will [illegible] jump to schedule. The present [illegible]ters at Findlay are too [illegible]mit of scheduled [illegible] Twenty thousand cars [illegible] sold for the coming [illegible] Grant, and that number will [illegible]tute the production schedule [illegible]son.

Improvements.

REFINEMENTS FEATURE NEW STUTZ MACHIN[illegible]

RETAINING the same general appearance and design but incorporating a number of refinements and mechanical improvements, the first shipment of the new series Stutz automobiles has been received in Los Angeles by the Walter M. Brown Company, Southern California distributors. Although no direct announcement had been made of the arrival of the cars, so much interest was shown that already a large number of persons have called to look the new models over.

ROTATION.

It is said by Mr. Brown that the demand for Stutz automobiles will be so great throughout the new season that deliveries will become a matter of rotation. The Stutz Motor Car Company recently [illegible] capitalized in order to [illegible] ditions to the factory [illegible] crease in production, but [illegible] H. C. Stutz writes Mr. [illegible] it can be foretold even [illegible] that the factory will have [illegible] in supplying the demand.

The Stutz line will be [illegible] four and six-passenger [illegible] and a turtleback roadster. Subsequently, a speedster [illegible] with a sixteen-valve engine, [illegible] after the famous racing [illegible] be put on the market. It [illegible] expected now that the speedster [illegible] be ready for delivery [illegible] fall, as all energies at the [illegible] will be directed at first to [illegible] the types in more general [illegible]

EXACTLY THE SAME.

The four and six-passenger [illegible] known as the bulldog [illegible] exactly the same in design. [illegible] six-passenger car will have a [illegible] body, however, to accommodate [illegible] extra seats in the tonneau. [illegible] auxiliary seats are designed [illegible] under the front seat when [illegible] use and will be entirely [illegible] from view. The four-passenger [illegible] be equipped with a cabinet [illegible]ing thermos bottles and room [illegible] robes.

The spring suspension has [illegible] changed, a flat type being [illegible] rear. Earl Cooper, the racing [illegible]er, who rode in the new car [illegible] factory, tells Mr. Brown [illegible] the most comfortable riding [illegible]bile he ever sat in. The [illegible]pension is fifty-six inches [illegible] inches longer than the one [illegible] used.

Some change has been [illegible] intake manifold, which [illegible]structed that it gives the [illegible] efficiency. Poor grades of [illegible] are in general use now [illegible]lent results will be obtained from the kind of fuel [illegible] market. The carburetor's [illegible] is raised to make it more [illegible]

The regular painting [illegible]els will be battleship gray, [illegible] red, maroon or ultramarine [illegible] colors will be optional, but [illegible] or blue is chosen, time [illegible]en for these jobs to go [illegible] paint shop as special, the [illegible] gray alone being stock. No [illegible]ination in price will be [illegible] cause of color selection. The upholstery is either [illegible] brown Spanish leather, [illegible] preference.

LARGER SIZES SEEM POPU[illegible]

A rather interesting [illegible] sales of Dayton tires came [illegible] last week when in checking [illegible] the past month Mr. [illegible] the Wade Tire and Rubber [illegible]pany, agents for this Dayton [illegible]matic tire, found that [illegible] thirds of the entire volume [illegible]ness done on this tire has [illegible] the two larger sizes, [illegible]

"When I speak of volume [illegible]ness," says Mr. Wade, "I do not [illegible] that the proceeds from [illegible] tires were greater, for that [illegible] natural, but that in the number [illegible] tires sold, about two-thirds of [illegible] actual number has been [illegible] sizes, which shows what the [illegible] of the big cars think about [illegible] tons at least."

LOCAL CONCERN TAKES ARIZONA.

NEW TERRITORY ADDED TO THE SAXON COMPANY.

Ten Counties in Southern California, as Well as Arizona, are Now Controlled by Local Agency. New Addition Does not Come as a Complete Surprise.

The State of Arizona has been al[illegible]ted as additional territory to the [illegible]axon Motor Sales Company, dis[illegible]butors of Saxon motor cars in [illegible]outhern California.

This information, which was made [illegible]blic this week, did not come as a [illegible]rprise, as it was expected that the [illegible]axon factory would recognize the [illegible]lendid strides made by the local [illegible]ncern in introducing the Saxon [illegible], with an increase in territory.

A NEAT CLIMAX.

The additional territory granted to [illegible] Saxon Motor Sales Company [illegible]mes as a climax to the selling cam[illegible]ign instituted just a little over ten [illegible]onths ago. At that time Saxon [illegible] were practically unknown in [illegible]uthern California although one of [illegible] biggest sellers in the East. The [illegible]al agency, which opened with a [illegible]dest place of business on Olive [illegible]eet, was not conceded a chance. [illegible] dope was upset, according to [illegible]dern phraseology. Saxon cars [illegible] enthusiastically received. The [illegible]siness grew by leaps and bounds. [illegible]en came the move into the larger [illegible] at the corner of Twelfth and [illegible]ive streets. The June business [illegible]bled that transacted in March, [illegible] the July sales are outdistancing [illegible] of the previous month.

TEN COUNTIES.

Ten counties in Southern Califor[illegible], as well as Arizona, are now [illegible]trolled from the Los Angeles [illegible]ncy. A stock of parts sufficient [illegible] take care of all the new territory [illegible] New Mexico besides is con[illegible]tly kept on hand.

Having handled nearly 600 Saxons [illegible] the past ten months, the dis[illegible]utors of the popular light cars [illegible]ect to handle 1200 cars in the [illegible]ing year.

In [illegible]ny cases motorists have never [illegible]iven anything but Hupmobiles [illegible] the first Hupmobile "20" was [illegible]ught out in 1907.

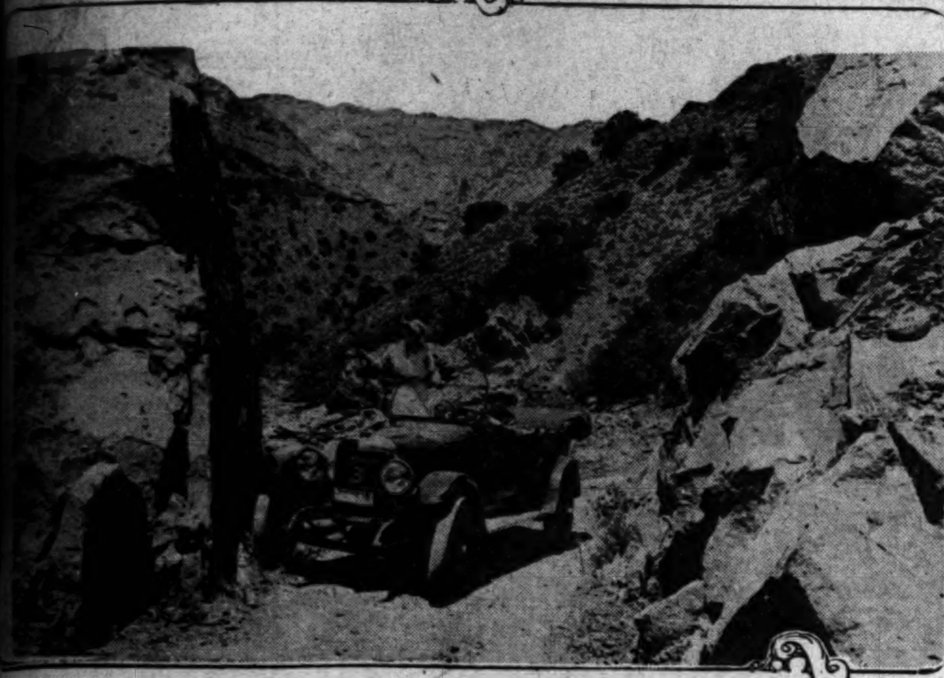
[illegible] event was a nonstop run of 440 [illegible]meters over rough and mountain[illegible] roads and sandy regions. The [illegible]ner's time was 10h. and 50m.



Southern California converts.

L. Lawrence, at wheel, and Miss Martin came out from New York City, skeptics about California's scenic beauty. Before long they were persuaded to invest in an Oakland Eight touring car and their eyes began to open. After enjoying a few of the nearby tours they turned enthusiastic boosters. They even think that Southern Californians do not really appreciate and enjoy the scenic beauties of this state. Here the converts are shown in their Oakland in the Sespe canyon.

NOT IN IT.

The people of New York rave the Adirondacks and the Cat- and New Englanders boast of White Mountains. We have to all those places famed in y and poetry and have not any of them to compare to what Southern California offers," said Mrs. Lawrence to W. E. Lanphier, while waiting at Hawley, King & Company's garage to have the brakes on her Oakland eight adjusted.

"I confess we were just like the other people from the East, when we first arrived here. We had heard something about California, but were disposed to accept it with a sneer, as we believed the East, meaning New York, of course, is the only place on earth. A friend took us a few rides in her car and then our eyes began to open. Finally, we decided we must have a car of our own to take us wherever we wished to go and we did not want to stay only on the boulevards, as fine as they are. So we bought the Oakland eight and have driven to Bear Valley, Camp Baldy, the Sespe Canyon and other places suggested to us. Now we know California's claims are justified and we are even contemplating driving back home in the Oakland."

RACINE DISTRIBUTOR GIVES REAL SERVICE.

Mr. Sam S. Corl, general representative of the Racine Rubber Company of Racine, Wis., spent the past week here in the interests of his firm and with Mr. F. H. Osler of the Osler-Racine Rubber Company, local distributors for the Racines, visited all the outside dealers in Southern California, studying conditions with a view to increasing business as well as bettering service.

"Service," says Mr. Corl, who is one of the best known and best versed rubber men in the country, "is the watchword of all Racine distributing points, but I must admit that the Osler-Racine Company here has one of the finest systems of any agency in the country and wherever we stopped in our trips out through the country, not a complaint was forthcoming but always a word of praise about the prompt service rendered by the Los Angeles distributors."

CHARLES O. WEARIN REPORTS ROADS IN FINE SHAPE.

Excellent Time Made in Northern Trip and Few Grades Encountered Which Require Intermediate Gear—Hudson Six Performs in Fine Style.

Mr. Charles O. Wearin of South Pasadena, in a letter to Harold L. Arnold, the Hudson distributor for Southern California, reports the condition of the roads between here and Medford, Or. Mr. Wearin made the trip in a Hudson Six and sends an excellent report of the performance of his machine. The roads are all in fair shape and little difficulty was experienced in the run. Mr. Wearin says:

ROADS FINE.

"The greater part of the roads are fine and the rest are good. North of Sacramento we found some rough roads every day, where we made detours, but never very bad at that, and then only for a short distance at a time. There are about twenty miles in the Redding Hills, which are rather rough and crooked, but the people who live in that neighborhood think they are good mountain roads. We found several 14, 16 and 18 per cent. grades, but short. We took it slow—fifteen or twenty miles an hour on that portion of the route. From Dunsmuir, north, the roads are fine although about half the distance the way is dirt road only; the rest is gravel rolled, scraped and packed, and we made twenty-five or thirty miles an hour the greater part of the day.

EASY GRADE.

"At Siskiyou we went into gear and made the grade easily on second, partly on high.

"Drove from Castello to Medford the last day 116 miles, finishing early and making a very easy run of it.

"Never once on our trip did not radiator even steam, nor did we have reason to make an adjustment of the carburetor when climbing to the highest altitudes reached on the trip.

FINE CAMPING.

"We found most excellent camping places all along the road, and north of Sacramento appreciated the splendid mountain streams, big timber, the good fishing and magnificent scenery we had every day on the trip. Some motorists complain of the roughness of the detours, but that depends largely on the kind of car they are driving, and the rate of speed at which they drive it. With our complete camping outfit our Hudson Six was so comfortable that we did not feel tired even after a long day's run on the mountain portion of the road.

NEW MILLER TIRE FILLS THE BILL.

"Since the advent of the new Miller black tread tire," says F. C. Millhoff, general sales manager of the Miller Rubber Company, "we have been asked, 'why the new addition to the Miller tire family?' It's a legitimate question and easily answered. Many automobile owners feel that the conditions in their territory or the use to which their car is put does not warrant the purchase of high-priced tires. They wish a popular-priced tire yet hesitate to buy of a company whose sole object in manufacture is to meet a price. Realizing the need the Miller Rubber Company set about to supply it. The Miller black tread tire is made of the same materials as the standard Miller tires, but by lessening the number of operations in manufacture the price has been reduced."

"KING EIGHT" IS STILL STEPPING.

HANGS UP PROVIDENCE-DETROIT HIGH-GEAR MARK.

Loaded Car Travels Over Rough Roads and Through Deep Mud. Run is Made in Fast Time and King Completes the Trip Without Single Adjustment.

Not content with having sewed up three championship performances, two of which were high gear, the King "Eight" has gone and created another for itself in making the run from Providence, R. I., to Detroit with gears sealed in high, according to a dispatch received here yesterday by Clarence A. English, local distributor.

This run from Providence to Detroit, a distance of 834 miles, passing through the Berkshires and into Canada, is to the automobile world of the East what the tour from Los Angeles to San Francisco is to the West.

HEAVYWEIGHTS.

In the eastern test, five passengers, chosen for their great weight as well as their pleasant company, rode in the car, the gears of which had been inspected and sealed "in the high." With only the clutch and the brake to depend upon, and no intermediate or low gears, the King was sent westward from Providence via Albany, Buffalo, Niagara Falls and Canada.

The report received here by Manager English states that in Canada the roads were about as poor as could be found, due to heavy mud and many ruts. However, the car, which was a stock model with a stock gear ratio of 4.64 to 1, plowed ahead until its triumphant arrival in its factory city of Detroit.

It was this same type model of King which out here climbed, conquered and topped Mt. Wilson, driven by Jerry Woodill, with gears sealed in high, accomplishing what had long been declared to be impossible. In fact, as pointed out yesterday by Mr. English, all tests ever conducted by the King factory or King distributors will be with stock model cars.

Other recent important tests "put over" by the King include the Los Angeles-to-San Francisco run and the 10,000-mile nonstop run conducted at New York and successfully completed.

That speed "stunts" will never enter into the curriculum of King performances was the statement made yesterday by Mr. English. He pointed out that speeding will be left to the owners and will not be considered by the factory. The tests heretofore have been chosen so as best to demonstrate the durability, power and flexibility of the car and of the material put into it.

SPEEDING POSSIBLE.

"All speeding can be done by owners if they wish to risk lives and fines, but either in the East or in the West the King will stand for reliability. Of course, the new sixty-horse-power models, both in the roadster and the seven-passenger, are capable of very high speed, but, knowing this, we are trying to demonstrate how superbly the factory has reached the maximum modern height in motor car construction by tests of real and not artificial value," he said.

CAPITAIN NOW AT OCEANSIDE.

C. A. Capitain, one of the veterans of the automobile industry on the Pacific Coast and one of the motor car mechanical experts who have come up with the industry from the old bicycle days, is now proprietor of the Oceanside Garage, Oceanside, Cal., having bought out the Oceanside Garage Company.

In 1900, Capitain was in charge of the mechanical department of the R. K. Holmes establishment, located where the Alexandria Buffet is today. Some of the first motor cars to reach the Pacific Coast were repaired by Capitain ten and fifteen years ago.

VACATION CARS IN BIG DEMAND.

More demand for vacation cars this year than ever before in its history is the report of the Grees-Robbins Company, representing the Chalmers and Hupmobile cars. The reason for the large increase in Chalmers inquiries is due to the fact that the 1917 models arrived just before the vacation period was on in earnest. The unusual service system inaugurated and maintained by the Hupp Motor Car Corporation is one of the big reasons given for the Hupmobile increase. The Hupp company maintains a very large number of service stations in California, assuring tourists of an exceptional service wherever the owner may be sojourning.

VESTA BATTERIES SELLING FAST.

Alle S. Hamilton of the L. A. Ignition Works, one of the pioneers in the ignition and battery business of this city, has been doing a very large business recently in the repairing and rebuilding of batteries, keeping a large force of men busy in this department.

Besides this the sale of Henricks starting and lighting systems and Vesta batteries has kept every one in the shops busy equipping the cars with these articles as fast as they could be installed.

Mr. Hamilton has been planning a business trip East for some time but the rush of business has piled upon him so fast that he has been unable to get away.

Ocean to ocean in an enclosed car.

Read Holiday who left for New York Friday in his eight cylinder Cadillac brougham. He was accompanied by his wife, two children and driver. While overland travel is becoming commoner every day, traveling across in an enclosed car is something distinctly out of the ordinary.

V-TYPE MOTOR IS PROVED SUPERIOR.

A radical turning toward V-type motors is taking place in the demand for motor cars in foreign countries as a result of the present European war, says Jay Hall, general sales manager of the Olds Motor Works of Lansing, Mich.

Recent orders for Oldsmobiles from foreign territory, says Hall, have been entirely for eight-cylinder machines, with motors of the V-type, where formerly four cylinders were in demand.

This is credited by Hall to the inherent superiority demonstrated by the V type of motor in aviation service during the present war, and the resultant publicity it has obtained. All of the recent high-powered aeroplanes are equipped with V-type motors, the reason lying in their greater flexibility and their supremely rapid response to control, giving the advantage in maneuvering, which, in aerial warfare, often spells the difference between life and death.

The Auto Manufacturers and Dealers Association of St. Louis has decided that instead of the usual fall show they will hold a show in the spring.

Oh, Girls, Look!

INCLOSED CAR MAKES HOT AND DUSTY JAUNT.

With New York as his goal, Read Holiday, accompanied by his wife and two children, departed from Los Angeles Friday morning in his Cadillac eight brougham. Mr. Holiday makes his home in New York, and the trip will mark the conclusion of one of the happiest vacations he ever has spent.

The brougham in which the trip is being made is one of the few inclosed cars in which such a drive ever has been attempted. The drive is being made by way of the Grand Canyon, Albuquerque, Santa Fe, Kansas City and the National Old Trails road.

COMFORT.

One of the two children on the trip is a babe in arms, but despite the fact that the little one is being taken, Mr. Holiday was eager to make the drive. In the inclosed car he declared the babe will be as safe as in a compartment of a railway train.

"There is no vacation or outing like the one spent in a motor trip, and a transcontinental trip is the best of all," he said before leaving. "With a dependable car like the Cadillac, and especially a closed car, there will be no discomfort whatever from the journey. We will run on a schedule, which will bring us to a first-class hotel every evening. Some of the travel on the desert will be done at night to avoid the heat of the day.

"I had two trunks which fit the running board built especially for this drive, and in them we carry our baggage. The trunks are practically dust proof, and provide the best possible protection for the baggage."

The schedule on which he is operating calls for the drive to be made in less than twenty days, with a short stop at the Grand Canyon.

ON THEIR WAY.

Another Cadillac touring party which is on the road is that of E. R. Pirtle and family of Tucson, who last week stopped in Los Angeles over night on his way to San Francisco. From there he will depart at once for the East, driving to New York by way of the Lincoln Highway.

He is driving his seven-passenger touring car.

Super Mileage

Actual mileage service rendered, above everything else, spells the real merit and downright value of tires. That's why we positively consider Racine Horse Shoe Tires one of the biggest values on the market.

These tires are built in one perfect, clinging unit, by the scientific blending and balancing of each and every part. This feature prohibits the separation of the tread from the fabric and preserves the tires' full efficiency during their entire life. Buy the tires with the horse shoe (lucky) tread.

Tremendous Success.

PEERLESS MACHINES GAIN IN POPULARITY.

The best year the Paige has ever had in California, showing an increase that puts last year's distribution completely in the shade, is revealed by the summary on the books of Smith Brothers at the close of their fiscal year. This is their first year with the Paige.

POPULAR.

People read about Paige value and beauty and comfort. They are constantly meeting the Paige on the boulevards, on the mountain grades, and in traffic. They talk with Paige owners. Paige performance excels in the points emphasized in Paige advertising. And these points sum up into superior automobile value. So people generally are talking Paige. Everybody recognizes the Paige. There are now so many in use that it is hard to go a block without seeing a Paige. And when they come to the store and ride in the car, they buy the Paige. So the energy, activity, financial strength and fair service policy of Smith Brothers, applied to a car of superior merit vigorously advertised, have made this a Paige year.

WAR ORDERS.

Peerless sales have absorbed all the cars obtainable. The Peerless factory was swamped with war orders. It is only in the past month that Smith Brothers have been able to get one of the famous Peerless trucks. But now they are obtainable for prompt delivery.

The new Peerless eight has proven to be a wonderful car. Each car allotted has been easily sold ahead of its arrival. Now a considerable number are distributed throughout Southern California, in the hands of people of the highest reputation and influence. The name of the new Peerless eight has been made. Next year hundreds will be available where one has been hard to get under the past conditions.

Still Traveling.

PATHFINDER TWELVE IS STEPPING ALONG ON HIGH.

George I. Lufkin, local Pathfinder twelve distributor, has received word from the factory that from the moment it started at San Diego on July 3, the trail of the Pathfinder twelve transcontinental "all-the-way-on-high-gear" car has been one continuous ovation clear across the continent.

Report on report has been received telling of this car's achievements in overcoming all road and climatic conditions. The American Automobile Association's seals on the transmission are still intact, as originally affixed before the start, and guaranteeing that the transmission has not been tampered with. Only two gears are in this transmission case, the high and reverse. The other gears were removed, and of necessity every mile across the continent has been on the high gear alone.

MET AND OVERCOME.

Mountains, desert sands, rough trails, mud and other hard conditions have been met with and overcome successfully. Motorists by the hundreds have turned out in every locality to see this wonderful Pathfinder twelve demonstration. At a time when motor car manufacturers balk at nothing in order to prove their confidence in and the worth of their cars, this performance of a stock Pathfinder twelve in crossing the continent from Pacific to Atlantic Coast; from San Diego and Los Angeles, via San Francisco to New York, on high gear alone, is a motor car accomplishment which takes first place in automobile achievements.

INSPECTION.

The number of celebrations extended the Pathfinder twelve and its crew on their transcontinental run by various civic organizations of the cities visited has delayed the programme as originally planned. The Pathfinder twelve had been scheduled to finish its run in New York City on this date, but the delays have occasioned a total tardiness of about three days, so the car will not finish in New York before Tuesday or Wednesday of the coming week. After its arrival in New York, the chairman of the contest board, A.A.A., will thoroughly inspect the car and break the seals. Official recognition of the Pathfinder twelve's remarkable run will then be forthcoming.

Mr. Lufkin states that this Pathfinder twelve performance has aided many motorists to decide in their selection of a car; the latest sale of a Pathfinder twelve having been made this week to F. K. Stearns of Beverly Hills. Mr. Stearns is well known in the commercial world as the chief executive of the largest wholesale drug concern with headquarters in Detroit.

NO TROUBLE ON LENGTHY JOURNEY.

Five thousand miles and no trouble yet is the report of G. F. Morrell of Merced, Cal., who has just been touring Yosemite in his Dodge Bros. motor car.

After visiting that beautiful valley and having such success both with his car and the enjoyment of the trip, Mr. Morrell took an additional week's vacation and visited the exposition at San Diego.

"From our home at Merced," said Mr. Morrell, "we ran into the mountains via the Wawona route to Glacier Point and Yosemite Valley. We reached an elevation of over 8000 feet without a bit of trouble with heating of the motor and without the necessity of once making any adjustments to the carburetor. We made the run from Merced Valley to Camp Curry in seven hours running time, and averaged, with all that mountain climbing, 17.3 per the gallon of gasoline.

Few automobile dealers order their cars by the $500,000 worth, yet that was what was done last Monday by Harold L. Arnold, distributer for Dodge Bros.' motor cars in Southern California.

MAJOR LEAGUE CAST-OFFS FAIL TO MAKE GOOD HERE

Coast League has Sent a Higher Grade of Ball Talent to the Majors than Have Come Down — Feds Proved to Have Much Poor Material — Stars are Grabbed by the Large Clubs.

BY HARRY A. WILLIAMS.

WE HATE to brag, but in the light of the experiences of the last two years it would seem to be in order to revise the classification of the various leagues by raising the Coast league to major rating and dropping the National, and possibly the American, down into Class AA company.

In recent seasons so many athletes have been shipped out here from the majors who have failed to make good, or who have displayed only mediocre form, that we are becoming skeptical regarding the class of the majors outside of a few of the stars they have corralled and intend to keep.

True, they have sent us some good men, but even the best of these have not found it easy sledding. It has been interesting to watch the sad awakening of some of these major league recruits who had expected to go through the Coast League without half trying, so to speak. An expression of surprise illuminates their countenances, and is followed by one of extreme pain. Then comes a period of seriousness when they realize that they are up against a fight for their very baseball lives.

Few men come here from the East and start a conflagration in the circuit. Men with good records in the majors frequently fail to duplicate them here, while youngsters going from here to the big show often show increased class. Doubtless there are contributing causes. Possibly the widely-varying kinds of climate and degrees of altitude make this a hard league to make good in.

CLIMATE.

Freedom from the intense heat found in the East, and an absence of the congealed conditions of the spring and late fall would figure to make this circuit ideal climatically from a baseball standpoint, and yet there seems to be some subtle element in the atmosphere that militates against the tenderfoot athlete. Pitchers have complained, and observation substantiates the claim to a certain extent, that they find it difficult to control their curve ball and get the usual break on it until they have played here the better part of a year.

However, these handicaps do not disguise the fact that a majority of the men recruited from the majors have failed to startle the natives, and have not shown the class expected of athletes with big league training.

In fact, it has become an axiom of Coast League baseball that a player who is not quite good enough for the majors will have a hard time getting by in this league.

ODDS FAVOR US.

A review of the troops shows that in the last few years the Coast has sent up a higher class of players than has been received in return. Last fall we graduated thirteen players in the big leagues, and all but one remained. This is a far better percentage than the majors can show on the recruits sent us.

Eastern athletes contemplating a career on the Coast who imagine that it is going to be in the nature of a joy ride should make haste to disillusionize themselves and gird their loins for a real battle.

The next year or two should see an improvement in the quality of players available for the Coast. During the baseball war the majors were compelled to take what they could get, and rather than run the risk of letting a diamond in the rough slip through the screen, loaded up with a vast amount of material, much of which was of low grade. When peace was concluded it was necessary to unload much of this by some means or manner. Some were turned loose, while others, hooked to copper-riveted contracts, were peddled in the open market, minor league clubs sometimes being paid a bonus to assume the player and his contract.

EXPLANATION.

President Powers of the Los Angeles club has a logical explanation for the comparative scarcity of good players available for the big minors. When the last shot was fired in the baseball war, and the Federal League hung the crape on the front door, it was believed that the country would be overrun with topnotchers out of a job. Sad awakening. The majors grabbed most of the Feds who were really worth while.

The discovery was soon made that the bone and sinew, or rank and file, of the Feds wasn't even good minor league material. Also, that erstwhile good men had been set back a year or two, or had their efficiency permanently impaired, by the free and easy scheme of life in the outlaw organization. Meantime, it became apparent that the Feds had developed comparatively few valuable men.

As Powers points out, there also was a falling off in development elsewhere. During the war the number of minor leagues dropped from more than fifty to twenty or less. The game is still feeling the effects of this period of nondevelopment in the present dearth of material.

ROAD NOTES AND REPORTS.

ACCORDING to a report yesterday from the Automobile Club of Southern California, the inland route to San Diego is now in better condition than it has been for two years, although there are still some rather long detours.

Pavement, with the exception of a short detour below Elsinore, is complete to a point five miles south of Temecula, a distance of 105 miles.

Work is under day at the present time from the end of the completed pavement to the San Diego county lines at the summit of Rainbow grade, necessitating a rather annoying detour, but this detour has been signed with Automobile Club temporary signs and warning marks, while a team is furnished by the county to keep this temporary road in as good repair as possible.

The Red Mountain grade is in excellent condition from end to end. A few short disagreeable stretches exist between Fallbrook and Escondido, but the road generally is in good shape and can be travelled with comfort.

To Yosemite:

Despite the fact that it is rather warm through the San Joaquin country, the Automobile Club is having hundreds of calls for the best route to the Yosemite, and its touring bureau yesterday gave the following explicit directions: The best way to the valley at this time of the year is via the State highway to Madera and from Madera by way of Raymond, Grub Gulch, Miami Lodge and Wawona.

Of this route, 186 miles is concreted State highway, while thirty-nine miles is graded but unpaved highway and the remaining 121 miles is unimproved but thoroughly passable dirt road.

The best itinerary for this trip is to leave Los Angeles at a fair hour in the morning and drive straight through to Fresno. An early start in the morning of the second day will allow one to arrive at Wawona, via Madera, Grub Gulch and Miami during the late afternoon and will permit of a visit to the Mariposa group of big trees en route.

Glacier Point affords the most panoramic view of Yosemite Valley and the surrounding country obtainable from any point to which an automobile can be driven. For the third day a reasonably early start should be made from Wawona, turning off the main Yosemite route at Chinquapin and going thirteen miles to Glacier Point. The return to Chinquapin must be made over the same route, which for the first two miles is an almost continual climb of 22 per cent.

After this first pull is over, the balance of the drive is via very easy grades and through beautiful meadow and timber country. From Chinquapin into the valley proper, a distance of thirteen miles, the road is good, being practically all down grade and plenty wide enough for cars at all points to pass.

The Santa Paula road from Los Angeles to Ventura via Saugus is under construction between Fillmore and Santa Paula, necessitating a long detour. Therefore the Automobile Club advises motorists to reach Santa Paula via the State highway from Los Angeles to its junction with the Santa Paula road four miles this side of Ventura. From this point to Santa Paula, a distance of eleven miles, there is a good graded dirt road.

No "New Models" in Mid-Season

THE Chandler Type 17 was a perfected car January 1st. It had back of it three years of refinement, three years of making good. There is no reason to change it or modify it or call it by some new name in mid-season.

Chandler Values are Permanent

The Chandler Type 17—thousands of them on the road today from coast to coast and giving the most satisfactory service—is distinctively the medium priced car of the year.

It's the car of a perfected motor, and the most beautiful body design. It is the car of greatest all around value and no marked up price. There is ample excuse for an advance in price, but it would not add to the value to increase the price.

WITH THE SPEED KINGS.

TOM ALLEY is the first of the eastern speed kings to reach Los Angeles to prepare for the Vanderbilt and Grand Prize races at Santa Monica November 16 and 18. Alley is building a new motor at the plant of the Harry A. Miller Manufacturing Company, which is to be different from any racing motor ever seen in competition in America.

For the past seven months Harry Miller has been working on the motor for Tom Alley, but the plans have been kept secret and not even Miller's closest friends were let in on the deal until Alley arrived in Los Angeles last Thursday. The motor is to be a four-cylinder sixteen-valve job, constructed of Miller metal extensively. It will have 294.2 cubic inches piston displacement, aluminum crank case, demountable cylinder heads, and develop something like 150 horse power at 3000 R.P.M.

A WONDER.

It is to be known as the Miller motor and the car which Alley is to drive at Santa Monica is to be known as the Tom Alley Special. A feature of the motor will be scarcity of exposed parts. With the exception of the two magnetos and the throttle, the entire motor will be inclosed. There are no oil lines. The oil veins are cast in the case and there are three oiling systems, pump, spray and splash.

Tom Alley will be remembered as the Duesenberg driver in the Vanderbilt and Grand Prize events at San Francisco and the 1914 Corona race. He rode as Ralph de Palma's mechanic in the Mercedes when De Palma won the last Vanderbilt held on the Santa Monica course. Alley later left De Palma to become driver of a Duesenberg and then deserted the Duesenberg to become driver of the Ogren. He recently passed up the Ogren to build his own car.

NOT SO.

It was reported throughout the East last week that Alley was married and would give up the racing game. Alley denies this and says that his new car is proof enough that he has no intention of quitting the speed sport. He explains that marriage story as a job put up by some person in the East who has been impersonating different speed kings. The same man, it is claimed, impersonated Wilbur D'Alene and claimed to be Bob Burman at Kenosha a short time before Burman was killed at Corona in April.

Raymond Dasbach, formerly Barney Oldfield's mechanic, is to drive Barney's Delage at Tacoma, and in the Pike's Peak hill climb. The car has just been overhauled and supplied with many new parts, and "Dash" is to work it in before Barney takes the wheel in the Vanderbilt and Grand Prize.

Christians, the Belgian speed king now serving with the British aviation corps, is to be seen at Santa Monica according to a letter received by "Doc." Caddy, sales manager of the Miller Carburetor Sales Corporation, yesterday. Christians has been granted an additional six months leave by the British War Office, and he is to be at Santa Monica with the Sunbeams.

The first of the new 300-inch Milacs is now under construction and will be out in a few weeks. This car is to go to Frederick Robinson and make its first appearance in competition on the Santa Monica course in the Vanderbilt and Grand Prize, so it is claimed.

Dario Resta is to be in Southern California this fall and winter, even if he does not drive in the Vanderbilt and Grand Prize. Harry Miller received a letter from the great Dario stating that he would come to Los Angeles and make his headquarters at Miller's plant, overhauling his cars here and doing some experimental work in carburetion for the Peugeot with the Miller carburetor.

Ralph de Palma has a new mount. It is claimed to be closely related to the Packard, and this car instead of the famous old Mercedes is to be De Palma's entry at Santa Monica.

Gaston Morris is still in Los Angeles, but he intends to leave in a few days for the Mexican border, where he will do some experimental work with motor cars in the service, representing American manufacturers. Gaston was a major in the Mexican army and chief aide to Gen. Obregon, and in command of the motor transportation of the army in Northern Mexico until Villa started things at Columbus, and then Gaston jumped out. He says that as long as the United States is mixing things with Mexico he is going to keep out of the military profession.

MOTOR VEHICLES MAKE BIG HIT.

In the military service, every type of motor vehicle that has made good in commercial use or for pleasure purposes, has proved successful. The motor car, motor truck and motorcycle have all played an important part in the European war. The aeroplane motor has also been highly developed for military use in actual warfare over the battlefields of Europe.

The United States government is using motorcycles extensively along the border and in Mexico. Along the border, the motor car and motor truck have eliminated the horse almost entirely.

Only last week the Los Angeles branch of the Master Carburetor Company forwarded several carburetors to El Paso, where they will be used in a series of motorcycle tests. These tests are being conducted now with various makes of motorcycles and carburetors and should the army decide to equip a motorcycle corps, big orders will go to the successful contestant for the business.

Scouting around with a "Loco-Phone."

A little instrument, constructed exactly along the lines of a physician's stethescope, which is extremely useful in locating and diagnosing minor motor noises. The Packard Twin-Six engine is being tested for noisy valves or valve-tappets. If no noises are noticeable, the Loco-phone guarantees this fact; if there is trouble the Loco-phone spots it immediately.

EXCELLENT ROADS ALL OVER STATE.

CRAFTON, July 29.—The roads of California are the finest in the world for long tours, according to Walter Inman, who rode his motorcycle to Monterey and San Francisco. Mr. Inman says that, although he covered about 1000 miles on his motorcycle, he did not find a dozen miles that were not perfect for motoring.

Mr. Inman says that the coast road is in excellent condition, being paved most of the way to Monterey. Mr. Inman spent some time at the Y.M. C.A. summer school at Asilomar.

Harvey Alverson has just returned from a motorcycle trip in which he covered 1360 miles. He made the trip from Applegate, near Auburn, to Bakersfield in just twelve hours, and from Bakersfield home in seven hours and a half, a total of 545 miles in nineteen hours and a half.

SOME RECORD.

One of the finest sales records ever hung up in the local motor car industry is that made by Bullard Barrows, in charge of the used car sales of the Lord Motor Car Company of this city. During the first twenty-three business days of this month Barrows sold and delivered just fifty-three cars.

The Wrong Idea.

TWELVE-CYLINDER MOTOR IS NOT SO COMPLICATED.

MANY people still imagine the twelve-cylinder motor to be a tremendously complicated affair, difficult and expensive to perform the simplest service work on. Nothing could be further from the truth, however, as a year of experience with the twelve-cylinder Packard motor has made plain to us.

JUST AS SIMPLE.

"To the owner of a four or six-cylinder car," said Charles R. Livingstone, head of the Earle C. Anthony, Inc., service department, "the problem of locating a 'missing' cylinder in a twelve appears a difficult problem. It is exactly as simple as locating a 'miss' in a six, however, for by simply disconnecting the ignition wires to one block of cylinder, we make a six out of the motor. Thus we test each block of six cylinders separately, and locating the faulty plug is an easy matter.

"If we find the ignition perfect when a car shows lack of power, the compression in each cylinder is something to be investigated. This we do by means of a 'compression meter,' a far more accurate method than was the old method of trying each cylinder by turning the motor over by hand. The compression meter is nothing more or less than an accurate pressure gauge. We take out a spark-plug, and screw the compression meter in its place. Then, with ignition off, we turn the motor over several times with the electric starter, and the meter shows to a pound exactly the compression registered in the cylinder. It is only a matter of ten minutes or so to test out twelve cylinders, and a 'weak' cylinder can be located quickly and accurately."

MADE EASY.

The problem of locating a noisy valve or valve-tappet in a twelve is made easy by the use of what is called a 'Loco-phone.' It is constructed exactly along the lines of a physician's stethescope, and is very useful in accurately locating and diagnosing minor motor noises.

Big League.

WEB OF AUTO AGENCIES TO EXTEND OVER STATE.

TO WEAVE a web of Inter-State agencies, extending throughout California, Oregon, Arizona and Washington is the widespread job now being tackled by the Ashton-Wright Company, Pacific Coast distributors of the Inter-State line of cars. In order to supply the wants of this big territory arrangements have been made with the Inter-State Motor Company of Muncie, Ind., for a majority of the factory output allotted to the territory west of the Mississippi River.

Within the next few weeks Inter-State branches will be doing business in Imperial, San Joaquin, Antelope and Victor valleys. And in many near-in agricultural sections to Los Angeles negotiations for representation are completed.

Imperial Valley is said to have the greatest automobile absorbitive power of almost any section in the State, and the Inter-State distributors are figuring on a big business following the cotton and corn crop harvests.

Two carloads of Inter-States just arrived and are on the floor at No. 1048 South Olive street. The last shipment includes not only the five-passenger touring car and the two-passenger roadster, but also a large stock of extra parts. The fixed policy of the Ashton-Wright Company will be to supply extra parts without delay and at reasonable cost.

In speaking of the prospects for business, R. W. Ashton of the Ashton-Wright Company expresses the greatest confidence and optimism.

"I did not enter the automobile field," he said, "until I was convinced that the Inter-State car had qualities to win friends and factory backing and capital necessary to maintain a steady output of high-class machines.

"The Inter-State has for two years made a tremendous success in the East and Middle West. The 1916 output has more than doubled that of last season, and with the millions of capital behind the business I look for not only steadily-increasing factory enlargement, but also an increasing demand for the output."

RICH MEXICANS BUY MACHINES.

Big ranch owners from Northern Mexico are coming out in greater numbers than ever before. Smith Brothers, during the period of difficulties in Mexico have made many sales of Peerless and Paige cars to wealthy Mexicans. But now this class of business is coming faster than at any previous time. During the past week three different sales have been made to recent arrivals from Northern Mexico, all big ranch owners, who judge it wise to remain in this country for an indefinite period. These Mexican automobile buyers, however, all purchase cars with a view to taking them back into their own country some time.

WITH all dignity and road authority, with all beauty and silence of operation, with all the caprices of appointment of the exclusive and expensive large cars, the Scripps-Booth has its unquestioned place in the aristocracy of motordom.

For the first time a light car has been admitted as the social and mechanical equal of the world's largest and highest priced cars.

Owners of these large cars are the ones who are especially appreciative of Scripps-Booth design as giving them their first opportunity to secure in light weight what they have always had in large cars.

Every motorist of consequence and every man based in knowledge of motor-car excellence will be interested in seeing the Scripps-Booth on the nearest salesfloor.

AUTO TOURISTS INVADE TENAYA LAKE COUNTRY.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

YOSEMITE FALLS, July 28.—The country around Tenaya Lake and Tuolumne Soda Springs has become the mecca of auto tourists since the opening of the Tioga road, and the high Sierra territory is destined for a record visitation of vacationists, according to Chief Forest Ranger F. Townsley, who returned here this aternoon from the back country. Auto travel in general has been exceedingly good this month. On July 25 sixty-nine privately-owned cars entered the park, this being the second largest total number to arrive on any day this season.

Fishing in the high Sierras is exceptionally good, particularly in the lakes around Tuolumne Soda Springs and in May Lake, near Lake Tenaya. With the opening of the Desmond lodges at Tenaya Lake and Tuolumne Soda Springs within the near future this country will be able to provide exceptionally good accommodations.

The favorite trip of auto tourists is to make the run direct into the valley, pass a few days, and then take the Big Oak Flat road to Crocker's Sierra resort, near which the Tioga road crosses. It is a twenty-two mile run from the valley to Crocker's and thirty-five miles further to Tenaya Lake. Tuolumne Soda Springs, the headquarters of the Sierra Club, lies eight miles beyond.

W. B. Lewis, superintendent of Yosemite National Park, today expressed considerable pleasure and satisfaction over the fact that the high Sierra country is proving popular with autoists. No trip to Yosemite National Park is complete without a visit to the high Sierra country, in the opinion of Lewis. Reports received at the superintendent's office today indicated that trout fishing at Merced Lake is exceptionally good.

FACTORY TESTS PROVE FRANKLIN A SPEEDSTER.

FACTORY road tests of the new series nine Franklin automobile show that the stock models will be capable of a seventy-miles-an-hour pace. This information was received locally in a letter from Ralph C. Hamlin, the local Franklin dealer who has been at the Syracuse factory to inspect the new car, the first shipment of which is expected here within two weeks.

ROAD TESTS.

The Franklin factory has been conducting a series of road trips and in every instance the best previous record by a car of the same make was substantially reduced, Mr. Hamlin says. The 300-mile run between New York and Syracuse was made in seven hours and thirty-six minutes, smashing all previous records. Between New York City and Albany, a distance of 150 miles, a new record of three hours and fifty minutes was established. This lowered the mark of four hours and ten minutes previously held by a Mercer racy-type.

The second leg of the run from Albany to Syracuse, 150 miles, was covered in three hours and forty-six minutes. This was done in spite of the fact the car had to pass through a large number of towns, some of them like Amsterdam, Johnsville and Utica where stringent speed laws are enfored. The average speed for the entire 300 miles was 39.4 miles per hour. The best time made by a series eight Franklin over the route averaged 34.8 miles per hour.

FAST TIME.

The series nine road test also extended from Syrause to Boston, a distance of 350 miles in eleven hours and eighteen minutes. A run from Boston to New York via Springfield, Hartford and New Haven, 262 miles, was made in eight and a half hours. All of these runs were stages in a test of 1000 miles in three consecutive days, which the series nine covered without trouble of any kind developing.

NEW AUTOMOBILE FIRM COMES INTO EXISTENCE.

ANOTHER automobile concern came into existence this week when the Marion-Handley Sales Company opened its doors for business at 1053-55 South Olive street. As the name indicates, this company is supervising distributor of the well known Marion-Handley line in Southern California and Arizona.

The mainspring of the new company is B. F. Jacobs, western sales manager of the Mutual Motors Company, manufacturers of the Marion-Handley. Mr. Jacobs is well known in the automobile world; particularly in Los Angeles, where he has been engaged in the distribution of motor cars for many years past.

The Marion-Handley line for 1917 offers two models, each of which is made in two styles. One model is known as the Six-forty, and the other Six-sixty. Both are six-cylinder constructions and come in seven-passenger touring and four-passenger roadster types.

Light weight, sturdy construction and high power developing possibilities characterize both of these models, and a number of exclusive features mark the Marion-Handley line as ultra modern in their respective selling classifications.

When seen at his headquarters this week, Mr. Jacobs said: "The Marion-Handley is the well developed outgrowth of the famous Marion line; and in the time it has been on the market, has achieved an almost unprecedented success. Mr. J. I. Handley seems to have correctly gauged the demands of the motor-car buying public and satisfied them in this production; for we hear commendation after commendation about the Marion-Handley from all quarters of the country. This is particularly pleasing to us at this time when good car construstions are in the majority, and poor ones conspicuous by their absence.

TO PLAY GOLF MATCHES TODAY.

GRIFFITH PARK TO HODD A MONSTER TOURNEY.

Second Rounds are to be Played at the Los Angeles Country Club and Third Round on the Municipal Links—Meeting of Griffith Park Golf Club on Thursday.

BY ALMA WHITAKER.

Both of the large golf tournaments, at the Los Angeles Country Club, and at Griffith Park, have allowed players to complete match play rounds today—second round matches at the country club, and third round matches at Griffith Park.

The resignation of Robert Mitchell, the president of the Griffith Park Golf Club, and of E. B. Kidson, the secretary-treasurer, both of whom are leaving the city permanently, necessitatted a director's meeting on Thursday. The constitution of the club was revised at this meeting and the board of directors increased from five to seven.

Here are the present officers of the club: President, A. E. Resor; vice-president, W. J. Alexander; secretary-treasurer, J. S. Aborn; directors, Hugh Blue, Raymond Sullivan and Carl Leiberg. J. S. Aborn remains chairman of the Greens committee, which includes Marvin Lewis, John G. Cushing, W. J. Alexander, and Earl B. Davidson.

Laurence Cowing made a dazzling score at the Los Angeles Country Club yesterday, winning the class A cup by 5 up on par, handicap 1. M. P. Snyder won the class B cup with 12 down 12 even.

In forty-two of the States of the Union all or the major portion of the motor-vehicle revenue must be expended for the construction, improvement, or maintenance of the public roads, or for the maintenance of the State highway department.

WHEN YOU TRAVEL THIS FAST YOU'RE SURE GOING.

SINCE speed fiends have torn the law to shreds every motor cop from Bakersfield to San Francisco is on the job night and day because of the many attempts to break the record between Los Angeles and the City by the Golden Gate.

Just to be a "good fellow," H. O. Harrison, the Hudson distributor for Northern California, left San Francisco on the 6 o'clock ferry last Wednesday morning and at 6:30 that evening checked in at the salesroom of Harold L. Arnold, the Southern California distributor for Hudson motor cars. Mr. Harrison made the trip in his Hudson super-six cabriolet and brought with him Jack French, western representative of Dodge Bros. of Detroit.

Of course, they didn't break any speed limits, but "H. O." says it was rather difficult to keep his Hudson super-six within the law and he could only make the time that he did by maintaining an absolutely continuous pace without a single stop from Oakland to this city.

"In San Francisco and, I presume, here," said Mr. Harrison, "motorists lay great stress on the ability of their motor cars to roll along hour after hour, maintaining a uniform speed, and yet have a surplus of power to use should occasion occur. Those are the attributes of an automobile that receive the approval of every motorist. That is where the Hudson super-six shines. It has, in addition to dependability, a speed and getaway that is very satisfactory to every owner of a motor car.

"Speaking of getaway," continued Mr. Harrison, "my Hudson cabriolet with its top up can attain a speed of fifty miles an hour in twenty seconds. That gives the super-six a decided advantage in the crowded traffic of city streets, besides adding an element of safety in avoiding accidents in contingencies that are always a part of city driving."

Mr. Harrison made the return trip Friday within fifteen minutes' running time of his southward trip on Wednesday.

Thus we test each block of six cylinders separately, and locating the faulty plug is an easy matter.

"If we find the ignition perfect when a car shows lack of power, the compression in each cylinder is something to be investigated. This we do by means of a 'compression meter,' a far more accurate method than was the old method of trying each cylinder by turning the motor over by hand. The compression meter is nothing more or less than an accurate pressure gauge. We take out a spark-plug and screw the compression meter in its place. Then, with ignition off, we turn the motor over several times with the electric starter, and the meter shows to a pound exactly the compression registered in the cylinder. It is only a matter of ten minutes or so to test out twelve cylinders, and a 'weak' cylinder can be located quickly and accurately."

MADE EASY.

The problem of locating a noisy valve or valve-tappet in a twelve is made easy by the use of what is called a 'Loco-phone.' It is constructed exactly along the lines of a physician's stethescope, and is very useful in accurately locating and diagnosing minor motor noises.

WEB OF AUTO AGENCIES TO EXTEND OVER STATE.

TO WEAVE a web of Inter-State agencies, extending throughout California, Oregon, Arizona and Washington is the widespread job now being tackled by the Ashton-Wright Company, Pacific Coast distributors of the Inter-State line of cars. In order to supply the wants of this big territory arrangements have been made with the Inter-State Motor Company of Muncie, Ind., for a majority of the factory output allotted to the territory west of the Mississippi River.

Within the next few weeks Inter-State branches will be doing business in Imperial, San Joaquin, Antelope and Victor valleys. And in many near-in agricultural sections to Los Angeles negotiations for representation are completed.

Imperial Valley is said to have the greatest automobile absorbitive power of almost any section in the State, and the Inter-State distributors are figuring on a big business following the cotton and corn crop harvests.

Two carloads of Inter-States have arrived and are on the floor at the 1048 South Olive street. The last shipment includes not only the five-passenger touring car and the two-passenger roadster, but also a large stock of extra parts. The fixed policy of the Ashton-Wright Company will be to supply extra parts without delay and at reasonable cost.

In speaking of the prospects for business, R. W. Ashton of the Ashton-Wright Company expresses the greatest confidence and optimism.

"I did not enter the automobile field," he said, "until I was convinced that the Inter-State car had qualities to win friends and factory backing and capital necessary to maintain a steady output of high-class machines.

"The Inter-State has for two years made a tremendous success in the East and Middle West. The 1916 output has more than doubled that of last season, and with the millions of capital behind the business I look for not only steadily-increasing factory enlargement, but also an increasing demand for the output."

RICH MEXICANS BUY MACHINES.

Big ranch owners from Northern Mexico are coming out in greater numbers than ever before. Smith Brothers, during the period of difficulties in Mexico have made many sales of Peerless and Paige cars to wealthy Mexicans. But now this class of business is coming faster than at any previous time. During the past week three different sales have been made to recent arrivals from Northern Mexico, all big ranch owners, who judge it wise to remain in this country for an indefinite period. These Mexican automobile buyers, however, all purchase cars with a view to taking them back into their own country some time.

To The Manor Born

WITH all dignity and road authority, with all beauty and silence of operation, with all the caprices of appointment of the exclusive and expensive large cars, the Scripps-Booth has its unquestioned place in the aristocracy of motordom.

For the first time a light car has been admitted as the social and mechanical equal of the world's largest and highest priced cars.

Owners of these large cars are the ones who are especially appreciative of Scripps-Booth design as giving them their first opportunity to secure in light weight what they have always had in large cars.

Every motorist of consequence and every man based in knowledge of motor-car excellence will be interested in seeing the Scripps-Booth on the nearest salesfloor.

UTO TOURISTS INVADE TENAYA LAKE COUNTRY.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

OSEMITE FALLS, July 28.—The country around Tenaya Lake and Tuolumne Soda has become the mecca of tourists since the opening of Tioga road, and the high Sierra try is destined for a record vis of vacationists, according to Forest Ranger F. Townsley, returned here this aternoon the back country. Auto travel eral has been exceedingly good month. On July 25 sixty-nine ly-owned cars entered the , this being the second largest number to arrive on any day season.

Fishing in the high Sierras is ex ally good, particularly in the around Tuolumne Soda Springs May Lake, near Lake Tenaya. the opening of the Desmond at Tenaya Lake and Tuo Soda Springs within the near future this country will be able to provide exceptionally good accommodations.

The favorite trip of auto tourists is to make the run direct into the valley, pass a few days, and then take the Big Oak Flat road to Crocker's Sierra resort, near which the Tioga road crosses. It is a twenty-two mile run from the valley to Crocker's and thirty-five miles further to Tenaya Lake. Tuolumne Soda Springs, the headquarters of the Sierra Club, lies eight miles beyond.

W. B. Lewis, superintendent of Yosemite National Park, today expressed considerable pleasure and satisfaction over the fact that the high Sierra country is proving popular with autoists. No trip to Yosemite National Park is complete without a visit to the high Sierra country, in the opinion of Lewis. Reports received at the superintendent's office today indicated that trout fishing at Merced Lake is exceptionally good.

ACTORY TESTS PROVE FRANKLIN A SPEEDSTER.

ACTORY road tests of the new series nine Franklin automobile show that the stock models will capable of a seventy-miles-an- pace. This information was ed locally in a letter from C. Hamlin, the local Franklin r who has been at the Syra factory to inspect the new car, first shipment of which is ex d here within two weeks.

ROAD TESTS.

e Franklin factory has been ucting a series of road trips and y instance the best previous d by a car of the same make ubstantially reduced, Mr. Ham says. The 300-mile run between York and Syracuse was made in hours and thirty-six minutes, ing all previous records. Be New York City and Albany, a e of 150 miles, a new record ree hours and fifty minutes was blished. This lowered the mark r hours and ten minutes previously held by a Mercer racytype.

The second leg of the run from Albany to Syracuse, 150 miles, was covered in three hours and forty-six minutes. This was done in spite of the fact the car had to pass through a large number of towns, some of them like Amsterdam, Johnsville and Utica where stringent speed laws are enfored. The average speed for the entire 300 miles was 39.4 miles per hour. The best time made by a series eight Franklin over the route averaged 34.8 miles per hour.

FAST TIME.

The series nine road test also extended from Syrause to Boston, a distance of 350 miles in eleven hours and eighteen minutes. A run from Boston to New York via Springfield, Hartford and New Haven, 268 miles, was made in eight and a half hours. All of these runs were stages in a test of 1000 miles in three consecutive days, which the series nine covered without trouble of any kind developing.

The Marion-Handley line for offers two models, each of is made in two styles. One is known as the Six-forty, the other Six-sixty. Both are six-cylinder constructions and come in seven-passenger touring and four-passenger roadster types.

Light weight, sturdy construction and high power developing possiblities characterize both of these models, and a number of exclusive features mark the Marion-Handley line as ultra modern in their respective selling classifications.

When seen at his headquarters this week, Mr. Jacobs said: "The Marion-Handley is the well developed outgrowth of the famous Marion line; and in the time it has been on the market, has achieved an almost unprecedented success. Mr. J. I. Handley seems to have correctly gauged the demands of the motor-car buying public and satisfied them in this production; for we hear commendation after commendation about the Marion-Handley from all quarters of the country. This is particularly pleasing to us at this time when good car constructions are in the majority, and poor ones conspicuous by their absence.

ond Rounds are to be Played the Los Angeles Country Club Third Round on the Muni pal Links—Meeting of Griffith Park Golf Club on Thursday.

BY ALMA WHITAKER.

th of the large golf tourna at the Los Angeles Country , and at Griffith Park, have al d players to complete match play today—second round matches e country club, and third round ches at Griffith Park.

The resignation of Robert Mitchell, president of the Griffith Park Golf Club, and of E. B. Kidson, the secretary-treasurer, both of whom are leaving the city permanently, necessitatted a director's meeting on Thursday. The constitution of the club was revised at this meeting and the board of directors increased from five to seven.

Here are the present officers of the club: President, A. E. Resor; vice-president, W. J. Alexander; secretary-treasurer, J. S. Aborn; directors, Hugh Blue, Raymond Sullivan and Carl Leiberg. J. S. Aborn remains chairman of the Greens committee, which includes Marvin Lewis, John G. Cushing, W. J. Alexander, and Earl B. Davidson.

Laurence Cowing made a dazzling score at the Los Angeles Country Club yesterday, winning the class A cup by 5 up on par, handicap 1. M. P. Snyder won the class B cup with 12 down 12 even.

WHEN YOU TRAVEL THIS FAST YOU'RE SURE GOING.

SINCE speed fiends have torn the law to shreds every motor cop from Bakersfield to San Francisco is on the job night and day because of the many attempts to break the record between Los geles and the City by the Golden Gate.

Just to be a "good fellow," H. O. Harrison, the Hudson distributor for Northern California, left San Francisco on the 6 o'clock last Wednesday morning and at 6:30 that evening checked in the salesroom of Harold L. Arnold, the Southern California distributor for Hudson motor cars. Mr. Harrison made the trip in Hudson super-six cabriolet and brought with him Jack French, representative of Dodge Bros. of Detroit.

Of course, they didn't break any speed limits, but "H. O." says was rather difficult to keep his Hudson super-six within the law he could only make the time that he did by maintaining an ly continuous pace without a single stop from Oakland to city.

"In San Francisco and, I presume, here," said Mr. Harrison, torists lay great stress on the ability of their motor cars to roll hour after hour, maintaining a uniform speed, and yet have surplus of power to use should occasion occur. Those are the ntials of an automobile that receive the approval of every motorist. That is where the Hudson super-six shines. It has, in addition dependability, a speed and getaway that is very satisfactory every owner of a motor car.

"Speaking of getaway," continued Mr. Harrison, "my Hudson with its top up can attain a speed of fifty miles an hour twenty seconds. That gives the super-six a decided advantage the crowded traffic of city streets, besides adding an element of ty in avoiding accidents in contingencies that are always a part of city driving."

Mr. Harrison made the return trip Friday within fifteen minutes running time of his southward trip on Wednesday.

Angeles Win.

Wolter fouled out, and Koerner walked. Hannah nipped Mag off third in an attempted double steal.

Wolter walked in the sixth and was nipped off first by Piercy. Rath's wide throw spared Koerner at first, Galloway scoring him with a double to right. The smash barely hit the line, and caused a lot of argument. Bayless came clear in from right field to tell Billy Phyle that he was blind in one eye and could't see out of the other. Dick offered to produce some of the soil to prove his assertion that the ball hit foul. It seems that the soil on foul territory differs from that on the playing field. It does not contain as many spike marks. One of the bat boys later gave testimony to the effect that there was lime on the surface of the ball. From this it was deduced that the ball hit the line, as there are no mortar boxes out in right field. The concensus of opinion seemed to be that the swat was orthodox. After all those concerned had adjourned to their respective positions to reconvene at the call of the umpire, Bassler walked. McLarry singled, counting Galloway. Butler made a sacrince, the full value of which was lost, Standridge grounding to Orr.

OPENS FIFTH.

Ryan's double opened the fifth. Orr put him on third with a sacrifice. Buddy was run down trying to score on Rath's drive to Butler. McLarry retired Downey.

Standridge began giving the Bees moderate outdoor exercise in the shape of walking in the sixth with one gone. He passed Piercy and, without changing hands, fanned Quinlan. The ball had such a hop on it that Bobby insisted on having it examined. It was found to be as smooth and free from guile as a hard-boiled egg. Pete passed Bayless and Brief in rapid succession, filling the bases. He met the crisis by fanning Ryan, who had doubled but an inning before.

When Pete passed Orr and Rath, the first two up in the seventh, Chance decided that enough is too much, and gave him the gaff. Oscar, fresh from the bull pen struck out Downey. Getting still fresher he soaked Hannah, filling the bases some more. Shinn batted for Piercy. On the next pitch Blankenship let out an anguished yell concerning Oscar's feet. Many feared that one of Oscar's feet might have dropped off or something. Phyle walked out and examined them. He reported both feet still hanging to Oscar's ankles and apparently in good condition.

BROOKLYN (N. Y.) July 29.—Approximately 20,000 Brooklyn fans welcomed Manager Christy Mathewson and his Cincinnati team to Ebbets Field today and saw the Reds break even with the Superbas, the visitors winning the first game 6 to 1 and losing the second 3 to 2. Schneider in the opening game held the National League leaders to three hits, two of which were bunched in the second inning for their lone run. Marquard was batted out of the box in five innings.

In the second game Pfeffer held the Reds for four scattered hits in six innings. Then he winged Groh, Griffith followed with a double and Neale singled, two runs counting. Boston hit Meadows hard in the four innings he was on the mound in the second game, getting nine hits, including five doubles. Wilhoit hit for three doubles in four times up in the second game. In the first game Hornsby batted for 1000, getting three singles and a double in four times up.

LUXURIES ARE NOW NECESSITIES.

"The political economist who stated that the luxuries of yesterday are the necessities of today certainly spoke truly when we consider the motor-car industry," declares R. Crawford, president and general manager, Sun Motor Car Company, Elkhart, Ind.

"Not only has the automobile itself ceased to be a luxury, but a great many features of motor-car equipment and construction which were formerly looked upon as unnecessary now have a great bearing on sales. It is hard to realize that up until 1911 most manufacturers listed windshields and tops as extra equipment; demountable rims were a useless expense, and starting systems were for the wealthy elect. At the present time, however, the prospective buyer does not think of buying a car without such equipment and the manufacturer who is in the line of evolution will offer even more."

BASEBALL NOTES.

The deal by which Oscar Horstman is to go to the St. Louis Cardinals next season has been closed. It was known that Horstman would go to that club in case he showed the necessary class. Billy Herr turned in a favorable report when scouting on the Coast several weeks ago, and the first step in the deal was sending Charley Hall to the Angels. In addition to Hall, the Angels are to receive another player and a cash consideration. Horstman has earned this promotion by his conscientious work and brilliant showing. He will report to the Cards next spring.

Charley Hall is eager to begin work, and would like to pitch today, but Chance figures that a day or two more in which to get loosened up after his trip will benefit him, and does not plan to start him until next week.

Ted Easterly, reported to have accepted terms with Oakland, says that he has not done so, and yesterday worked out with the Bees. Easterly, who has been playing independent ball in Arizona, says there is a possibility that he may sign with Salt Lake instead of Oakland. Del Howard is hot after the player, having lost Rowdy.

The Coast League has never seen a better game around third base than that being played by Jim Galloway. Jim has the best arm of any infielder in the Coast League, barring possibly Risberg.

Not only is McLarry getting his blows more frequently, but he is landing when they count for runs. Polly is rapidly getting back into his American Association form.

KILBANE AND CHANEY FAIL TO SIGN UP.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

BALTIMORE (Md.) July 29.—Representatives of Johnny Kilbane of Cleveland, world's champion featherweight boxer, and George Chaney of Baltimore, failed in an attempt here today to match the pugilists for a bout, it was proposed to stage at Cedar Point. Kilbane demanded $10,000 flat and Chaney wanted $6000 or to be given 30 per cent. of the gate receipts. The promoter declined to meet these terms.

MRS. W. I. NORTHUP WINS SINGLES TITLE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

PORTLAND (Or.) July 29.—Mrs. W. I. Northup of Portland won the women's singles championship in the Oregon State tournament here today, by defeating Miss Stella Fording, also of Partland, 8-6, 6-3. Clyde Curley of San Francisco won the men's singles championship, defeating Hugh Kelleher of Seattle, 7-5, 6-4, 6-4.

The Medina Automobile Club has been organized after three preliminary meetings of leading motorists of Medina county, Ohio.

HIGHWAY COMMISSION ORDERS SIGN POSTS DOWN.

THE State Highway Commission has decided to enforce in its strictest sense the recently-enacted State law regulating the placing of advertising signs along the right of way of all California highways. This means that with the general cleaning up the familiar guide posts erected by the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Company will be torn down.

Guide posts have been erected by the Goodrich company in practically every State in the Union and thousands of them have been placed on the various roads in California.

It seems that the matter of the life or death of these signs had been left to the discretion of the State Highway Commission. So the Goodrich company put in a request for a permit allowing the sign posts to remain on the State highways. This request was turned down by the commission, but three months of grace were allowed the Goodrich company.

The outcome is still in the air.

SOX SET BACK.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

DETROIT, July 29.—Boston suffered something of a setback in the pennant fight today, when Detroit took both games of a doubleheader, 10 to 8 and 7 to 3. The first game was a free-hitting contest in which Ruth, Wyckoff, and Coveleskie all were knocked out. Leonard suffered the same fate in the second game.

Both teams fielded well. Vean Gregg, called from Buffalo, joined the Red Sox today and pitched par of both games.

FOREST HOME ROAD EXCELLENT.

The upper portion of the Mill Creek Canyon road, from the entrance of the canyon proper to Forest Home, is getting into excellent condition, due to the heavy motor travel, and the last mile before the power intake, which was very soft, is packing in good shape. The volume of travel into Mill Creek continues to break all former records, and the opening of the Snider Creek cutoff, which will furnish a short route into Big Bear Valley, will increase this travel.

The road from Forest Home is in good condition as far as the falls, writes Manager Frank Culver, Jr., of Forest Home. Visitors now can make this delightful two-mile trip by machine, instead of tramping, as was necessary last season.

The motor car has brought a new era to mountain travel, declares Mr. Culver. Every year the mountains are growing in popularity as vacation places, chiefly because of the increase in the number of motor cars. The guest list at Forest Home has been filled to capacity practically all season.

Kansas county clerks find that motor-car owners are not as punctilious about turning in their cars for taxation as they are about securing licenses. Many clerks reporting say that the number listed for taxes is about one-third short of the number of licenses in the counties. It is possible that some steps may be taken to get the missing cars on the books.

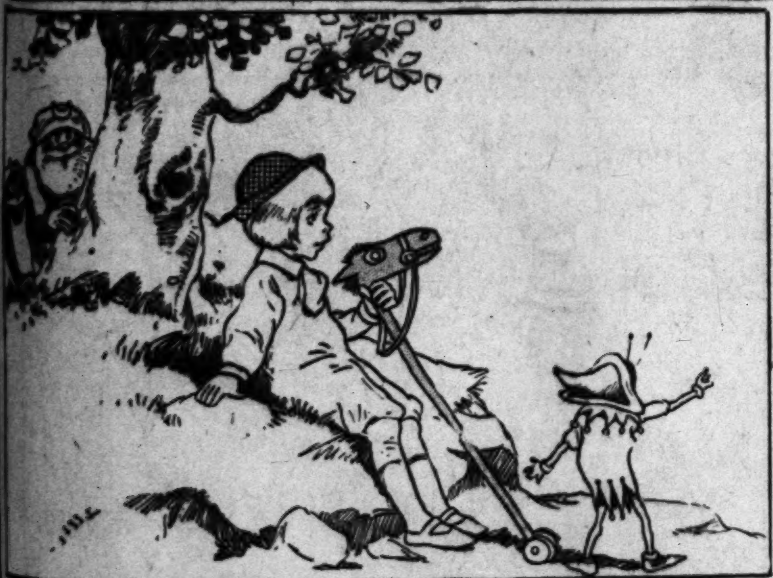
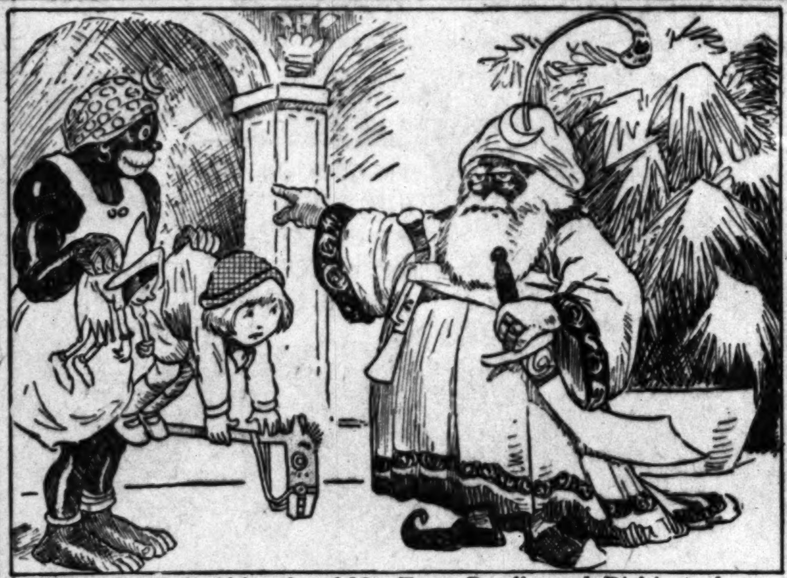
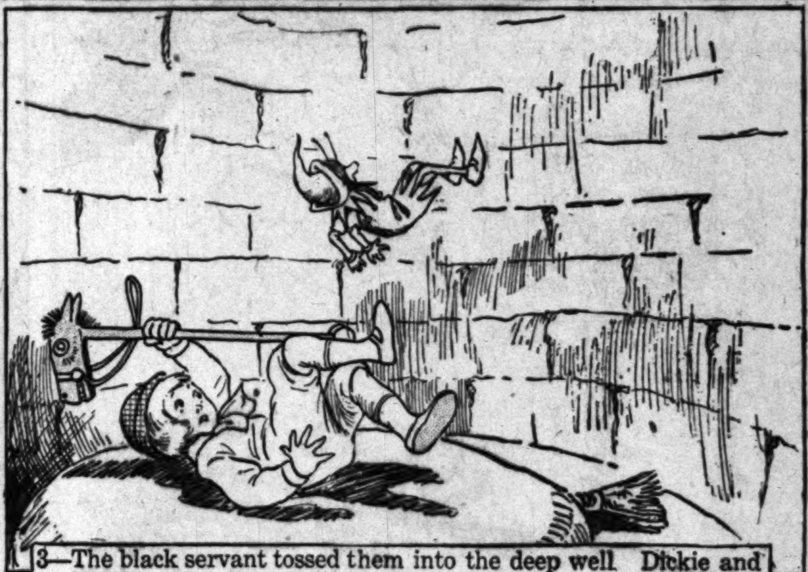
MR. TWEE DEEDLE.



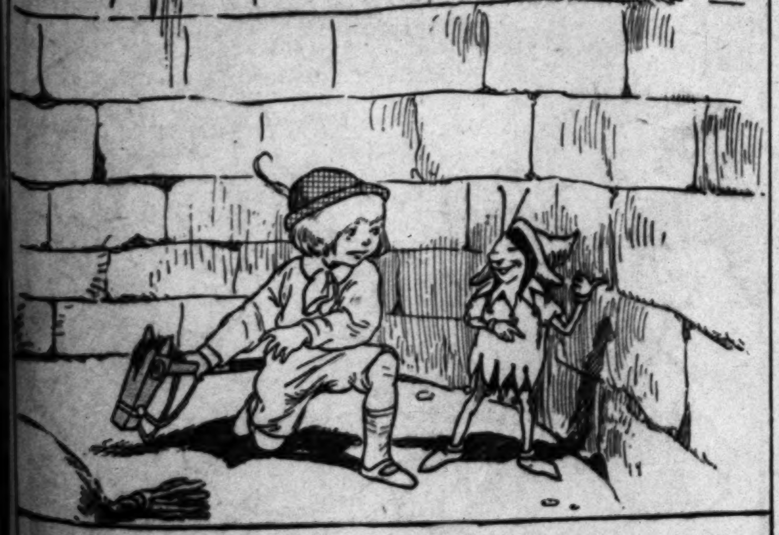
1—Dickie and Mr. Twee Deedle had been playing all day with the hobby horse and had stopped to rest away up on a hill, where they could look across the country for miles. Before they could mount the wonderful hobby horse and ride away they were captured by a fat old man named Bali Abi and his black servant.



2—The fat Bali Abi ordered Mr. Twee Deedle and Dickie to be thrown into a well until he could determine what to do with them. The black servant carried our two friends into a large hall, in the centre of which was a deep well. "Toss them in!" cried Bali Abi in a loud voice.



3—The black servant tossed them into the deep well. Dickie and Mr. Twee Deedle were surprised to find no water in the well. Instead they alighted upon a soft cushion, which had been placed in the well so that no one would be hurt when tossed in. "That was fun!" said Dickie. "I wish they would haul us up and toss us down again; I had a fine bounce!"



4—"I believe that we can easily get out!" cried Mr. Twee Deedle. "Then perhaps we will be discovered and tossed back again!" "I'll tell you how we will manage it," said Dickie. "We will make ourselves small and crawl through a chink in the wall."

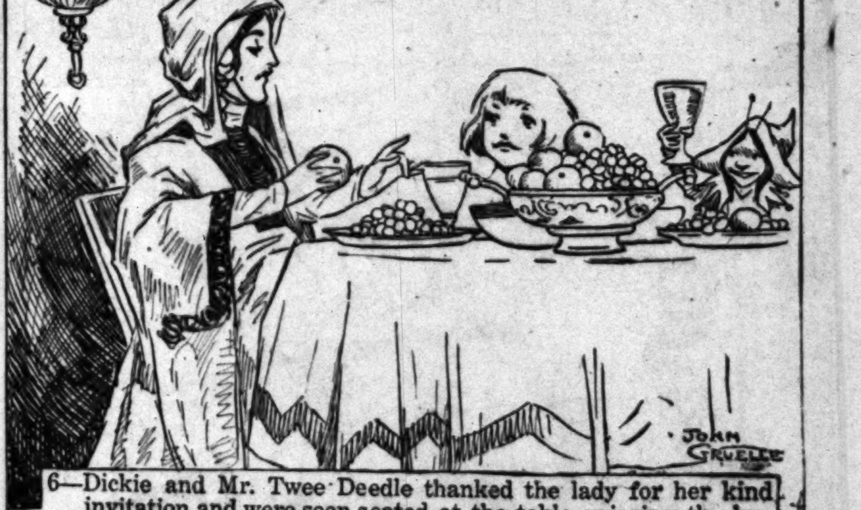
5—When our friends had crawled through the chink in the wall they came into a room where a lady was sitting, eating fruit. "You are just in time," she said, not seeming to be in the least surprised at their appearance; "I will put the fruit on the table and we will have a banquet."



JOHN GRUELLE

6—Dickie and Mr. Twee Deedle thanked the lady for her kind invitation and were soon seated at the table enjoying the luscious fruit. "I have been a prisoner in this room for two months," said the lady, "and I can find no door or window through which I can leave, so you may know how glad I am to see you." "We will see if we can help you," Mr. Twee Deedle told her. "We, too, are trying to escape."

COMMON SENSE in the HOME
EDITED by MARION HARLAND

SOME SUBSTANTIAL HOT WEATHER DISHES.

A WEEK ago I spoke of the desirability of studying to give one's family a maximum of nourishment with a minimum of heat when planning the bills of fare. I also referred to the many pleasing dishes which can be prepared containing a small quantity of meat or none at all, and made mention of egg, vegetables, and fish dishes and of salads.

In the effort to encourage simple, wholesome, and economical living I am giving recipes for certain dishes that are not difficult to make ready and that are likely to appeal to the palate as well as to the digestion in hot weather. The suggestions undoubtedly will be modified and altered by individual housekeepers, and I trust that any improvements they may achieve will be reported to me that we may put them here in the Corner for the benefit of others.

CREAM SOUPS.

There are many of these, and they may all practically be made in much the same way. The foundation of them is cooked vegetables of some sort—potatoes, spinach, cauliflower, cabbage, turnips, carrots, peas—any vegetable—which can either be cooked for the express purpose of making soup or is left over from a dish that has been prepared for the family.

To two cups of the cooked vegetable should be allowed a quart of milk. The vegetables are rubbed through a collander, and if they are not soft enough to be submitted to this process they should be simmered gently until they reach the desired stage. Two tablespoons of butter and two of flour are cooked together in a saucepan until they bubble, the milk poured upon them, and stirred until all are smoothly blended and thick. The heated vegetable pulp is then beaten into this, all made hot together, seasoned to taste, and served.

Remainders of onions, celery, corn, and young beets are good to utilize in this way. The addition of a pinch of baking soda to the milk will prevent curdling and the soup should not be allowed to stand after the vegetable and milk have been mixed.

When a meal has begun with such a soup as this the course that follows may be light.

EGGS WITH RICE.

Put a well washed cup of rice over the fire in two quarts of water that is at a galloping boil. Cook at this boil until one of the grains is soft when pinched between the fingers. Fifteen to twenty minutes should suffice and the rice should not be stirred during the process, though the vessel may be shaken occasionally so that the rice will not stick to the bottom. When done the water should be turned off of the rice and the vegetable put in a colander to dry. While still hot a little butter should be mixed through it with a fork, as well as butter and salt to taste, and a tablespoon of minced parsley. The rice is then turned into a pudding dish, a couple of tablespoons of grated cheese strewed over the top, and on this broken as many eggs as will lie side by side without crowding one another. Salt and pepper are sprinkled over these and a tablespoon of butter cut up into small bits, the dish is set in the oven and left there until the eggs are set. It is served at once in the dish in which the cooking was done.

EGGS WITH CHEESE.

Cook together two tablespoons of butter and two of flour until they bubble, pour upon them two cups of milk and stir until the sauce is smooth and thick; add to this four tablespoons of grated cheese. Pour into a shallow pudding dish; break on the sauce as many eggs as will go there easily; set the dish in the oven after sprinkling the eggs with salt and pepper, and bake until the eggs are firm. Serve at once. Eight minutes in a hot oven should be enough.

STUFFED PEPPERS.

Cut green peppers in half lengthwise or cut off the stem end; remove the seeds with a spoon or fork, taking care not to touch them with the fingers. Lay the peppers in cold water for a quarter of an hour, drain and dry them. Make a forcemeat of half a cup of bread crumbs and half a cup of minced meat of any kind. Ham, tongue, or chicken is especially good, but other kinds will answer. Season well with a little onion juice, minced herbs, parsley, salt, and pepper, and soften with melted butter or a little good gravy. Fill the peppers with this mixture, lay them side by side in a baking pan, pour a cup of gravy or soup stock about them, set the pan in the oven and bake covered for fifteen minutes. Uncover and brown. Serve on a hot dish. Instead of the bread crumbs boiled rice may be mixed with the meat.

STUFFED TOMATOES.

The filling for these may be prepared in the same way as for stuffed peppers. The tomatoes must not be peeled, but should have a slice cut off the top and the pulpy inside scooped out, with care not to break the outside covering of the tomato. Tomatoes of uniform size should be selected. A little salt should be sprinkled on the inside of the tomatoes before putting in the filling. They may be baked precisely as directed for stuffed peppers. The inside of the tomatoes may either be mixed with the stuffing to soften it, in place of gravy, or may be put aside to use as a foundation for sauce or soup, or may be added to a soup already made.

PEPPERS STUFFED WITH RICE.

Prepare the peppers as for stuffing and have ready two cups of boiled rice. Make a cup of tomato sauce by cooking together a tablespoon each of butter and flour and pouring upon it a large cup of tomato liquor, either strained from stewed or from canned tomatoes, seasoning this with half a teaspoon of onion juice, the same of white sugar, and pepper and salt to taste. Pour the sauce over the rice and mix them well together; fill the peppers with the mixture, strew grated cheese over the top, let them stand covered in a bake dish for five minutes, uncover, and leave in the oven for three minutes longer and send to the table.

EGGS WITH TOMATOES.

Stew tomatoes down until thick, taking care that there are no hard lumps in them, and season them well with onion juice, salt, and pepper. If tart, white sugar may be added in the proportion of half a teaspoon of this to each cup of the tomato. Make a layer of the tomato in the bottom of a platter and place on them eggs, either poached or fried; sprinkle a little salt and pepper over them and serve.

CABBAGE AND CHEESE.

Boil cabbage in two waters, drain and chop it, season well with salt and pepper, and place a layer of it in a buttered pudding dish. Have ready a white sauce made as before directed by cooking together a tablespoon each of butter and flour and stirring into this a cup of milk until the sauce is thick, season with salt and pepper, pour part of it upon the cabbage, strew over it a heaping tablespoon of grated cheese. Put in another layer of cabbage, white sauce, and cheese, and continue this until the dish is full, topping the last layer of cheese with a few bread crumbs and bits of butter. Bake covered for about half an hour, uncover, and brown, and send to the table in the dish in which it was cooked.

SWEET POTATOES SCALLOPED WITH BACON.

Parboil and peel sweet potatoes, fry six slices of bacon crisp and mince fine. Put the sliced sweet potatoes into a buttered bake dish, sprinkling each layer of the potatoes with the chopped bacon. On top of all strew bread crumbs and bits of butter, pour in a cup of good gravy or soup stock, and bake for forty minutes.

STUFFED EGGPLANT.

Lay an eggplant of medium size in boiling water and simmer for fifteen minutes, drain and put aside to cool. When cold cut in half lengthwise, scoop out the insides, and mix with an equal quantity of minced meat of some sort, a tablespoon of bread crumbs, a large tablespoon of melted butter and onion juice, salt and pepper to taste. When all are well blended fill the halves of the eggplant with the mixture, lay side by side in a baking pan with the skin side underneath, sprinkle crumbs and bits of butter over the forcemeat, pour about the eggplant enough stock to come a quarter of the way up the sides of the vegetable, and bake for three-quarters of an hour. Baste often. Take out the eggplant, lay it on a hot dish, thicken the gravy in the pan with a little browned flour, season well, and pour over the eggplant. This will do instead of a meat-dish.

VEGETABLE SALAD.

Have a fourth of a cup each of diced cold boiled potatoes, beets, turnips, and crisp celery, a half cup each of cooked peas and of string beans, the latter cut into half inch lengths. Mix well together, heap on lettuce leaves, and pour over them a French dressing or a good boiled dressing.

STUFFED TOMATO SALAD.

Prepare tomatoes of uniform size as for baking, but lay them on the ice until cold. Fill them either with string beans cut into quarter inch lengths or with celery cut in the same way, or with boiled green peas, or with a mixture of two-thirds diced green pepper to one-third of water cress divided into small bits, or with diced cucumber. In any case the vegetables must be fresh and thoroughly chilled. Lay each tomato on a leaf of lettuce, heap on it a teaspoon of mayonnaise dressing, and serve. This, if accompanied by good bread or buttered toast and cream cheese, makes a satisfactory and wholesome supper, especially if followed by a dish of fresh fruit.

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING HAND,

Learning Lip Reading.

"IN a recent number the Helping Hand a woman who was deaf asked for information as to where she could learn lip reading. If she gains the information so that she can learn it at home, will she kindly pass it on? I can hear people if they speak loud enough, but depend largely upon reading from the lips, as I have picked it up. I would like to become more perfect in lip reading if I could, so I ask for this help. MRS. P. F. H."

Lip reading has received a good deal of attention in these columns of late, but there is always room for more help and advice along this line. Can any one give it to this correspondent?

Hints and Helps.

"If A. M. H., whose plea is in the Corner and who finds life sad on account of deafness, living in my city I can help her or others with seeds of plants, cuttings, and old magazines, also with delightful Bible lessons. There is a studio here where one may learn lip reading. To the woman who asked directions for furnishing a small house I would say: Try to have the color scheme harmonize throughout the house, in floor coverings, window and door draperies, which will give an air of spaciousness to the small rooms, providing there are not too many pictures and too much bric-a-brac on the walls or mantel. As it is near canning time, I would like to caution against loosely lined covers of glass cans—covers of zinc with porcelain linings—as fruit spoils in such cans when the linings are loose. L. B."

The address of A. M. H. and the other addresses asked have been sent to this helpful Cornerite. I am sure that she will be of service to many, and I foresee applications for her name and address. I trust each one may be accompanied by a stamped and self-addressed envelope.

Glasses Are Broken.

"May there not be a pair of lenses somewhere in the Corner, discarded, that I might be able to secure? I am 56 years of age and ill. My glasses are broken.
"AN OLD CORNERITE."

I hope some one may be able to fulfill the wish of this Cornerite.

An Exchange of Plants.

"I would suggest that you print address at the beginning of this department, also rules, that stamps and clippings must be inclosed and name and adress given. By so doing you would save yourself much worry, the department space, your correspondents time and also postage. I want much to get the following plants: Maidenhair fern, asparagus sprengeri, climbing begonia, Whitmani comparia fern, and fancy leaved geraniums. In return for any and all I would send a clump of hardy yellow chrysanthemums or dainty crochet edging and insertion. Please tell me how to propagate palms. J. W. W."

In reply to the suggestions given in the first part of the letter I wish to say that the inference seems to me obvious that a letter addressed to Marion Harland, in care of the paper, is the correct method of directing communications. Again and again I have asked that stamps for reply and the clippings to which reference is made in the letters should be inclosed, but no matter how plainly all these facts are stated there always seem to be some who fail to grasp them and do not send letters right or omit postage and clippings. I would be much obliged for a suggestion which would prove infallible for impressing my readers with these statements. I trust that the writer may receive the plants she asks. So far as I know, palms are propagated from shoots or suckers that spring from the roots. Does any one know another and a better method?

After Blacking the Stove.

"After blacking the stove, soap your hands, use the coffee grounds, and see the effect. W. T. G."

I am obliged for this hint and regret I could not print the others sent, which referred to subjects not in the province of this column.

Magazines to Give Away.

"I have a year's magazines of three different kinds I would like to send to some one who would care for them. Would Mrs. W. Q. R. like to give me a little pleasure by bestowing that little canary bird on me? I am so lonely, and I dearly love pets. I would be glad to pay postage on the canary. I have little white rats to give away to some one who would like to have them. And if Mrs. W. Q. R. has little babies perhaps I could crochet something for her baby in exchange for the canary bird. I am sending you a delicious recipe for frozen rice. It is a nice dish which both children and grown people enjoy very much: Boil half a cup of rice in one quart of sweet milk until tender, but not broken; whip one cup of sweet thick cream, sweeten to taste with sugar, and flavor with vanilla; mix thoroughly with the rice. Pack them into a mold or a small bucket with a tight lid for two hours in cracked ice mixed with salt. When ready to serve take out of the tin; place on a cold flat dish and serve any kind of cookies or plain cake with it; or you may serve with it any kind of stewed fruit. A. S."

The address of the friend who had the canary to give away was sent at once. The recipe for the frozen rice is gratefully received.

Lost All in a Fire.

"This is my first attempt to write to the Corner, although I have read it for a good while and always wished that I could answer some of the many appeals. There was one which I particularly wished to answer from a woman living in the country who appreciated all nature's beauty but was lonely for a few pictures to make her little home bright. I had more pictures than I could possibly use at that time, but my mother was ill for eight or nine weeks after that and I simply neglected it. I am sorry to say I have no pictures now for the reason that we lost our house by fire a few weeks ago. I am going to ask the Cornerite who has the magazines for a year to send them to me. I would appreciate them greatly, as I lost all mine and miss the recipes and particularly the many pretty and interesting fancy work designs in them. It is a little discouraging to begin over again, as I had so much fancy work finished or nearly finished. Almost all I could offer the Corner at the present time is a great big watch dog, part Great Dane and part mastiff. He is not yet a year old, but he is large. If I could find a place for him where I was certain he would receive good care I would give him away. He needs lots of room.
"MRS. C. H. M."

I am sure we must all sympathize with this correspondent in the loss of her home and possessions. I wish she had given me the signature of the Cornerite who offered magazines, as it is impossible to identify her without it. Unless I am much mistaken, the account of the fire which robbed her of so much will call forth eager offers of reading matter, etc. Also, her offer of the dog is likely to meet with a prompt reply.

Copies of Recitations.

"I wish you could, without too much trouble, obtain for me the two recitations which were one time requested, 'The Face Upon the Floor' and 'The Women of Marblehead.' If you can send me either of these I will do any favor in my power. J. K."

Can some of our readers respond to this appeal? Usually there is no trouble in securing such verses.

Putting Up Ripe Olives.

"I have a good recipe for putting up ripe olives. Pick the olives with great care. They must not be bruised. Put them in water immediately so that they will not heat. Dissolve one pound of concentrated lye and add water sufficient to cover ten gallons of olives, first pouring off the water in which the olives were put previously. Set a cover on the olives so that they shall all be under the solution. Stir them occasionally without bruising them and taste them (after the first day) every two or three hours and when the bitter taste is nearly gone pour off the lye and replace it with fresh water. Change every day until there is no lye left in the olives; then salt to taste if for immediate use; if to be kept a considerable time make the brine strong enough nearly to bear up an egg. When wanted for use freshen the olives to taste. In the event that the bitter taste remains over thirty-six hours and the strength of the lye seems to be spent, pour it off and treat the olives in the same manner a second time with one-half the quantity of lye and when the bitter taste has gone pour off the lye the same as before, replacing it with water, changing this as often as you like. When you think the lye is all gone dip a piece of litmus paper into water from the bottom of the vessel; if the paper changes color add water as before until it gets to the stage when it will not change the color of the paper; then put in salt. Be sure that every olive is under the lye solution, water, and brine all the time. One olive out of the brine will spoil a barrel of olives. For salt use rock salt half ground. After the olives have been in the salt a few days look them over carefully to make sure there are no soft ones. We used up five gallons and they kept finely until the last one was gone. My first attempt at the Helping Hand! L. M. C."

If other attempts are as pratical and as clearly put as this a welcome is always sure this contributor. Her account of how to put up olives differs a little from those we have printed up to now and I hope instructions enough have been given to supply those who have asked information on preserving olives. I have received a cutting from a paper sent by some one in response to a query as to the kind of olives to be used for putting up. The friend who sends the article on keeping olives gives no signature, but I desire to express gratitude for the thoughtfulness which prompted the sending and my regret that space forbids me to reprint the article.

Substitute for Hot Water Bag.

"Here is a little help we have found useful, although it may be stale to you. When our water bag gave way and could not be repaired my aunt suggested using common glass bottles and we have been employng them entirely since in preference to the bag. They can be filled with boiling water if it is poured in gradually and they keep hot longer than the others. A flat bottle is preferable when one is sick. T. A. V. B."

A flannel cover makes the glass bottle even more of a comfort.

Wants Quilt Pieces.

"I am asking a favor of you in the way of getting the address of A. D., who has quilt pieces to give away. I wrote to two names you sent me, but for some reason they did not answer and I am most anxious to piece some comforters before next winter, as I have a family of children. I inclose a recipe for orange and rhubarb marmalade that we have found nice and not expensive. It is the best time to make it, as both fruits are plentiful now: Take equal parts of rhubarb and of oranges and prepare them as for cooking, slicing and seeding the oranges and cutting the rhubarb into inch lengths. Weigh them and allow three parts of sugar, or three-quarters of a pound of sugar to a pound of the fruit. Cook down until thick. This conserve will keep indefinitely. I have tried several recipes from Cornerites and found them good and so wish to do something in return. L. J."

The reason for this correspondent's failure to hear from the friends to whom she wrote about the quilt pieces probably was due to the fact that they had given their pieces away before the letters were received. This is the case with A. D. I am therefore printing the letter in the hope that it may attract the attention of some one else who has pieces to bestow. We are grateful for the recipe she sends.

From a Farm Woman.

"I have been a reader of the Corner for some time and I think it is doing a wonderful work. I live away out in the country on a farm. I get lonely at times and I have been almost an invalid for the last three or four years, not able to do any hard work. I have four girls, from the ages of 5 to 14, and one boy, aged 11. I would like some quilt pieces of silk or woolen suitable for patchwork so that I could teach my girls how to sew. I would gladly pay postage on anything sent. We have been trying to prove up on a farm, but have never realized any crops on the farm yet, and with my illness we have found it difficult to make ends meet. I have a number of post cards I would give in exchange or to some shut-ins. I was always one who loved to read and I enjoy reading the letters sent in by the Cornerites. If some one had some good books or magazines to spare from their libraries I would appreciate them and would be glad to get a good Bible. Here is a recipe for making sweet potato custard pie: Boil four pounds of sweet potatoes until soft; remove the peelings and mash; add enough sweet milk to make a good soft batter; put in three eggs, beaten light; one cup of sugar, lemon and salt to taste, and two tablespoons of flour. Bake in pie crusts as you would any ordinary pie. I hope some time to be of use to the Corner and I would be glad to have a few correspondents. MRS. L. C. G."

This Cornerite, I hope, may receive the patchwork pieces and the reading matter she craves. It is hard when circumstances are such that the literature we take as a matter of course cannot be purchased because of other more pressing demands. The recipe for pie sounds attractive.

Letters for the Lonely.

"I would like the names of a number of shut-ins or lonely people who would enjoy getting letters. I have plenty of time and like to write letters, so if any such would enjoy receiving them, am sure I could make them sufficiently interesting to relieve the monotony of their quiet lives. N. G."

Such requests as these seldom fail to receive prompt replies. I am sure there are shut-ins who would be eager to get the proffered letters. I shall look for applications for the address of N. G. and will ask that with these may come stamped and self-addressed envelope for reply.

Cushion Cover to Piece.

"I wonder if there is any one of your Cornerites, especially shut-ins, who would like to piece me a hexagon silk sofa cushion cover in exchange for silk or cotton pieces. I would give half of the pieces to them and I could also write letters sometimes to help cheer sick ones. Perhaps you can find some one who would like to do that to pass the time. I could give the size of pillow cover if any one wants to do it. J. C. M."

I hope there may be some one who can avail herself of this offer of exchange as well as of the letters of cheer.

Flower Seeds Wanted.

"In the dear Corner, in which I am so much interested, I see a request for English toffee. I take one from my English book, which must be good. I should be glad for any kinds of flower seeds or roots. Here is the recipe: One pound of powdered loaf sugar, one teacup of water, a quarter of a pound of butter, six drops of essence of lemon. Put the water and sugar in a pan; beat the butter to a cream. When the sugar is dissolved add the butter and keep stirring the mixture over the fire until it hardens when a little is tried. Just before the candy is done add the essence. Butter scotch is made from brown sugar instead of white, omitting the water, and flavoring with half an ounce of powdered ginger. It is made in the same manner as toffee. H. C."

I trust this recipe may be what was asked for and also that the seeds and roots may be supplied to Mrs. H. C. In writing for her address, a stamped and self-addressed envelope should be inclosed.

CROCHET THE BABY'S BIB

MOST embroiderers are familiar by this time with the little bib for baby to which is attached a beading band with ribbons run thru it for tying the small bib in place. Now here is the same bib idea developed in a filet crochet design. I know our readers will be delighted with it and hail it as something very new and practical for a gift. A word about this bib before we begin to talk about making it. It should be mounted over a lining, either the padded variety, a bit of heavy toweling, or best of all, over thin rubber or a dress shield, for the open meshes of the filet will not be much protection in themselves.

As the bib stands here, the old English lettering for the word "Baby" has necessitated a rather wider band than one would ordinarily care to make. One can substitute for this band a much narrower one, either without lettering or with the baby's initials done in plain block lettering, which can be confined within an eight-mesh limit. Whatever width the bib is made, the open meshes for the ribbon should be retained on both edges.

To proceed to the making, the band is made first. After it is completed the bib portion is attached directly in the center of the band. A different method of increasing the rows has been followed here than that to which we have been referring in other filet articles. This consists of putting two doubles in the last stitch at the end of each row and thus crowding five doubles into the first mesh instead of four, and in the beginning of each row, counting three chains for the turn as one double and inserting the other double at the foot of the chain. In other words, an extra mesh is gained on the end of each row by working in these extra doubles to serve as extra stitches for an extra mesh on the row to follow.

To decrease, one reverses the operation, skipping a stitch on the end of each row and decreasing the doubles.

After the bib is finished, the entire edge is treated to a very shallow scalloping of chain stitches. On the bib portion a chain of six is caught between every two meshes, while on the band the chain of three is caught between every mesh.

Narrow baby ribbon is run thru the meshes at top and bottom of the band, and around the neck. The little figure in the center may be omitted if preferred, or any other figure substituted. The figure in this bib is a very conventional dog, but baby will appreciate his curly tail even if its legs are stiff.

An experienced, or even an amateur, crocheter should have no trouble in following this design from the photograph; but if any of you have trouble with it, write to us, sending a stamped self-addressed envelope, and we will try to help you out of your difficulty.

Good Linen an Economy

IT is always difficult to make some people realize that it always pays in the end to buy good linen in the beginning if one is going to put a lot of handwork on the material. It is really impossible to do excellent embroidery, hemstitching, etc., on poor linen. The better the material the better the looks and durability of the handwork. When the threads of the linen are strong and round, the stitching will be clear and well defined; when the threads are angular, weak and uneven, the stitching cannot be artistic nor permanent.

The quality of the linen depends upon the manner in which it is prepared. The process of bleaching flax by chemicals is much cheaper and quicker than that of bleaching by exposure to the air. But the fibers are weakened by the bleaching. The grass-bleaching process is better since it does not impair the quality of the fibers. Grass-bleaching is more expensive, because it takes more time and requires more care, but the difference between the two is not more than one or two cents a yard for the embroidery linens.

There are many persons who do not know how to distinguish between the two qualities of linens. A microscopic examination of the two qualities shows the needle cutting thru the chemically-bleached linen leaves broken and ragged threads. A puncture of the needle in the grass-bleached linen shows that the linen simply separates the threads in passing between them. In one case the threads are bent and in the other the threads are broken. The fiber of the chemically-bleached linens are uneven, brittle and inferior; the fiber of the grass-bleached linens are practically unimpaired, so that when the needle is withdrawn and the cloth rubbed and pressed, the threads of the latter resume their normal position, and the cloth will be as good as ever.

A New Use for Old Hats

NOW that the vogue for basketry of all kinds is so strong, take this tip from a girl who always has a new stunt at her finger tips. She had been asked to assist as maid of honor to a friend who was better off in worldly goods than herself, and who was to have the prettiest kind of a wedding. She had resolved to make her own costume after the few suggestions which the bride-to-be would offer. Accordingly, when it came time for the hat to be trimmed she bought two horsehair plaques in light flesh pink. One she shaped into a hat over a wire frame, and the other—well, the other she converted into a swinging basket with ribbons and a few pleats, into which the florist was to arrange the flowers on the festive morn. This same use of a plaque so incited one of her girl friends that she colored an old white plaque that she had and turned it into a garden basket to wear with her new garden smock.

A man's straw hat is not romantic, but the crown from an old one may be given a coat of black paint and decorated with a few flower sprays of woolen bead embroidery, to serve as a bottom to a workbag of fancy silk.

Roped In

BABY can't kick his bedclothes off when they are as securely bound as the new bedclothes fastener will hold them. This is a gift suggestion for the new baby which is worth remembering. You will need two huge safety pins and two six-inch pieces of white elastic, about an inch wide. A loop of ribbon is sewed on to one end of the elastic, and thru its bow and knot is slipped the huge blanket pin. At the other end of the elastic two cords, strong, but not very thick, are sewed. There are two of these arrangements. They are applied thus: The clothes on each side of the bed near the head are pinned together securely by the pin, then the cords are tied to the sideboard of the bed or to the rods of the crib. For an especially obstreperous baby, two sets might be necessary.

SEW FOR THE CHILDREN

HAVE you noticed how much more interest women usually put into needlework intended for children? The maternal instinct makes itself felt even in this. If you have no children in your own family go out into the highways and byways and find some one to work for, but on no account let these suggestions on this page today go to waste.

Strange Doll Types

'TIS true that dolly types vary as much as the human race and are quite as interesting to their small owners as people are to each other. Some dolls are fit for any place or purpose, while others have a special vocation. The bathtub dolly gives perhaps the most joy and makes that otherwise irksome hour pass agreeably for both baby and mother. It is very simply made. A long sponge is used for the body. Get one to look as much like feet as possible. The head is formed of a rubber ball, which will look much more realistic if features are put on in oil paints. This head is attached to the body by means of a cage of twine, woven over the head and sewed into the sponge. This cage may cover the head or be used as a cap for the back, or in fact any silk or rubber cap may be fastened to the sponge. Dots may be put on in wool for buttons, and if the sponge is large it may be cut in the form of arms and legs.

The wild man of Borneo is much appreciated by the youngsters. He has a body made of a black stocking, stuffed with bran or rags. Around the waist is a frill of feathers of varied colors, held in at the waist with a band of red silk ribbon. His hair is very wild, for it stands on end and is made of black wool. His features are also wild and are either painted on or worked in wool or silk, with a wide and grinning mouth and white eyeballs to bring out the eyes on the black face. In the ears are hung huge brass rings.

The Turkish towel doll is a prime favorite, and easy enough to make. An old Turkish towel will do as well as new for material, especially if dolly is intended for the daily swim. In that case the body, made on a simple pattern with head, legs and arms in the one piece, may be filled with cork to help it float. Otherwise, sawdust or rags will do. On the towel-head is a towel-cap, made by using a fold of the material and tacking it in place neatly where the neck joins the body. Eyes, nose and mouth are simply round dots, while red dots are buttons on the waist. An extra frill around the waist forms the skirt, and both the buttons and the baby ribbon tied about the neck are of one color, pink for the girl babies and blue for the boys.

Here's for Luck!

EVERYBODY believes, more or less, in his luck, and here is something to strengthen that faith. Who wouldn't like to have a lucky-dog penwiper?

Of course, such an article, intended for use as well as good fortune, must have its quota of circular-cut chamois leaves, surmounted by a piece of felt. The object that crowns the penwiper is the main attraction. There is a little china dog, straight from the orient, as his markings and general peculiarities show. He is safely chained to the spot by a colored cord weighted with a Chinese coin. There's no chance for the lucky dog to escape you.

Baby's Coathanger

EVERYTHING possible is being done to encourage the child to be neat. In an up-to-date needlework shop there is offered the dearest little coathanger, over which baby's coat or its frocks can be hung if necessary. And then to protect the shoulders of the garments from being covered with dust there is a cover all of white muslin. On this, dainty flowers and the word "Baby" are embroidered. The edge is finished with valenciennes lace. A set of this sort would be a novel gift for some little baby.

Other coathangers that are displayed without the cover-all are prettily hand-painted.

Crocheted Bands

THE craze for crocheting has made women appreciative of any new idea that is given them. One that is sure to appeal to the majority of workers is that of using a band of filet crochet to join the front and back of a round or oval pillow. The edges of the top and back are first bound with bias binding, and to this the crochet band is attached.

One woman who started out to make wide insertion for curtains suddenly changed her mind about the matter. But the insertion already crocheted was not thrown away. It was wisely used to trim a linen frock. Two strips were used down either side of the skirt front. At an appropriate point the ends were turned up to form little pockets. The effect was very unusual.

Embroidered Hats

NOT for many years have embroidered hats been in favor for women. Fortunately, the revival of them has brought about more artistic touches of handwork. Among the most effective hats are those of linen embroidered in worsted materials. It is possible to apply almost any design to a hat by tracing it first to a piece of paper, tacking the paper to the hat and then embroidering thru the paper and material. When the work is finished the paper can be very easily torn away. Another method is to embroider a design—it might be a bird, a flower or a geometrical motif—on a square or oval of material and then applique the patch to the crown or brim of the hat.

Stenciled designs are also in favor on hats. The work sounds out of the question to one who has never done it; but by carefully following rules one cannot go wrong. The necessary requisites are tubes of paint, stencil brushes, a good stencil design and patience. Always remember to wipe off the brush after every use so that it will not cause the paint to run. It is necessary to have a special brush for every color.

The floppy style of hat is the desirable one for the handwork. Most attractive ones are made with tam-o'-shanter crowns and broad brims that fairly ripple. Frequently the brims are bound with tape, velvet or ribbon to carry out a special color scheme.

An Extra Pretty Edge

WHEN you have finished buttonholing the scallops around a centerpiece or bit of lingerie you will find that this process will add wonders to the appearance of the edge. It is merely a series of tiny buttonholed loops done in the edge of the large buttonholing before the linen is cut away.

The needle is inserted in the buttonholing, then is drawn thru the buttonholing without catching the linen about five stitches further on. This loop is then filled with loose buttonhole stitches and the needle slipped thru the top buttonholing to make the next loop. It gives the appearance of picoting but is done with the embroidery needle instead of the crochet. It is particularly effective when done with a contrasting color.

What Sewers Have Found Out

THAT hemstitching will be neater if the corners, where there are corners, are done first and the sides afterward, for the work will not come out unevenly at the corners, but can be distributed along the straight hems.

That a bit of cardboard slipped between the facing where hooks and eyes are to be sewed on will prevent the stitches from showing thru on the right side.

That tatting makes an excellent substitute for beading or hemstitching on hems and seams.

That a woman's dress shield is a very good foundation for a baby's bib of fine material. A pocket the shape of the shield may be sewed on the wrong side, and the shield removed at laundry time.

That the fronts of discarded embroidered blouses may be utilized for baby's caps, boudoir caps, the center of a boudoir or baby's pillow or other dainty objects.

That when trying to crochet a picot edge on a stiff material it will help to first run an edge of buttonhole stitches with needle and thread and into these catch the crochet hook.

That a magnet in the sewing-machine drawer or workbasket will do wonders toward finding lost needles and picking up pins.

That a safety pin clasped thru the last crochet loop will prevent raveling of the work.

That a pocket on work aprons is much more satisfactory when placed on the left side. It is not so apt to get torn, as the housewife usually stands with her right side nearest her work.

Work for the Children

CHILDREN are not half so unmanageable as some persons are inclined to think. Keep them busy and they won't get into mischief, but let the work or play at which you put them be of a kind that is sure to win their interest.

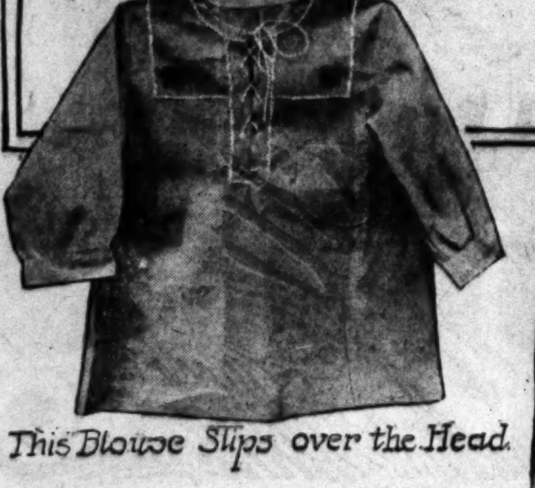
When the youngsters tire of playing, provide them with scrap books, pictures, large needles and brilliant yarn. A tube of paste will also be necessary. With your supervision let them paste the pictures artistically in the books and then let them finish each page of the books with buttonhole stitches done with the yarn. The touch of color will add to the cheerfulness of the book. In fact, before the work of making the scrapbook is started, one can keep the children occupied with cutting out pretty pictures from magazines, advertisements, etc.

Baby's Pillow

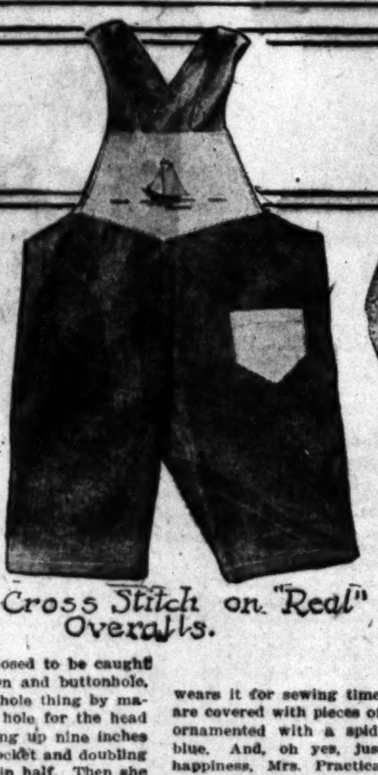
SINCE every one loves a baby, it is quite appropriate to let it rest its little head on a heart-shaped pillow. The shape will be enough to signify to the owner that the article is intended as a love gift, but its value can be increased by the addition of hand embroidery.

A very dainty pillow seen in an exclusive shop was of the shape before mentioned. About two inches in from the edge half-inch eyelets were made. Thru these blue ribbon was run and tied in a bow at the top of the heart. Sprays of flowers were embroidered over the pillow top, but the most charming decorations of all were crescent-shaped pieces of lace buttonholed into position. This would be a splendid way in which to make use of left-over pieces of lace. Get out your scrapbox; you may have in it enough material to make the pillow for the baby, or, if there is no baby, make the pillow for your boudoir.

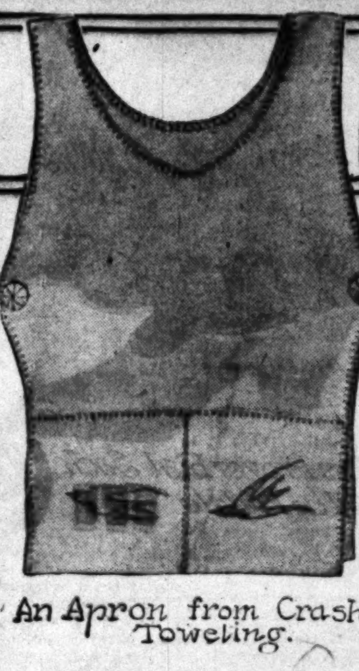
HANDWORK ON KIDDIES' PLAY CLOTHES



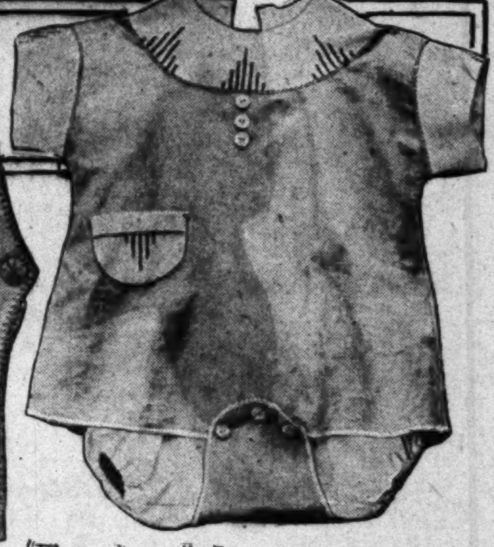
This Blouse Slips over the Head.



Cross Stitch on "Real" Overalls.



An Apron from Crash Toweling.



"Envelope" Jumper Suit.

"POOH!" says Mrs. Practical Mother; "the idea of wasting good hours of time to put handwork on play clothes which never go any further than the sand pile or the back yard."

But you plead with Mrs. Practical Mother that the handwork is so very, very teeny, and it makes the little play clothes such heaps more attractive and big sister promises to help, and Junior and Betty will be so careful of them—and Mrs. Practical Mother's lips twitch, and pretty soon she smiles and out comes the embroidery bag.

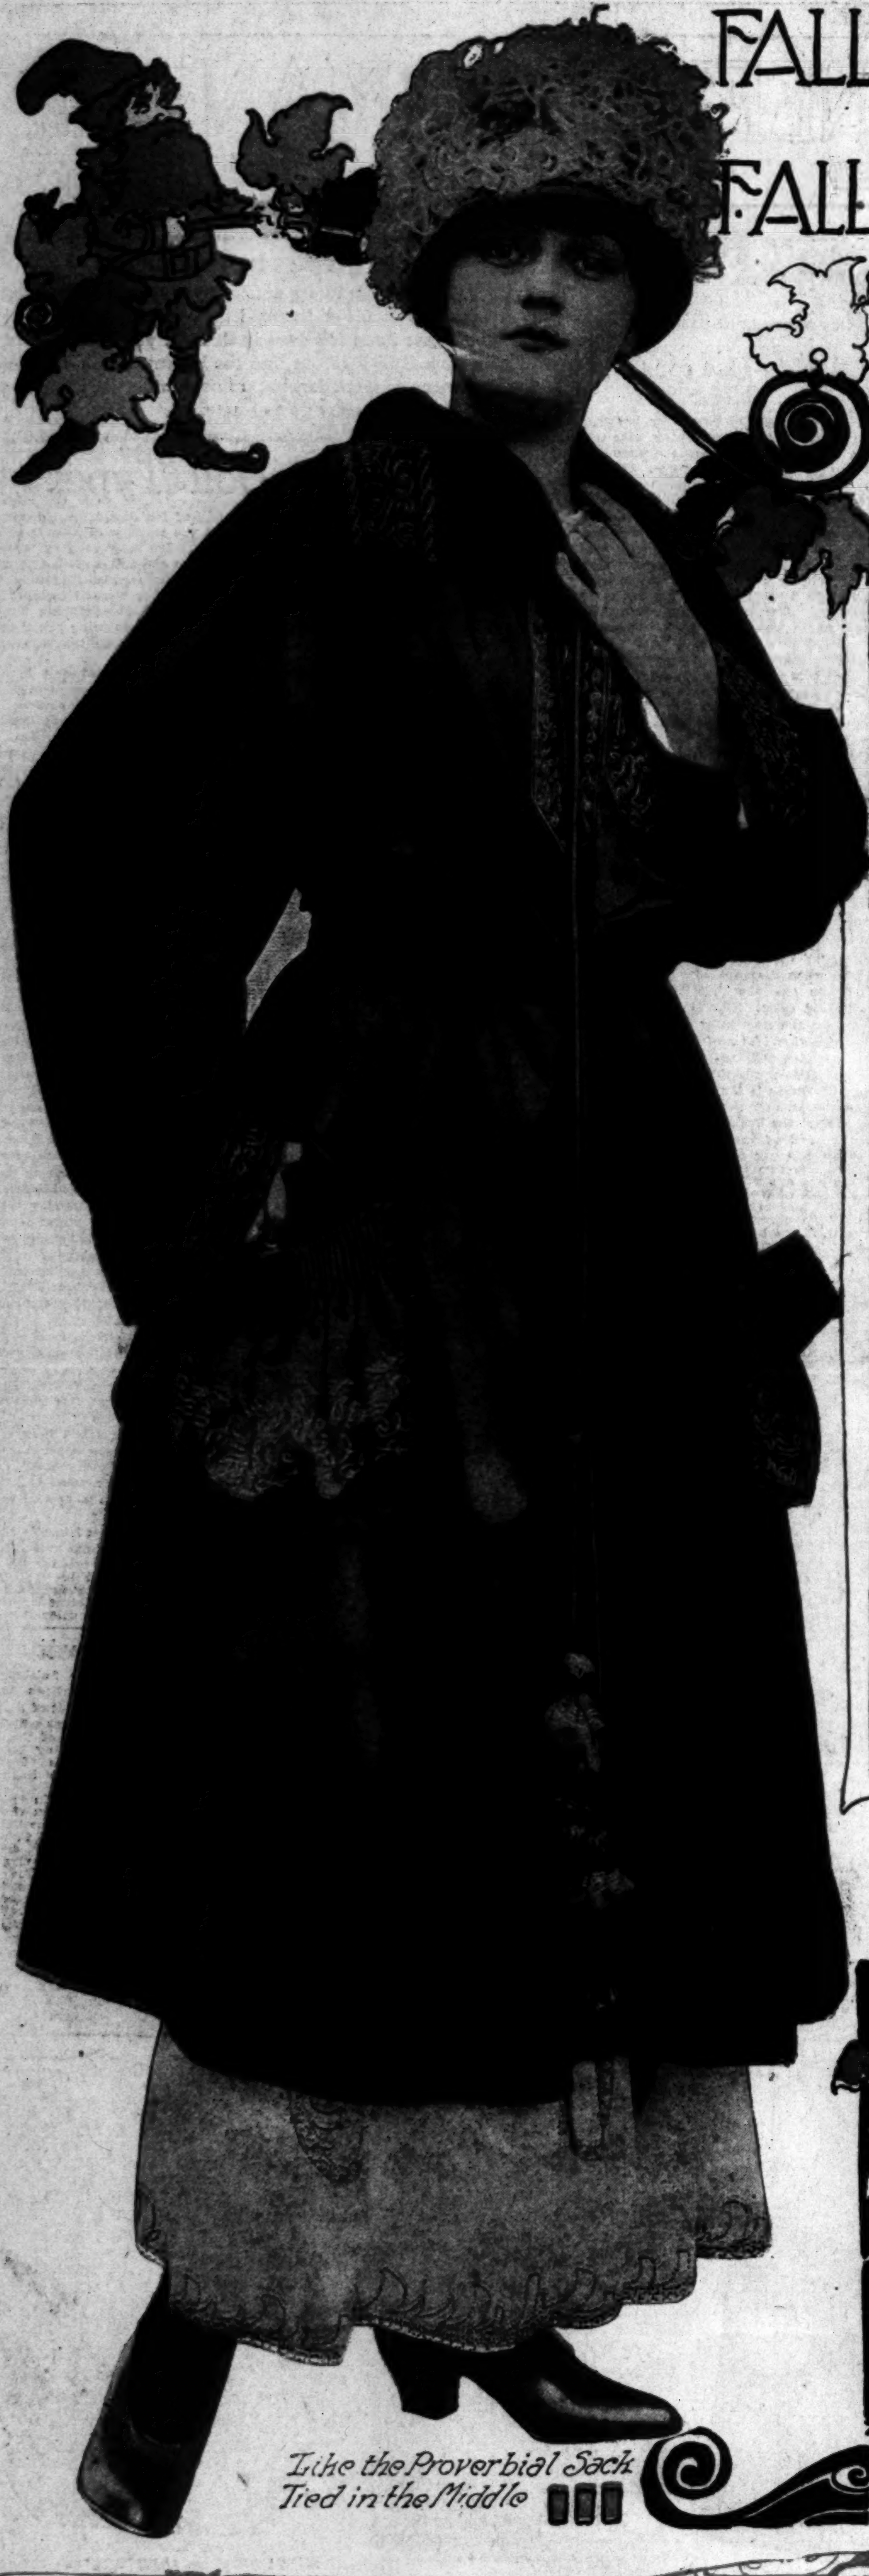
First of all she cuts a length—oh, quite a short one, not over a yard and a half long—of sixteen-inch crash toweling and with sister's direction she makes an apron for Betty out of it just like sister's fudge apron. She trims off the ends to make them narrower than the sides, which are supposed to be caught together with a button and buttonhole. Then she hems the whole thing by machine and cuts out a hole for the head to go thru, first turning up nine inches on the front for the pocket and doubling the rest of the apron in half. Then she makes a pretty crochet edge with some light blue cotton, catching the sides of the pocket to the apron as she crochets. She can make just as pretty an edge with her embroidery needle, making sort of a wide buttonholing with picots between. The pocket she then featherstitches into two divisions so that dolly's patches will not get mixed with her finished clothes when the little girl wears it for sewing time. The buttons are covered with pieces of the crash and ornamented with a spiderweb of the blue. And, oh yes, just out of pure happiness, Mrs. Practical Mother embroiders two bluebirds on the pockets.

Junior has some very respectable-looking bloomers which he could wear with separate blouses. Little French boys wear these, sister says, so mother makes Junior a straight overblouse which slips over the head and hangs straight outside the bloomers. Then because Junior is such a very little boy mother adds some featherstitching like he had on his baby clothes. The blouse is a light-green linen and the stitching white. She works eyelets for the white cord to lace thru and indulges in a touch of cubist embroidery in the corners of the simulated yoke. The embroidery has plenty of red, blue and yellow in it and Junior likes that; also the pocket.

Junior has been wanting overalls for so long that mother decides to give them to him. She makes them out of blue chambray and—bright idea—makes a tiny yoke, as it were, of white and puts on it a cross-stitch design of a ship which she has been dying to use for some time. Junior can wear this with or without a blouse all summer.

After all this mother was so delighted with her work that she resolved to make a pair of jumpers for the little girl next door who had no mother to make them for her. So she made bloomers of white cotton rep and topped them with a regular envelope jumper of pink chambray. She filled in the neck and armholes with the rep, featherstitching the two together, and had the edges picoted. A pocket of the rep was also featherstitched and three pearl buttons were sewed on with pink cotton to play "Rich man, poor man, beggar man" with. Don't you wish you were this little girl, or Junior, or Betty?

FALL COATS TIGHT OR FALL COATS LOOSE



FASHION authorities have yielded to a third-degree ordeal and have dropped two hints, one being that you may have your fall coat tight, madame, and the other that you may have it loose. For pure contradiction Fashion has the oracle of Delphi beat a mile. But there is one fact which seems to bring these two hints into some sort of pleasant relations, and that is that the first coats will be silk. But we have been wearing silk coats all summer, you object. Ah, but note the difference! These silk coats are made on exactly the lines that cloth coats will follow; no frills or furbelows or velvet ribbon trimmings about these.

If you are the type of woman who wishes to be molded into her coat rather than folded into it, you will want just such a one as the heavy green satin with its many gores, which bring a tight fit to the figure as far as the waist line but give a becoming flare at the bottom. Marabou trims it, but serves only as a substitute for the fox fur which will inevitably follow.

Concealing rather than revealing lines characterize the other coat, which is a heavy faille. All silks, by the way, intended for coats are much heavier than one has been used to seeing. This coat is in two parts, a full blouse and a fuller skirt, which is shirred with several rows of cording at the natural waist line. The embroidery on the shirred pockets, the wide sailor collar and curiously banded cuffs, also down the front of the coat and on the balls of the cord, is silver done by machine in an oriental design.
